Baby Swings For many parents, a baby swing is a must have in their house. As they imitate the rhythmic rocking motion of the womb and work magic on your LO. Let us put it this way, if you can afford it, the investment will pay for itself many times over. Be it relax, take care of other things in your house knowing that your baby is in a safe place. With so many choices available out there choosing a baby swing or can be a time-consuming task. And like many other moms and dads will call it a lifesaver too. It has all the essentials you need: Perfect for a small house or an apartment. The toy bar is pretty basic but should hold the attention of your LO. The hippo just hangs there out of reach; babies stare at it for a while, but after some time they might find it boring. The seat position is perfect for young babies as it has deep sides and stops baby slipping sideways. The wide base makes this swing very sturdy. It locks into place which makes it much easier to get a baby in and out. The lock function also easily converts it from swing to stationary seat which is perfect for feeding. To make it softer and more comfortable parents add a fleece blanket. It comes with 5 point safety harness. And as you can imagine babies love it. There is also a calming vibration option which was very helpful to put your baby to sleep. You can have the swing and vibrate ON at the same time or just one of them. It has built-in music, 6 songs, and sounds. The tunes are lovely and soothing. For parents, the music is a hit or miss. Which is normal when it comes to baby gears. Space saver and portable: It has easy grips on the sides to pick it up and move if needed from room to room. Compact saves space design. You can wash the plastic parts with a washcloth. You will need 4 C batteries for the swing function and 1 D for the vibrate. Batteries typically last from a few days to weeks depending on the type of battery and use. And how hard it has to work. The D battery for the vibrate goes in a different compartment. And it will still work for the swing and music. Its only power source is batteries; it does not have an AC adaptor to plug it into a wall. While it has a few cons like, basic toy bar, the seat could have a better padding and no AC adaptor I must say that this a great basic multi-purpose swing and worth the money. The vast majority of parents are extremely happy with it. Not cheaply made and very durable. All around a good buy. Perfect for someone on a small budget. Available in 3 different styles. Check Current Price on Amazon. Ideal for small rooms too! This is a great alternative to traditional baby swings and provides a safe place to put your baby when mom or dad has to do other things. Comfy, relaxing and very entertaining. Lovely design and beautiful neutral colors. It has plenty of options. The seat has 2 different reclining positions and 6 different swing speeds, music and a bar above with plush toys to keep your baby entertained. Settings are easily adjustable. Seat pad and the little animals are washable. Portable and folds easily. Soft and comfortable Seat: It has 2 seating positions. Nearly fully reclined recline and upright. The upright position is great when you start to feed solids and to give them a different outlook as they grow and start to focus and explore the environment surrounding them. Until your baby is 3-month-old, only use the seat in full recline. When in full recline, the seat lays back with a slight incline which is perfect for infants. The swing works very well from an infant to months old providing it is used correctly. The chair is soft, comfy and well padded including the head rest. The adjustable restraining straps will keep your baby secure at all times. You can always add more toys if needed. The seat does NOT vibrate. The swing movement is smooth and has a good range. It has 6 easy to adjust speed controls to suit your baby and their mood. From gentle to more vigorous. There is an auto shut-off feature. You can set the timer for how long the swing should go for 15, 30 or 45 minutes. If you do not select a timer setting the swing will auto-shutoff after 60 minutes. The music has auto-shutoff after 15 minutes. It only swings back and front. It does not swing side to side. Portable and folds flat: This swing is perfect for small spaces and folds flat when not in use or for travel. Suitable from birth to max 20 lbs which is around months. Once your baby can sit up unsupported and move around you should stop using it. To get maximum use out of it, we recommend getting it at or before birth. Well made and should last for several children. The seat pad and head support are machine washable. It comes with clear instructions so the assembly is straightforward. You will need a screwdriver. You can still swing it manually if the battery is dead. It does not support an AC adapter. Overall a great baby swing, it has all the essentials needed for a good swing. It is a short period of time, but it will really pay for itself many times over regarding freeing you up to have hands free moments to sit down and have a cup of coffee or to do something around the house knowing that your LO is safe and entertained. Great price for something that is literally life changing without breaking the bank. They are functional, comfortable and come in different styles to choose from. A quick note regarding Fisher-Price swings: Although the vast majority of customers are very happy with them, some customers have reported issues with the motor and loud clicking noises. All you need to do is stop it and re-start or hit reset and it will work well again. Also, some older models require a push to get it going. Stop it in the center and let go and the swing should work well again. Clicking noises or popping sounds. Most of the clicking sounds are caused by the unit not being correctly assembled or because the plastic piece that holds the canopy, is not in the right place. If you see the plastic that holds the net in the right place pulled down all you need to do is put it back into place. Or if you do not have it put in the slots tightly it can interfere with the spinning and make clicking noises. Also in some models, the motor is loud when it starts. But after the swing and motor sync, and quiets down. Assembly is pretty straightforward and should take about 45 min. However there are around 20 or so steps depending on a model , so if you do buy one of them, please give yourself some time to assemble it correctly so you and your baby can fully enjoy it. If the motor indeed does not work properly or the clicking noise is caused by a mechanical failure, rest assured that Fisher-Price will take good care of you. Just contact them, and if needed, they will replace the motor ASAP at no charge, or do what needs to be done to make things right for you.

The aesthetic design and the many musical and swing features soothe your baby and make this swing a top choice for many parents. The swiveling seat rotates, so your baby can enjoy a gentle side to side rocking motion or front to back motion swing in different speed ranges. This cradle swing comes with amazing sound tracks and sound effects, as well as songs. The songs are entertaining musical tracks designed specially to provide your child with a combination of lullabies to lull your baby to sleep. These amazing toys move freely and gently without human aid to pamper and fascinate the baby. This cradle swing has simply beautiful fabric design. The assembly is quite easy and construction is very sturdy. Go to top Baby Swing Buying Guide baby swings and the things that you need to consider when buying one. This guide will provide information about the main components of a baby swing, types of swings you can decide on, and the main features to look for in buying a baby swing. Go to top Baby Swing Features Although various baby swings are available on the market these days, there are components that are generally present in all of them. First, a swing is designed to secure the baby as a car seat belt harnesses the driver or the passenger. It has a cloth or padding where the baby can be laid. It also provides a swinging movement that can calm a fussy baby. A baby swing is designed for the baby to comfortably rest or even take a nap on. Most modern swings today come with special features like different swinging directions, music options and hanging toys to entertain the baby. Go to top Types of Baby Swings Choosing which baby swing to buy can pose some difficulty especially to first-time parents. In addition to that, you need to consider the cost of the swing and the space that it occupies in your home. If you do not have the slightest knowledge of what type of baby swing would be best for your baby and your home, then here is the list of different types of swings and the advantages of each. Full-Size Baby Swings This type of baby swing is typically large and can accommodate a weight of up to 25 pounds. Full-size swings are elevated off the ground, comfortable, offer multiple swinging directions, and provide different music options. Some swings of this type come with a canopy and some toys to entertain the baby. It is best for parents who want to leave their children in one area while working or doing some chores. Furthermore, you can choose from battery operated full swings and electric swings. Although this full-size baby swing provides enough comfort and offers most features worth your money, this type can be costly and can take up space in your home. Travel Baby Swings Portable, Foldable, and Convenient are the best features of this type of baby swing. A travel baby swing is a convenience that you can bring wherever you and your baby goes. It is lightweight, foldable, and obviously can be moved from one place to another. Travel swings are also lower to the ground and are affordable. While a full-size swing offers a wide range of directions, music, and speed options, a travel swing can only offer front-back movement and no music at all. However, the best part about it is it does not require too much space in your house; plus you can soothe your baby in the most economical way. Baby Swing Bouncers Although bouncers do not really swing, it is still a type of baby swing. A bouncer is a simple but also effective option to soothe babies. The traditional bouncer swing has a vibration feature, music options and toys just like other swings have. It provides rocking movements that help babies to calm and sleep soundly. Bouncers can be economical or pricey depending on the features it offers. Go to top Factors to Consider Before Buying a Baby Swing After knowing the different types of swings you can choose from, it is finally time that you know what are the factors that you need to consider in buying. Regardless of the type of baby swing you opt to buy, these factors or features should be carefully assessed. Baby Swing Safety In looking for a perfect baby swing, safety should be on the top of your priority list. Choose a baby swing that provides a five-point harness instead of three-point harness. Furthermore, it is also not safe to buy an upright baby swing for your newborn as it can cause head injuries. Reclining swings are applicable to older infants that can hold their heads up without any assistance. Baby Swing Comfort Go for a swing that has ample padding on it. There are swings also that have pillows that can be taken out if there is a need for more space for the baby. There are swings that have multiple rocking motions in different speeds that can soothe your baby. Moreover, some swings also provide music to lull the baby to sleep and some toys to keep the baby entertained. Baby Swing Power Source Different swings that are battery-operated are available on the market today. These battery-operated swings can be rechargeable while others come with AC adapters for more convenient use. If you opt for a battery-operated swing, always make sure to buy a model that uses batteries that can be used for a longer time. Baby Swing Durability A wide range of beautifully designed baby swings are available today; each claims to provide comfort for your baby. However, you also need to consider the durability of the material you are about to buy. Swings made out of poor materials are not just going to waste your money but can also compromise the safety of your baby. Therefore, choose a swing that is sturdy and is made of good materials. Always search the internet for manufacturers that use high quality materials for their products. Baby Swing Versatility You may want to choose a baby swing that can be moved from one point in your house to another. There are swings that are portable and are easy to fold, so buying one is not difficult. In addition, a swing that has different seat adjustment options will allow you to position your baby in either upright or recline. Best Place to Buy a Baby Swing? Places where you can buy a baby swing are not that difficult to find nowadays. You can go to your nearest shopping mall to buy one or you can opt for online stores that offer different types of swings for your baby. Amazon is a great place and we link to the best products on Amazon directly. Buying a baby swing is not as easy as it seems. Although you might be overwhelmed with the variety of products on the market, always consider the important factors when buying one. The durability of the materials, ease of use, and the comfort it can give to your baby are very important. Moreover, the most important consideration is the safety that comes along with the product. It pays off to be cautious in buying a baby swing. After all, it is a real lifesaver whenever your little one gets fussy at times.

Oct 6, Bassinet Reviews and Buying Guide: Parents have a lot of things to get ready in their house when they are expecting a new baby. Perhaps the biggest thing to take care of is where the baby will actually be sleeping during the first few months after they are born. Some parents choose to put their newborns into a crib right away, but many go with a smaller bassinet that sits next to their beds. A bassinet is perfect, although they are not an essential piece of baby furniture. Other baby beds similar to bassinets are cradles, co-sleepers, and moses baskets. Each is slightly different in design, but most perform the same function. We put our first child into a crib that was in our master bedroom, but when our 2nd child came along we decided to go with a bassinet. Bassinets and cradles are the most common types of infant beds and they are really meant to be temporary until the baby is big enough to be in a larger crib. A bassinet is more stationary, while a cradle might have a rocking feature to it. However, you may find a baby bassinet that has a gentle vibrate mode which helps sooth the baby to sleep. Both are for infants from birth to 4 to 6 months of age. Look for a bassinet with solid construction and a sturdy base. Bassinets often include things like a half-canopy that is removable, musical mobiles, and wheels so you can move it from room to room if you wish. Cradles are small like bassinets but usually have the ability to rock back and forth since the base has curved wood. They tend to be heavier than bassinets and thus harder to move around. A bedside sleeper is perhaps the most convenient baby bed for a mother who is nursing her newborn. The cosleeper, as they are called, attach to the main bed so the parents have quick access to the child in the night. All these options make for some confusion, but we advise you to go to your local Babys R Us or similar kids furniture store and check out the designs and varieties. As for safety with infant beds and bedding, there are lots of things to consider. When it comes to bassinet mattresses, make sure you fit no more than 2 fingers between the side of the cradle and the mattress. Consumer Reports has an excellent article online about baby beds and safety guidelines which you should read before buying anything, you can find it HERE. If you are looking for reviews on bassinets, you can find some informative consumer feedback at Amazon. You can browse the top selling baby bassinets here. This wooden bassinet has it all with a storage area below the bassinet for bottles, diapers, etc. It will play 5 songs, 5 sounds, vibrate, and it even includes a nice nightlight. The canopy covers about half way over the bassinet to keep out excess light. The wheels make it easy to move around rooms and they are able to be locked in position for safety. Some parents say the vibration mode is a touch noisy and the sounds are a little morphed. For anyone wanting a more traditional wicker bassinet, we found a very basic one online at Ababy. Features include locking casters, storage tray down below, and it even converts to a rocking position. Cradles for babies have always represented such an old fashioned idea for me. If you go to Ababy. There is some assembly required and it does include the mattress. The reviews are a bit mixed on the Fisher Price bassinet, but it still remains a top seller. Some parents are aware that a bassinet is only used for about 4 months and prefer not to waste money on an expensive model when they can just buy a reasonable "moses basket" as they are called. The top seller of moses baskets is probably a company called Badger Basket which has their products available in stores like Walmart. The baskets are easy to travel with and very portable. Just carry them by the handles that are woven into the sides. Amazon carries a nice selection - view the top rated moses baskets as ranked by owners here. Graco 3 in 1 Bassinet: It was actually a bedside sleeper, bassinet and changing table all in one. I did find some of the Graco bassinets on Craigslist that were selling at a huge discount compared to the brand new products. One of the closest products I could find that are similar to the 3 in 1 bassinet was on Amazon. There are over reviews online for this Graco bassinet and playard combination. The CoSleeper fits beds that are 22" to 24" high and it converts into a changing table or play yard. Some owners do mention that it has too many parts and pieces and putting it together is "cumbersome". We would say that if you are handy with assembling things, then this bedside sleeper is for you.

Thursday, March 20, - 4: Here, we seek to guide industries in transitioning their products and manufacturing to participate and profit in a new industrial revolution. C2C then certifies these products at one of five award levels – Basic, Bronze, Silver, Gold or Platinum – depending on how well the product addresses material health, material reuse, renewable energy use, water stewardship and social fairness. We were inspired by what we heard, and have shared some of their stories below. A fabric that helps strawberries grow, with production methods that clean water There is more concern lately about fashion and its impact on human health, the environment and workers. Susan Lyons of the New York-based design firm Designtex was ahead of the curve. In , she decided to develop a collection of ecological fabrics. At that time, no one knew exactly what a "green" fabric should be. A partnership then emerged among Designtex; William McDonough and his colleague, Michael Braungart; and the Swiss textile mill Rohner to develop upholstery with remnants that would not be considered hazardous waste. Braungart analyzed more than 8, chemical formulations commonly used in textile production, then selected a mere 38 that he deemed safe for human and environmental health. These were the dyes and process chemicals allowed to be used in the production of Climatex upholstery. By producing new fabrics designed to decompose safely, the mill saved scraps and turned them into felt, avoiding costly disposal fees. Local strawberry farmers used this felt as ground cover for their crops. Designtex has expanded its Climatex offering to some 20 styles and Climatex was awarded Gold level C2C certification. A compostable diaper meant to benefit babies and the planet According to gDiapers, other "eco" diapers have compostable parts or use natural dyes, but still contain polypropylene or polyethylene plastic. These plastics persist in the environment long after disposal, with no ability to break down and rejoin the ecological cycle. The company says it took eight years in business and "some honest reckoning" to affirm its goal of eliminating plastics from its diaper inserts. They fit into colorful, reusable gPants to make a system that is part disposable, part reusable. The wet disposable inserts are meant to break down within home compost in three months. The product is rated C2C Silver. He imagined designing a new kind of bottle, with a reusable upper bottle attached to a replaceable concentrate refill pod. The intent of this radical design? To usher in a new era of "easy to mix with water" cleaning concentrates that are affordable, convenient and dramatically less wasteful. According to Replenish, "The single-use mindset costs consumers hundreds of millions of dollars in wasted energy and plastic spent on transporting and packaging water that could easily be added at home instead of in the factory. To create the Replenish Refillable Bottle System, Foster worked with experts to develop a new manufacturing approach and to find materials durable enough for many cycles of reuse. The strategy was successful and Replenish announced its award of C2C gold certification in Beautiful countertops made with safe pigments IceStone says it has been a leading manufacturer of sustainable durable surfaces since , with products made of percent recycled glass, Portland cement and non-toxic pigments and received C2C Silver certification in It worked with pigment suppliers to find inorganic options that would create a similar hue and color. In , IceStone installed a large-capacity water recycling system in its facility, which it says has saved several million gallons of fresh water each year.
