Video created by University of Geneva for the course "Children's Human Rights - An Interdisciplinary Introduction". The field of Juvenile Justice (JJ) or of systems of Justice specialized for children in conflict with the law, is the field of.

He also warned them of the danger of neglecting to watch their thoughts, words, and deeds. Suggestions for Teaching Mosiah 4: He knows he should repent but worries that repentance might be too difficult. He wonders if repenting of his sins is really worth the effort. What counsel would you give this young man? Ask students to read Mosiah 4: Invite a few students to report the phrases they find. It refers to our physical appetites rather than our spiritual desire to draw nearer to the Lord. According to Mosiah 4: Invite a student to read Mosiah 4: Ask the class to follow along, looking for the blessings that came to the Nephites because they repented. In your own words, what principle can we learn from Mosiah 4: One possible answer is that as we exercise faith in Jesus Christ and sincerely repent, we can be filled with joy, receive a remission of our sins, and have peace of conscience. You may want to invite students to consider marking key words and phrases in Mosiah 4: Why do you think it is important that we exercise faith in Jesus Christ as we seek forgiveness for our sins? What are some ways we can exercise faith in Him? How could you use this principle to help the young man in the scenario understand that repentance is worth the effort? Testify that we can have peace and joy as we exercise our faith in Jesus Christ and repent of our sins. Ask several students to take turns reading aloud from Mosiah 4: Ask the class to look for phrases that describe people who receive salvation. You may want to invite students to consider marking these phrases. What phrases did you find that describe people who receive salvation? Testify that repentance and obedience require much work and effort on our part. However, no matter how hard we have to work, repentance is worth the effort. You may want to suggest that students mark doctrinal mastery passages in a distinctive way so they can locate them easily. Ask the class to follow along and look for additional truths King Benjamin taught about faith and repentance. Invite students to consider marking any words or phrases that stand out to them. You may want to ask a few students to tell the class what they marked and why. Students may identify a variety of principles, but be sure to emphasize that God created all things and has all power and wisdom. How might knowing that God created all things and has all power and wisdom help motivate you to repent? Why do you think King Benjamin might have taught his people about the importance of repentance immediately after they repented? Write retain a remission of our sins on the board. Point out that once we receive a remission of our sins, it takes effort to retain, or keep, that clean and pure state. Copy the following chart on the board: What we must do Invite a student to read Mosiah 4: Ask the class to follow along, looking for what we must do to retain a remission of our sins. Invite students to report what they find. Answers may include that we need to remember the greatness of God, humble ourselves, pray daily, and stand steadfastly in the faith. You may need to explain that to remember our own nothingness can refer to recognizing our ongoing need for the Atonement of Jesus Christ. Invite a student to list these responses in the right column of the chart on the board. Help students use the chart to identify a principle in these verses by writing If above the left column and then above the right column. Invite students to compose an if-then statement using the responses listed on the board. Students should state a principle similar to the following: How might humbling ourselves help us grow in knowledge? How has praying daily helped you retain a remission of your sins? How can worthily partaking of the sacrament help us to humble ourselves and retain a remission of our sins? Invite students to look again at the list of things we must do. Ask them to ponder which of these things they can improve on, and invite them to write in their class notebooks or study journals what they will do to improve. Explain that Mosiah 4: Divide the class into three groups. Ask the first group to search Mosiah 4: Invite students to read their assigned verse or verses individually and look for attitudes and qualities that King Benjamin described in those who seek to retain a remission of their sins. After sufficient time, invite students to report what they have found. As they do so, help students understand what they are learning by asking one or both of the following questions as each attitude or quality is mentioned: Why do you think this attitude or quality is important to retaining a remission of our sins? When have you seen examples of this attitude or quality? Organize students in pairs. Invite each pair to take turns reading aloud from Mosiah 4: After students have had time to read the verses, invite them to discuss their favorite phrases from these verses with their partners. Invite students to read Mosiah 4: Invite students to report to the class what they find. Discuss their comments and questions as time permits. Ask the class to follow along, looking for what might cause us to perish. If we are not careful about our thoughts, words, and deeds and do not keep the commandments or continue in the faith of Jesus Christ throughout our lives, we will perish. What is the relationship between our thoughts, words, and deeds? What can we do to watch ourselves? Scott ‐ of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles encouraged students to write down impressions they receive: Consider giving students a few minutes to write about how they will apply the principles in Mosiah 4: Supplemental Teaching Ideas Mosiah 4: Caring for those in need‐ an attribute of disciples of Jesus Christ Rather than inviting students to read Mosiah 4: Invite several students to take turns reading aloud from Mosiah 4: Ask the class to follow along, looking for what King Benjamin taught about caring for the poor. According to King Benjamin, how are we all beggars? Why do you think King Benjamin might have taught his people so much about caring for the poor as part of teaching them about how to retain a remission of their sins? Help students identify the following principle: Caring for the poor and needy in whatever way we can helps us retain a remission of our sins. Holland of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles. Ask the class to listen for what he taught about caring for the poor and retaining a remission of our sins. Little wonder that King Benjamin says we obtain a remission of our sins by pleading to God, who compassionately responds, but we retain a remission of our sins by compassionately responding to the poor who plead to us [see Mosiah 4: Why do you think retaining a remission of our sins partially depends on the way we care for others? What did King Benjamin say we should do if we are unable to give to beggars? What are some ways the Church today helps care for the poor and needy? How does giving fast offerings help us follow the counsel in Mosiah 4: How can youth participate in fast offerings? Answers may include that they can fast; some may contribute fast offerings; and Aaronic Priesthood holders in some parts of the world gather fast offerings from ward or branch members. You might ask Aaronic Priesthood holders to think about their efforts to gather fast offerings. Why do you think caring for the poor and needy is part of being a disciple of Jesus Christ? How have your experiences with serving those in need helped you come closer to Jesus Christ? Point out that with all the good things we are asked to do, it can sometimes be challenging to find balance in our lives. Ask the class to follow along, looking for what King Benjamin taught about finding that balance. How can this counsel help you? Watch your thoughts, words, and deeds To help students apply the counsel in Mosiah 4: Packer ‐ of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles: You can gain courage, conquer fear, and have a happy life. I had been told ‐ as I grew up that thoughts must be controlled, but no one told me how. During every waking moment the curtain is up. There is always some act being performed on that stage. It may be a comedy, a tragedy, interesting or dull, good or bad; but always there is some act playing on the stage of your mind. President Packer went on to suggest one way to push unworthy thoughts out of our minds:
