Digital Flipbooks by Rachel Mayne This week our task was to create a digital flipbook by taking a progression pictures and stringing them together in a video. A Watched Pot- I thought it would be cool to actually watch a pot of water come to a boil. I put a pot of water on a hot plate turned it on high. I started out taking a picture every 30 seconds but after little activity I decided to take a picture every 2 minutes. It turns out that the old adage is true - a watched pot never boils. I sat there for about 45 minutes trying to capture a pot of boiling water and I never did get it to a rolling boil Still the flipbook turned out kinda cool: An Apple a Day- This project started with the idea of using an apple. With my resources low staying in a hotel, I decided to try the apple. It turned out better than I expected: Sunset- Next I decided to try capturing an entire sunset. I set out with my camera and tripod 2 hours before sunset. I took a picture every minutes. The sun was scheduled to set at 9: The video takes a while to catch its stride since the sun is still relatively high in the sky. But once it does it looks awesome! The clouds make the video what it is: How Many Licks Does it Take? This turned out to be my favorite flipbook. Instead of lick-by-lick I decided to keep the sucker in my mouth for about 30 seconds before I took each picture. Based on that technique my answer to the age-old question is
