Fairies bring gifts for the young child for whom they will be godparents, among whom the Lilac Fairy is the principle godmother. The celebrations are suddenly interrupted when Catalabutte, the Master of Ceremonies responsible for compiling the guest list, realises that he has forgotten to invite the fairy Carabosse. Carabosse appears with her evil entourage and swears that she will have her revenge. She predicts that one day Aurora will prick her finger and die. The Lilac Fairy, however, intervenes. Some women are found knitting in front of the castle and are immediately condemned to prison, but the Queen intervenes on their behalf and the King pardons them. Aurora enters and, having charmed them all, dances with each of them. While Aurora is reflecting on the Princes, she notices an old woman marking time to the music with a spindle. She takes the spindle from her and dances with it herself to impress her suitors. But she pricks her hand and, a few moments later, falls senseless. The old woman then reveals herself as Carabosse and, evading capture by the Princes, disappears in a cloud of smoke and flame. The Lilac Fairy appears and, as the Princess is carried indoors, says she has come to keep her word. At a wave of her wand, a deep sleep falls over the whole court and a dense forest grows up around the castle. Act II Scene 1: He is tired and sends them off to hunt without him. Once he is left alone, the Lilac Fairy appears in a mother-of-pearl boat and shows him a vision of Aurora whom she says can be his wife. The Prince implores the Lilac Fairy to show him where this vision may be found in reality. Motioning him into the boat, the Lilac Fairy promises to take him there. He calls to her in vain to wake her and then, in desperation, he kisses her. The spell is broken and Aurora awakes. The rest of the court stirs also, and the castle comes to life. Act III Scene 1: The court assembles for the wedding celebrations. At a sign from the King, the celebrations begin, first with national dances, then with a procession of fairy-tale characters. Sleeping Beauty (French: La Belle au bois dormant), or Little Briar Rose (German: Dornröschen), also titled in English as The Sleeping Beauty in the Woods, is a classic fairy tale which involves a beautiful princess, a sleeping enchantment, and a handsome prince.

The fairies attend the banquet at the palace. Each fairy is presented with a golden plate and drinking cups adorned with jewels. Soon after, an old fairy enters the palace and is seated with a plate of fine china and a crystal drinking glass. This old fairy is overlooked because she has been within a tower for many years and everyone had believed her to be deceased. Six of the other seven fairies then offer their gifts of beauty, wit, grace, dance, song, and goodness to the infant princess. The evil fairy is very angry about having been forgotten, and as her gift, enchants the infant princess so that she will one day prick her finger on a spindle of a spinning wheel and die. However, she can only do so partially. This is her gift of protection. The King orders that every spindle and spinning wheel in the kingdom to be destroyed, to try to save his daughter from the terrible curse. Fifteen or sixteen years pass and one day, when the king and queen are away, the Princess wanders through the palace rooms and comes upon an old woman, spinning with her spindle. The princess, who has never seen anyone spin before, asks the old woman if she can try the spinning wheel. The curse is fulfilled as the princess pricks her finger on the spindle and instantly falls into a deep sleep. The old woman cries for help and attempts are made to revive the princess. The king attributes this to fate and has the Princess carried to the finest room in the palace and placed upon a bed of gold and silver embroidered fabric. The king and queen kiss their daughter goodbye and depart, proclaiming the entrance to be forbidden. The good fairy who altered the evil prophecy is summoned. Having great powers of foresight, the fairy sees that the Princess will awaken to distress when she finds herself alone, so the fairy puts everyone in the castle to sleep. The fairy also summons a forest of trees, brambles and thorns that spring up around the castle, shielding it from the outside world and preventing anyone from disturbing the Princess. A hundred years pass and a prince from another family spies the hidden castle during a hunting expedition. The prince then braves the tall trees, brambles and thorns which part at his approach, and enters the castle. He passes the sleeping castle folk and comes across the chamber where the Princess lies asleep on the bed. Struck by the radiant beauty before him, he falls on his knees before her. The enchantment comes to an end by a kiss and the princess awakens and converses with the prince for a long time. Meanwhile, the rest of the castle awakens and go about their business. The prince and princess are later married by the chaplain in the castle chapel. Part two[ edit ] After wedding the Princess in secret, the Prince continues to visit her and she bears him two children, Aurore Dawn and Jour Day , unbeknown to his mother, who is of an ogre lineage. When the time comes for the Prince to ascend the throne, he brings his wife, children, and the talabutte "Count of the Mount". The Ogress Queen Mother sends the young Queen and the children to a house secluded in the woods and directs her cook to prepare the boy with Sauce Robert for dinner. The kind-hearted cook substitutes a lamb for the boy, which satisfies the Queen Mother. She then demands the girl but the cook this time substitutes a young goat, which also satisfies the Queen Mother. When the Ogress demands that he serve up the young Queen, the latter offers to slit her throat so that she may join the children that she imagines are dead. While the Queen Mother is satisfied with a hind prepared with Sauce Robert in place of the young Queen, there is a tearful secret reunion of the Queen and her children. The King returns in the nick of time and the Ogress, her true nature having been exposed, throws herself into the tub and is fully consumed. The King, young Queen, and children then live happily ever after. By asking wise men and astrologers to predict her future after her birth, her father who is a great lord learns that Talia will be in danger from a splinter of flax. After Talia falls into deep sleep, she is seated on a velvet throne and her father, to forget his misery of what he thinks is her death, closes the doors and abandons the house forever. One day, while a king is walking by, one of his falcons flies into the house. The king knocks, hoping to be let in by someone, but no one answers and he decides to climb in with a ladder. He finds Talia alive but unconscious, and " Though Talia is unconscious, she gives birth to twins " one of whom keeps sucking her fingers. When she wakes up, she discovers that she is a mother and has no idea what happened to her. One day, the king decides he wants to go see Talia again. He goes back to the palace to find her awake and a mother to his twins. He informs her of who he is, what has happened, and they end up bonding. After a few days, the king has to leave to go back to his realm, but promises Talia that he will return to take her to his kingdom. When he arrives back in his kingdom, his wife hears him saying "Talia, Sun, and Moon" in his sleep. After the queen learns the truth, she pretends she is the king and writes to Talia asking her to send the twins because he wants to see them. Talia sends her twins to the "king" and the queen tells the cook to kill the twins and make dishes out of them. She wants to feed the king his children; instead, the cook takes the twins to his wife and hides them. He then cooks two lambs and serves them as if they were the twins. Every time the king mentions how good the food is, the queen replies, "Eat, eat, you are eating of your own. He then orders that his wife be burned along with those who betrayed him. Since the cook actually did not obey the queen, the king thanks the cook for saving his children by giving him rewards. The story ends with the king marrying Talia and living happily ever after. In the medieval courtly romance Perceforest published in , a princess named Zellandine falls in love with a man named Troylus. Her father sends him to perform tasks to prove himself worthy of her, and while he is gone, Zellandine falls into an enchanted sleep. Troylus finds her and impregnates her in her sleep; when their child is born, he draws from her finger the flax that caused her sleep. She realizes from the ring he left her that the father was Troylus, who later returns to marry her. Their decision was odd on one point, at least, since in none of the Teutonic myths, meaning the Poetic and Prose Eddas or Volsunga Saga, is their sleeper awakened with a kiss, a fact Jacob Grimm would certainly have known, who wrote an important and encyclopedic volume on German mythology. The second half, in which the princess and her children are almost put to death, but instead hidden, may have been influenced by Genevieve of Brabant. For the Disney variation of the character, see Aurora Disney. The Brothers Grimm named her "Briar Rose" in their collection. Like many German tales showing French influence, it appeared in no subsequent edition. The cause of her sleep is an ill-advised wish by her mother. As in Pentamerone , the prince rapes her in her sleep and her children are born. The Grimms also included a second, more distantly related one, The Glass Coffin. However, these tales omit the attempted cannibalism. Myth themes[ edit ] Some folklorists have analyzed Sleeping Beauty as indicating the replacement of the lunar year with its thirteen months, symbolically depicted by the thirteen fairies by the solar year which has twelve, symbolically the invited fairies. The basic elements of the story can also be interpreted as a nature allegory: This section needs additional citations for verification. I am in awe of every frame of this movie. But putting the two together “ this is about right. I feel like most people especially those who grew up in the 90s, like I did would find it kind of slow. Wait until you see these screenshots. The film begins with a fairytale prologue, much like Snow White and Cinderella “ the other Disney princess films until this point. And the three fairies, Flora, Fauna and Merryweather “ dressed entirely in the three primary film colors “ red, blue and green Flora wears red, Fauna, green, and Merryweather wears blue “ show up to give gifts to Aurora. Flora gives her the gift of beauty, Fauna gives her the gift of song, and before Merryweather can give her gift “ Maleficent shows up. She enters like the Wicked Witch of the West, too, which is a nice way to let you know immediately that this bitch is evil. She also looks a lot like the Queen from Snow White, which helps. That age difference is much more appropriate in that century , Aurora will prick her finger on the spindle of a spinning wheel, and die. And then she exits like a badass. Why not just make it so she has a hangover and wakes up the next morning? But the king is a superstitious man, so he has all the spinning wheels in the kingdom burned. How they get their clothes from now on is beyond me. But Flora has a different idea. She decides to have the three of them act as peasant women and raise Aurora deep in the forest. And the king and queen send their daughter away, and the kingdom falls into deep sadness. So that spinning wheel thing was basically pointless. Then we cut to sixteen years later. Oh, I guess I answered my own question “ seriously, though. Henchmen must be stupid to be treated like shit and hang around an evil person whose castle is just dilapidated stone. How the fuck do they eat? What do they do for fun? She sends her pet raven to go find Aurora. They send her out of the house to pick berries so they can set everything up. They then go about making her a cake and a dress. So she sings to the birds and the rabbits and the squirrels and the owls. And Prince Phillip all grown up , who is riding through the forest on his horse which interacts with him the way the other animals do with Aurora for some reason, hears her and decides he must find out who that beautiful voice belongs to. And Aurora sings about finding her true love as all the princesses do. It brings all the boys to the yard , and talks about finding him, but only in a dream. They put them around the owl and pretend to be her dream prince. And he waltzes with her, and the two fall in love immediately as all Disney princes and princesses do. And they go off and have the most famous dance in Disney history. So she rushes home, telling him to meet her later at the cottage in the glen. They plug up all the windows to make sure no one sees them using magic. They think this will make her happy, only it makes her sad, since she loves the man. All she wants is to be with the man she met in the forest. The fairies decide to give her a few minutes to be alone, which is when Maleficent strikes. She sends a green flame to entrance Aurora and lead her through a secret passage behind the fireplace, which leads up to a hidden tower in the castle. The flame turns into a spinning wheel, and Aurora touches it, and the prophecy is complete. The fairies then decide to put the entire kingdom to sleep until they can wake up Aurora. They rush off to the cottage to meet him. And at the cottage, Phillip is captured by Maleficent, who is leaving nothing to chance. The fairies arrive later on and realize Maleficent has Phillip. They come down and Phillip escapes outside to his horse. This of course, pisses her off, and she rains down lightning bolts to keep him from escaping.

John Lounsbery - King Hubert, King Stefan Eric Larson did not animate any of the characters for the film; instead, he directed the entire "Forest" sequence which stretches from Briar Rose a. Aurora wandering through the forest with her animal friends all the way to Princess Aurora renamed Briar Rose running back home, promising Phillip they will meet again later in the evening. This was the only time Larson directed a sequence or a film during his tenure at Walt Disney Productions. Story development[ edit ] Following the critical and commercial success of Cinderella , writing for Sleeping Beauty began in early However, they felt little romance was developed between the strange prince and the princess that the storyboard artists worked out an elaborate sequence in which the king organized a treasure hunt. The idea was eventually dropped when it became too drawn out and drifted from the central storyline. Instead, it was written that Prince Phillip and Princess Aurora would meet in the forest by random chance while Princess Aurora renamed Briar Rose was conversing with the forest animals. Additionally, because the original Perrault tale had the curse last one hundred years, the writers decided to shorten it a few hours with the time spent for Prince Phillip to battle the goons, overcome several obstacles, and fight off against Maleficent transformed into a dragon. By April , Sleeping Beauty was scheduled for a February release. Because of the delays, the release date was again pushed back from Christmas to Christmas Kay Neilsenâ€™ whose sketches were the basis for Night on Bald Mountain in Fantasia â€™ was the first to produce styling sketches for the film in When Hench returned to the Disney studios, he brought reproductions of the tapestries and showed them to Walt Disney, who replied, "Yeah, we could use that style for Sleeping Beauty. I took a Hench and took the same subject, and the composition he had, and just turned in into my style. The backgrounds became more important than the animation. Anyone worth his salt in this business ought to know how people move. For the final battle sequence, Kemmer was photographed on a wooden buck. The live-action model for Maleficent was Eleanor Audley , who also voiced the villain. Nevertheless, Walt insisted on the visual design claiming that the inspirational art he commissioned in the past had homogenized the animators. Production designer Ken Anderson also complained: I took the idea of the collar partly from a bat, and the horns looked like a devil. Flora, Fauna and Merryweather. So we started figuring the other way and worked on how we could develop them into special personalities. Cartoons , was employed on the film for four months during its early conceptual stages when Warner Bros. Cartoons was closed when it was anticipated that 3-D film would replace animation as a box office draw. His work on Sleeping Beauty, which he spent four months on, remained uncredited. Ironically, during his early years at Warner Bros. Another notable animator who worked on the film for part of its production was Don Bluth , who worked as an assistant animator to John Lounsberry, Bluth would leave after two years but eventually came back in the s. Would you do it? The next day, she was informed by Walt Disney that she landed the role. George Bruns was recommended to replace Schumannn by animator Ward Kimball.

The Sleeping Beauty. Description: {The Sleeping Beauty} is a modern drama produced by Lafeng Entertainment Co. In conclusion, this drama narrated the story that the female protagonist Ye Yi Shan lost her memory after a car accident happened.

One Red Shoe What if before his death, Dumbledore arranged a safe haven for his trusted spy? Powerful magic that would keep him alive if he were placed in mortal danger, but the scene on the Astronomy Tower played out before he could tell anyone what he had done. Thank you to those who reviewed, or made this a favourite. So, on with the last bit of the storyâ€” Chapter Six â€” Resolution Hermione sank to the floor exhausted. The instructions Dumbledore had given her to invoke Hogwarts into spilling its best kept secret, appeared to be working. She watched hazily as the quarters that the elves had just spent that last thirty minutes clearing, span and lurched. The magical power was of a magnitude that she would never have believed a building, even a magical one like Hogwarts, could have possessed. Hermione sensed a flurry of activity around her as she momentarily closed her eyes, unable to keep them open any longer. Then with great effort she brought them back into focus to see Poppy working furiously, kneeling next to the black-robed heap with the rasping breathing on the floor, and then she saw a flash of red and gold as Fawkes alighted next to them. The Gryffindor witch could see what was happening, and she knew Severus would be all right now that Fawkes was shedding his tears onto the wounds. Hermione dragged herself to her feet, she needed to leave. She wandered into the outer office and gazed momentarily on the cameo portrait. Minerva had transfigured it into a larger one and sat on the desk in her office. She heard Dumbledore try to speak to her, but she simply waved him off, she was too tired to utter a single word. As she walked she resolved to extend her leave and go away for a while. Her parents owned a cottage and she had a key. She wanted to be somewhere happy at the moment, and somewhere far, far away from Hogwarts, the Ministry Of Magic, and in particular Severus Snape. Finally moving through the gates, she apparated away. Dear Minerva, Please forgive me for running out on you, but I could not stay, having learned the truth I had to go. I am truly sorry, but I am unable to take the offered position as Potions professor. Kind regards Hermione Granger. As soon as she read the letter Minerva looked to Albus, and when he had no answer she summoned Harry and Ginny. This had the effect of stalling events further as Harry spent some time reuniting with Dumbledore before anything else could be done. Finally Minerva read the note to them, looking up at them as she finished. Perhaps she hasâ€” misconstrued something, because she seemed perfectly happy with the state of affairs this morning. Kingsley was the next port of call. I assumed she had decided to take my advice and do it. She read the note and duly answered. Dear Harry and Ginny, Thank you for your concern, but I am fine, although I find myself mistaken about many things at the moment. I just need some space to work through my emotions. I will return before school ends at Christmas. Please understand that I do not want to see anyone during my time away. Love to all Hermione Severus woke up the day after Hermione had left. As soon as he could coordinate his hand to write, the raven-haired wizard was quick to send Saffie with a note to find her. Dear Hermione, I was most dismayed to awake here at Hogwarts and find that my champion had left. I wish to opportunity to thank her, as she thanked me. Sincerely yours Severus He had a feeling that he had given her the wrong impression when he pulled away from her the night before he had been rescued, but he was at a loss to know why she had disappeared so hastily. He was not going to start something with her while he was in a state of limbo; that would hardly have been fair. The next week was taken up with becoming a living wizard once more. The ministry wanted proof of what had happened before they would recognise him once more, and they sent healers from St. Mungos to ascertain that he was who he claimed to be, and that it was all for real. Gringotts were even pickier before they would release his property to him, and there were several surprises contained within that meeting as well. During the twenty years since the war the last of the Prince familyâ€”the family that would not recognise himâ€”had passed on. Severus Snape now found himself the sole survivor of the bigoted pure-blood family, and this came with a manor house, twelve vaults at Gringotts and a seat on the Wizengamot. Now whilst he hated the family and all it stood for, he was a Slytherin. Some would say, the ultimate Slytherin in consideration of what he had achieved during the war, and he was not about to turn down all that power over a petty issue like distaste. He might not like it, but he could use it. During this time Dumbledore had been in his element. Time heals all wounds apparently, and Harry had never thought that Dumbledore put him in danger. It was the situation that was dangerous, and perhaps Dumbledore could have shielded him better, but they were all only human, and once you put people into the mix, unexpected things often take place. During this week, Severus did not receive an answer from Hermione. Draco duly moved his godfather to the Manor for the remainder of his convalescence, and Severus found the fact that he was now technically the same age as Draco interesting. He also found that now he could be himself that he was more relaxed about everything. He even found his tolerance for Harry Potter had loosened. However, it was an unexpected letter that finally gave him the direction he needed. Severus had now been reinstated into a better wizarding society than he had left, and he had received many pieces of correspondence during his recovery, from pardons to apologies. However, what he had received this morning was the most precious piece of parchment, because it told him something he very much wanted to know about the one missing piece of the puzzle. I know that you are looking for my mother, and I suspect I know why. I would like to see my mother finally happy, so I am going to tell you where I think she might be. I think I have finally fathomed what that something is. It is you, professor, and the reason she has fled is her fear that you will reject her as well. My grandparents own a cottage on the Shetland Islands. There is a large stone fence at the corner of the lane, and the cottage can be seen ahead from there. The enclosed Portkey will see you arrive behind the fence. Yours sincerely Rose Weasley Severus read the letter several times, and looked at the small acorn Rose had fashioned into the Portkey that had accompanied it. He placed the acorn in his pocket and went down to breakfast. His godson greeted him over his coffee cup, and asked after his plans for the day. Severus pursed his lips as he poured his coffee. During the holidays that owl made many journeys between Scorpius and Rose, and after his floo call from his son last night, Draco knew that the teenagers had something up their sleeves, and further more that they had McGonagall on their side, as they could only have used the floo in her office. So Draco wished Severus well and left for work. Severus landed just as Rose had said he would, right behind the stone fence. Smart girl, he thought. Obviously takes after her mother, it was hard to pinpoint Portkeys with that degree of accuracy. The neat little white cottage was easy to spot, as it was the only one on a precipice overlooking the ocean. There was a winding dirt track up to a neat white picket fence, and smoke curling from the chimney. The day was cool and blustery, typical autumn weather, and especially here in sub-arctic conditions. As he started towards the little dwelling, he saw a lone figure tightly wrapped in a woollen overcoat leave the house behind and start up the track towards a large outcrop of rocks that housed the ruin of a round, stone lookout of some kind. He was pleased about this, he wanted the element of surprise on his side, although he doubted that she would be totally unprepared for his arrival. She surely had wards of some kind set. In fact he felt the tickle of her magic when he was about three metres away from the house. He ignored it and listened instead for the crack of apparition, or the sizzle of a hex coming his way. He walked with his hand on wand just in case, but there was nothing, no indication that she was aware that he was just about to surprise her. As he closed in on the turret shaped building, Severus stopped abruptly when he heard garbled cursing, and then the clatter of wood. There was silence, and then he heard her mutter. Hermione hastily wiped her eyes and just stared at him with her mouth gaping. Severus was already bending down with his wand out trying to loosen the rock that Hermione had her foot jammed against. While she was looking down at her foot Severus quietly pocketed her wand which had fallen just out of her reach. There would be no hexing as far as he was concerned. Severus caught her and asked, "How did you get into this position anyway? He ignored her, "Try to put your weight on the foot," he encouraged, a smile curling his lips. However, as soon as Hermione tried to take a step, as instructed she crumpled in pain as her foot gave way. Only the headmaster can Apparate within Hogwarts," she told him. How fascinating," he said, with one raven eyebrow aloft. Hermione finally found her tongue again. Will you turn me down as well? Severus cleared his throat as he looked away from Hermione. Even though the ankle was mended and whole again, Poppy had told her to keep off it for the rest of the day. Severus tucked her up on the lounge by the fire, and he was currently in the kitchen making them tea and toast while Hermione sat and wondered what he wished to talk to her about. She was still cursing her clumsiness, but was very grateful that Severus had turned up.

King Tom and his queen Sabine, sit on their throne. Gabriel approaches Tom in a fast tempo. The crowd before the castle cheers, and fireworks are shot into the sky. But in the highest tower of the kingdom the fairies are crying at a bed they have placed Marinette on, a red rose in her hand. They go onto the balcony and see the cheering crowd. Tikki follows quickly after him. They fly around the castle, putting everyone to sleep. Tikki has just put the spell on Gabriel. While drifting off to sleep, he says "The peasant girl, who is she? Where did he meet her?" As born gentleman he knocks on the door. He struggles, but ultimately is completely tied. Queen Bee and her raven watch the scene with deep satisfaction. Queen Bee lighting his face with a candle "Well, this is a pleasant surprise. I set my trap for a peasant, and look! I catch a prince! And quite handsome as well!" She laughs an evil laugh "Away with him. But gently, my pets, gently, I have plans for our royal guest. The fairies are still on their way. As they arrive, they transform back to their original forms. They find the door open. They miniaturize themselves again. They are surprised by some guards, but get in unnoticed. Come, we must go to the dungeon and cheer him up. Her raven sits on her staff and the miniature fairies follow her in the small hidings on the way down to where Prince Adrien is kept. She stops by the last door and finds the key to the door. She slowly opens the door and sees a depressed Adrien who sits chained to the wall, head down. A wondrous future lies before you. You, the destined hero of a charming fairy tale come true. He looks up at her with a deadly glare. The fairies appear in the window of the dungeon. Queen Bee uses her magic stick to depict the following. She is indeed most wondrous fair. Raven colors in her hair, lips that shame the red, red rose. In ageless sleep she finds repose. And now, the gates of the dungeon part, and the prince is free to go his way. Off he rides on his noble steed Her voice drips with sarcasm " Adrien raises up and struggles in his chains. Plagg starts towards Queen Bee in anger. Tikki holds Plagg back from their hiding place. Queen Bee turns and walks towards the door. Let us leave our noble prince with these happy thoughts. Right outside the dungeon, she locks the door. When Queen Bee is out of sight and hearing they transform back and approach Adrien. While Plagg takes the door lock. When Adrien is free from the chains he gets stopped. The road to true love may be barriered by still many more dangers, which you alone will have to face. So arm thyself with this enchanted shield of virtue and this mighty sword of truth. For these weapons of righteousness will triumph over evil. Just outside the dungeon, the raven waits, which flies off screaming. The fairies and Adrien start upwards the stairs. Adrien quickly starts fighting against some of them, but then they jump out a window. Some rocks are dropped towards Adrien. A wall of arrows is shot but quickly turned into flying flowers. Adrien rides off on Nino towards the gate, where hot oil is thrown. Tikki turns it into a rainbow. He is followed by Plagg, who first fails to hit him with her magic. Queen Bee appears in the door by her room. The drawbridge is starting to get raised. Nino just makes it over the gap. Before it is too late! Maleficent throws two spells, but cannot stop them. She starts on one of the most advanced of her spells to try to stop the prince. Born through the skies on a fog of doom. Bolts of lightning strike everywhere, causing the growth of thick thorny bushes. Adrien has to stop before them. Queen Bee laughs at his attempt to try to save the princess. Adrien stops only shortly, then starts cutting a way with his sword. When she sees Adrien getting through her thorny bushes she yells "No, it cannot be! Right in front of his eyes Queen Bee transforms herself into a huge dragon. Adrien courageously starts towards her. But he has no chance against the fire-spying dragon. After a short fight, he must retreat. At a wall, he has to stop. Tikki hovers above the prince "Hop! At another blaze of fire he loses his shield. Queen Bee laughs again. The dragon falls off the cliff, Adrien looks over the cliff and sees the cape of the villain and his sword stuck to the ground. Plagg and Tikki shows Adrien the way up the tower to the sleeping Marinette. When he almost reaches the top of the stairs and into the highest room he starts walking slowly into the room. He turns his head towards the bed where he sees Marinette with her hair spread over the pillow and her red lips was slightly parted Adrien slowly walks towards her and gives her a faint kiss on the lips. In the matter of seconds their lips are connected and he lifts his head away Marinette awakens, her eyes fluttering as he looks down at her and his green meets her sky blue eyes. She looks up and sees Adrien and begins to smile. Inside the throne room, everyone awakens, too. Now, you were saying? The fairies watch the scene from a balcony, as Marinette and Adrien appear arm in arm, walking down the stairs from above. Gabriel watches their children walking down the stairs, he wipes his eyes and with mouth open. Marinette and Adrien knee down before the throne. Marinette then fondly embraces her mother and her father soon joins in to. Gabriel turns to his son "What does this mean, boy? He follows her to the dance floor and starts dancing. Gabriel stands speechless and watches his son and daughter-in-law dance. The ball choir sings to the song and the kids dances intensely.

Sleeping Beauty 6 Touch the spindle Quotes MERRYWEATHER: I don't see why she has to marry any old prince. FAUNA: Now, that's not for us to decide, dear. FAUNA: Maybe we should tell King Stefan about the boy.

Now this king and queen had plenty of money, plenty of fine clothes to wear, plenty of good things to eat and drink and a coach to ride out in every day. However, although they had been married many years, they had no children. This saddened them very much, as they dearly wanted a child. One day, as the queen was walking by the side of the river at the bottom of the garden, she saw a poor little fish that had thrown itself out of the water and lay gasping and nearly dead on the bank. The queen took pity on the little fish and threw it back again into the river. He said he would throw a great party and show the child to all the land, so he asked his kinsmen, nobles, friends, and neighbours. So twelve fairies came, each with a high red cap on her head, red shoes with high heels on her feet and a long white wand in her hand. After the feast was over they gathered round in a ring and gave all their best gifts to the little princess. One gave her goodness, another beauty, another riches, and so on till she had all that was good in the world. She quickly came up into the dining-hall. Now, as she had not been asked to the feast she was very angry, scolded the king and queen very much and set to work to take her revenge. However, the king hoped still to save his dear child altogether from the threatened evil, so he ordered that all the spindles in the kingdom should be bought up and burnt. But all the gifts of the first eleven fairies came true in the meantime, for the princess was so beautiful, well behaved, good and wise, that everyone who knew her loved her. It happened that, on the very day she was fifteen years old, the king and queen were not at home and she was left alone in the palace. So she roved about by herself, and looked at all the rooms and chambers, until at last she came to an old tower, to which there was a narrow staircase ending with a little door. In the door there was a golden key, and when she turned it the door sprang open, and there sat an old lady spinning away very busily. The spindle wounded her and she fell down lifeless on the ground. However, she was not dead, but had only fallen into a deep sleep. The king and the queen, who had just come home, and all their court, fell asleep too. The horses slept in the stables, the dogs in the court, the pigeons on the house-top and the very flies slept upon the walls. The cook, who was at that moment pulling the kitchen-boy by the hair to give him a box on the ear for something he had done amiss, let him go, and both fell asleep. The butler, who was slyly tasting the ale, fell asleep with the jug at his lips. And thus everything stood still, and slept soundly. A large hedge of thorns soon grew round the palace and every year it became higher and thicker. At last, the old palace was surrounded and hidden, so that not even the roof or the chimneys could be seen. This, however, none of them could ever do, for the thorns and bushes laid hold of them, as it were with hands and there they got stuck and could not escape. He told, too, how he had heard from his grandfather that many, many princes had come and had tried to break through the thicket, but that they had all stuck fast in it. Now that very day the hundred years were ended and as the prince came to the thicket he saw nothing but beautiful flowering shrubs. He got through them with ease and they shut in after him as thick as ever. Then he came at last to the palace and there in the court lay the dogs asleep. The horses were standing in the stables and on the roof sat the pigeons fast asleep, with their heads under their wings. And when he came into the palace, the flies were sleeping on the walls, the spit was standing still, the butler had the jug of ale at his lips, the maid sat with a chicken in her lap ready to be plucked and the cook in the kitchen was still holding up her hand, as if she was going to beat the boy. Then he went on still farther, and all was so still that he could hear every breath he drew. At last he came to the old tower and opened the door of the little room in which the princess was and there she lay, fast asleep on a couch by the window. She looked so beautiful that he could not take his eyes off her, so he stooped down and gave her a kiss. But the moment he kissed her, she opened her eyes and awoke, smiled upon him and they went out together. Soon the king and queen also awoke and all the court and gazed on each other with great wonder. The prince and the princess were married, there was a tremendous wedding feast and they lived happily together for the rest of their lives.
