March 27th only For two days only, several best-selling authors have joined together to offer their books for free or 99 cents to avid readers. There is true love, adventure, pioneering and a little magic involved. When he meets Lilly, a young woman in danger, it sends him on a journey to discover the difference between night and day and that during dark times, the Light is hidden, not gone. Free On Smashwords With Coupon: Accompanied by Erik, his young bodyguard and friend, Jaymin flees to a nearby town to live in hiding. Meanwhile, Erik must resort to his skills in unarmed combat to defend Jaymin against everyone from a gang of schoolyard bullies to the Malornians who regularly patrol the streets looking for trouble and for the missing prince. Then he stumbles upon a startling discovery that will challenge his assumptions and forever change his view of Malorn and the events that altered his life. While pretending to follow orders and serve diligently in the palace, Anya discovers ingenious ways to spy on enemy officers and slip valuable information to the Alasian resistance. But as she helps to craft plans that may eventually free Alasia, Anya accidentally uncovers a disturbing reference to her own family. Her fears are strengthened when she is confronted by a mysterious Malornian who seems somehow to know the truth behind the role she has been playing. Holding her life in his hands with that knowledge, he claims to bear information implicating her father in the betrayal that led to the Invasion itself. Meanwhile, tensions between Israel and Iran intensifies as the End Times approach. Time has no meaning and all is blissful reward and endless praise and communion with the One whose very presence makes eternity glorious. These believers lack nothing and their eternal lives are made complete by uninhibited access to the King of kings and Lord of lords. Eternity leaves endless time to grow and worship and play and learn and discuss. It is not surprising, then, when a man begins to wonder about the lives he had a chance to touch during his life on earth. He has no idea where his simple question will lead. A literary dream team of crime fighters including nods to Dickens, Stevenson, Alcott, Austen, Kipling, Doyle, and other writers across the pond, with plenty of homages to great books sprinkled throughout. Prowl the foggy London streets on the track of a ruthless enslaver of souls. Travel the Thames in a Giant Catfish. Soar over London in a stealth glider, and witness true redemptions and restorations no one ever imagined.

Ma Chipmunk had tears in her eyes. He must be really sick. His friend would know the best thing for a cough, but where had that turtle gone? He hopped down to Friendship Bog. She liked to nap by the water or catch spiders in the bushes. Sometimes she sat on Woodpecker Log to enjoy the sun. It was close by. Everyone came to ask her advice when they were sick. No, not there either. She just had to be here, somewhere! He climbed onto a log to look around. Ahead of him was Rumble Road. A squirrel had come too, and three mice, and a rabbit with her children. He jumped down from the log, but Gaffer and Carpenter came to meet him. And to all of us. Sheera was lying out there in the sand. He bent close to look at Sheera, and she lifted her head. Finally they slid her off the wagon and stood around to watch. One of her legs was bleeding. She had pulled her head back into her shell. But it has to be fresh. Pibbin watched them leave. Sheera was the one who knew the best way to fix a bleeding leg. What could he do? She grew up in the Hawaiian Islands and the Pacific Northwest, and it was there she learned a love for wilderness that pervades her stories. Over the years, experiences gained from raising three children, teaching school, and editing have made useful contributions to her work. She takes frequent trips to explore the New Jersey Pine Barrens and to collect website photographs and research material for her books.
