Art by Sophie Blackall. The bear traveled with him to England, where she became a regiment mascot for the soldiers training for the battlefield. But what possessed Harry Colebourn to buy a wild animal on his way to war? This was a bear named Winnipeg, Winnie for short. What we do know is that mascots including bears were not entirely unusual. Winnie, believe it or not, was actually not the only bear mascot that came over during the First World War, and all kinds of animals throughout history from goats to pigs to monkeys have served as mascots. There was a zookeeper who wrote that Winnie was the only bear they ever trusted entirely. Many people thought the First World War would be over in not too short of a period of time, and of course, it lasted four years. We know that he had written on the back of a photograph that he sent home to some family in Canada that one day Winnie would be coming back to Canada with him. So we think that was his intention, in fact, to bring her home, but clearly at the end of the war, she had found a new home with new friends. The photograph was taken in Valcartier, Quebec, where the Canadian soldiers trained for Europe. She was a very beloved bear. She was a star attraction at the London Zoo. If you can believe it. She lived for 20 years, which is a long life for a bear, but it really talked about how much people loved her, and children were allowed to go inside her enclosure and play with her. It brings to life that of course, the war was very real for Harry. It was very real for his fellow soldiers. It allows us to do it in a way that I think is accessible for a younger audience. It reminds you to be curious. All of those experiences that he would have had over those four years would have hardened him in some ways. And I think that the experience for him probably of seeing this animal that you loved in a place, in a new home where she truly was loved, and she had visitors and children and families who would come to the zoo just to see her. And I think that he had experienced and witnessed so much sacrifice, and I think for him to make a sacrifice of his own in making that decision to leave her that would have been, it would have been a natural decision I think at that point. We regret the error. This segment aired on September 14,

2: Wojtek (bear) - Wikipedia

Wojtek (; Polish pronunciation: ; in English, sometimes spelled Voytek and so pronounced) was a Syrian brown bear purchased, as a young cub, at a railway station in Hamadan, Iran, by Polish II Corps soldiers who had been evacuated from the Soviet Union.

I expected him to throw mind-blowing fantastic SF at me on every level, messing with my head and showering me with brilliant ideas and smart stories. So I shrugged and enjoyed it when he did a Hari Seldon prequel. I shrugged and tried to pray that a Star Wars novel was not selling out. And then I grew despondent when a novelist of his caliber started writing Halo novels and other for-market stuff. They were okay, but not great. So I took a break. I loved his writing soooo much! So when I saw this new Mil-SF trilogy I sat back in my chair and said to myself, "So, is this more writing to the market instead of writing to his sense of great story? This requires a little readjusting for our expectations. This is a genre I know fairly well and Bear writes for it damn well. And then it hit me. This was designed to be popcorn fiction. He has the writing chops to amaze and put us in the hot seat. I had to put away my expectations. Basically, this is a story about the memory of what happened to a Skyrine Sky Marine on his last mission on Mars. Antag is short for Antagonists simple name, stuck with the masses, makes them bland, nobody knows much about them if anything. Gurus are aliens that started showing themselves 13 or 14 years ago. It was also a bit rushed and "by the way". Then again, that could have been done on purpose to emphasize how people regard this as normal and not suspicious at all. The scene at the very beginning was intense and cool, just like their scrambling to survive the aftermath but that was basically it. I presume one has to see the trilogy as a whole. Thus, we also got quite a bit of exploration that meant meeting the locals Elon Musk will have a fit but that shit was hilarious! It made me "part of the team". I also liked the hard sf bits in the end.

A Bear in War is based on real-life incidents, but the way Stephanie Innes and Harry Endrulat relate them makes for a story with wide-ranging appeal. • Montreal Gazette "[A] timeless and touching love story told from the perspective of a girl's teddy bear." •

Early life[edit] Bear was born in San Diego , California. At the university, he was a teaching assistant to Elizabeth Chater in her course on science fiction writing, and in later years her friend. Career[edit] Bear is often classified as a hard science fiction author based on the scientific details in his work. In Queen of Angels , Bear examines crime, guilt, and punishment in society. He frames these questions around an examination of consciousness and awareness, including the emergent self-awareness of highly advanced computers in communication with humans. The question of cultural acceptance of something new and unavoidable is also brought up. In Blood Music , reality becomes unstable as the number of observersâ€™trillions of intelligent single-cell organismsâ€™spirals higher and higher. Anvil of Stars sequel to The Forge of God and Moving Mars postulate a physics based on information exchange between particles, capable of being altered at the "bit level". Blood Music was first published as a short story and then expanded to a novel It has also been credited as the first account of nanotechnology in science fiction. In later works, beginning with Queen of Angels and continuing with its sequel, Slant, Bear gives a detailed description of a near-future nanotechnological society. This historical sequence continues with Headsâ€™which may contain the first description of a so-called "quantum logic computer"â€™and with Moving Mars. This sequence also charts the historical development of self-awareness in AIs. Its continuing character Jill was inspired in part by Robert A. Bear is credited for the middle book. Examples include Songs of Earth and Power fantasy and Psychlone horror. Bear has described his Dead Lines, which straddles the line between science fiction and fantasy, as a "high-tech ghost story ". He met Bradbury in and had a lifelong correspondence. As a teenager Bear attended Bradbury lectures and events in Southern California. Nielson; they divorced in In , he married Astrid Anderson, the daughter of the science fiction and fantasy authors Poul and Karen Anderson. They have two children, Erik and Alexandra. They reside near Seattle , Washington. He is a deist. The procedure included installation of a mechanical aortic valve. Hull Zero Three was short-listed for the Arthur C. Clarke Book Award in Doris Lessing , winner of the Nobel Prize in literature, wrote, "I also admire the classic sort of science fiction, like Blood Music, by Greg Bear.

A Bear in War tells a tender story about the love of family and the heartache brought by war. Aileen Rogers loves her teddy bear and he tells us about life with Aileen and her family in Canada during World War I.

He was certainly a very handsome teddy bear. His fur was soft brown and he wore a purple sweater and straw hat. He too was a very handsome teddy bear. His fur was snow white and he wore a red sweater with little glasses on his cute teddy bear face. The little girl loved them very much and always took good care of them. She wiped them with a soft cloth everyday and changed their sweaters all the time. She let them sleep in bed with her at night. She had a tea party for them every Saturday afternoon. The two teddy bears had been content with this arrangement for quite some time. Lately, they both thought that maybe one was better than the other. They sat on the bed together waiting for Cindy to come home. They sat on the soft pink blanket all afternoon not saying another word to each other. At one time, they had been best friends but now, they were in the middle of a fight to see who was the cutest. Both thought that he was. Cindy had lots of toys and dolls but Baxter and Billy had always been her favorites. She got them from her grandpa, who died right before Baxter and Billy came to her. They were very special indeed. All afternoon they sat together in silence and then they heard Cindy downstairs. She was home from school! They heard her come bounding up the stairs. Cindy came running into her bedroom and threw herself down onto the bed. She was adorable in her brown pigtails. She had freckles on her nose and was missing her two front teeth. Baxter and Billy remembered when she put the teeth under her pillow so that the Tooth Fairy would come and visit her. The Tooth Fairy had left her two dollars and she had brought the straw hat for Baxter and the glasses for Billy. She picked both of them up at the same time and hugged them together. My other tooth is loose and that means the Tooth Fairy will be coming to visit again. Mommy said that she will help me pay for it because she knows how much I love my babies. Baxter looked at Billy.
