8 Great Sea Adventure Stories Sea travel is synonymous with adventure. Dull must the heart be that doesn't quicken to John Masefield's "I must go down to the seas again, to the lonely sea and the

But it is a mere dinghy compared to the floating gin palaces that surround it like condo towers. Munk is not gloating about the wealth of the superyacht owners, some of whom are his friends; he is gloating about the ability of his marina and resort development, Porto Montenegro, to attract rich visitors who are boosting the economy. The development, which has cost Mr. The Porto Montenegro investment is worth a hefty 6. This year, the yachties got a treat when the marina opened a metre horizon pool, one of the largest of its kind in the world. I wanted to create a transformational investment out of nothing. Every day, it gets more and more on the international tourist map. The fall of gold prices and the monstrous cost overruns at the high-altitude Pascua Lama project in the Andes conspired to cut the share price in half. Since then, Barrick has appointed a new chairman, ex-Goldman-Sachs banker John Thornton, and sent chief executive officer Jamie Sokalsky packing, replacing him with two co-presidents Barrick no longer has a CEO. Porto Montenegro is no consolation prize, but it is keeping Mr. Munk is sitting in the salon of the Golden Eagle, facing the stern. Gleaming white yachts dominate the rest of the view on the Bay of Kotor, the fjord-like natural harbour that the English poet Lord Byron called "the most beautiful encounter between the land and the sea. It features a beach club, a helipad, a cinema and hull doors that open like wings to expose a mini-marina stuffed with nautical toys like Sea-Doos. At the refuelling dock in the distance is the Enigma, a sleek knife of a yacht 100 metres long 100 that could pass for a navy frigate. Story continues below advertisement Story continues below advertisement Next year, after the massive concrete piers that were originally built for the Austro-Hungarian navy in the late 19th century are extended, the marina will become the home port of the so-called Golden Fleet 100 the metre-plus mega-yachts owned by members of the Saudi royal family, which are rumoured to have their own missile defence systems. Munk negotiated a sweet deal with the Montenegrin government that allows yachties to avoid fuel taxes and excise charges. As a result, big yachts from all over the Med find that it pays to tie up at Porto Montenegro. Munk and his co-investors want the marina to be known as something greater than a cut-rate gas station. Judging from the per-cent occupancy rate of the yacht slips 100 another are under construction and the total will eventually reach 100 Porto Montenegro has already made the A-list. Munk had a rude encounter with a waterborne object. Munk has always been fond of yachts although Golden Eagle is the first he has owned. Several years before he bought the naval base next to the seaside Montenegrin town of Tivat, he rented a yacht and moored it at Monaco, jumped overboard for a swim, felt something strange brush his face and realized it was a spent condom. Story continues below advertisement That was it for Monaco 100 he would seek other ports. Not long after he gave up on Monaco, he was approached by a friend who told him he should invest in Montenegro, which was then still attached to Serbia. The country, about the size of Connecticut, had a population of 1,000,000, and Serbian orthodox Christianity was its most popular religion. It had been the southern rump of Yugoslavia, which got ripped apart during the Balkans wars in the 1990s. After the war, it found itself reluctantly attached to Serbia and was suffering economically as a result of economic sanctions that had been imposed on Serbia and Montenegro during the wars. To get more information on the country, Mr. Montenegro happened to be blessed with one of the most dramatically beautiful, deep-water bays on the planet 100 Kotor 100 which had attracted the navies of colonizers from the Romans and Venetians to the Yugoslavians, with brief appearances by the French and the Italians along the way. Before he knew it, he was flying over the Bay of Kotor in a military helicopter, mesmerized. Munk assembled a group of wealthy investors, among them his son Anthony Munk, Mr. Most of the amount went to pay the pensions of the shipyard workers who had lost their jobs. The Montenegrins, upset that the naval base was to receive the kiss of death, and suspicious of the new colonizers in the form of yacht-owning millionaires and billionaires from afar, took to the streets in the thousands to protest. There were rumours that Mr. Story continues below advertisement The protests eventually melted away as jobs were created and the Montenegrins realized that the new investors were no hit-and-run tightwads. The first yacht berths were opened in A waterfront promenade, complete with retail village and restaurants, came next. The sale of the condos has financed the expansion of the marina. Once built, piers require little maintenance and are rented at high prices though lower than the prices charged by the French and Italian marinas. Nothing breaks, unlike in a hotel. Some shop owners think Porto Montenegro effectively operates as a closed economy. Munk and his investors but managed by Regent, the Taiwan hotel giant, was supposed to be a blow-out party studded with the great and the good. It fell a bit short. But notably absent were two prominent Porto Montenegro investors – Mr. Deripaska and Nathaniel Rothschild, Mr. It was no great mystery why Mr. Deripaska was a no-show. Everyone at the party agreed that the lawsuit would make Mr. Nathaniel joined the Barrick board, at Mr. Still, the event put a huge smile on Mr. Washuk called it "an amazingly transformative project" for the little Balkan country. In a short, charming speech, Lord Rothschild called it a "miracle. Munk was typically energetic and passionate. He thanked the investors, employees and government ministers for "believing in us – for making [Porto Montenegro] a showcase for the world," then, like a crusader for capitalism, warned the country to avoid any temptation to make life difficult for foreign capital. A few wandered off to the seaside discotheque, the rest returned to their condos, yachts and Regent hotel rooms. No one went into Tivat and Mr. Munk no doubt climbed aboard the Golden Eagle wondering, at age 86 and shorn of Barrick, what project would capture his attention next. Benji For those of you, who prefer to travel from the comfort of your armchair, we have selected twelve nautical tales that will whisk you away on a few vicarious journeys around the world. From swashbuckling escapades and treasure hunting to suspenseful battles for survival, these thrilling adventures will keep you turning pages well into the night. Kon-Tiki by Thor Heyerdahl Image credit: It is just as crazy as it is heroic and makes your jaw drop everytime. The 6 men fighting the elements on a hand-made balsa wood vessel are at the mercy of the ancient Gods of South America and the Pacific. Encounters with wonderful Verne-like creatures of the sea bring the Pacific to life. Squids and giant sharks are right under your feet, fish and octopus fly into your face daily. You just have to put your toothbrush in the water and a fish bites on it vehemently. A sixteen-year old girl, Nix might seem like an average teenage girl, but there is more to her than meets the eye. Throughout her life, she has travelled through time and space on a hand-built pirate ship alongside her father, Captain Slate, who is on a mission to revisit his past to save the love of his life. But what fate awaits this duo on their perilous journey? The Girl From Everywhere delights the readers with witty dialogues, enchanting myths and breathtaking scenery. Monsoon by Wilbur Smith Image credit: But when the King orders him to sail to Madagascar and stop the pirates responsible for looting the finest trading ships of the East India Trading Company and bringing ruin to them all, Hal must travel with his three younger sons on a journey that will shape the young men forever. In this swashbuckling adventure of marauders and slave-traders, love and treasure, the brothers will face duels, chases, betrayals and battles - and see their fates cast in ways they could never have imagined. Having been washed up on the shore by shipwreck, the lonely castaway struggles against deprivation, hardship and miseries on a small deserted island near Trinidad. Following a few years of solitude, Crusoe discovers yet another sinister secret, lurking behind the world of exotic beaches and glinting blue waters, that might jeopardise his hopes of being rescued. Presented as a fictional autobiography, Defoe offers a unique glimpse into the soul of an exile in his fight for survival, where courage and ingenuity triumph over adversity. It captures a historical moment marvellously: While noted as an early espionage thriller, this is markedly better written than many in the genre and the characterisation is especially interesting when it comes to Davies: The novel tells a real-life story of the crew aboard the whale ship Essex battling for their survival in the South Pacific after the ship has been attacked and sank by an 80ft sperm whale. Throughout a day ordeal in the open ocean, sailors are tested by dehydration, hunger and extreme weather. Reaching the depths of despair, the crew members resort to cannibalising their dead shipmates. All adventurers at heart should add this book to their read-lists. Inca Gold by Clive Cussler Image credit: As the galleon is sailed back to England, an underwater earthquake causes a massive tidal wave sweeping it into the jungle, where it vanishes into history. In , a group of archaeologists diving in the depth of sacrificial pool high in the Andes of Peru are rescued from drowning in the nick of time by Dirk Pitt who happens to be on a marine expedition nearby. Their lives are once again in jeopardy when smugglers with the intent of uncovering lost ancient Inca treasures discover them. Captured by a family syndicate dealing in stolen works of art, they are threatened with execution and find themselves in a vortex of corruption, betrayal and death. Inspired by real events, the story is centred around a Cuban fisherman Santiago who is considered to be cursed failing to catch a fish for weeks. In his strive to redeem himself, the old man ventures into the Gulf Stream where he encounters the largest marlin he has ever seen. The next few days can only be described as an agonising battle to bring the marlin to the market in one piece. Deep Shadow by Nick Sullivan Image credit: Deep Shadow has it allâ€”Suspense, Thrillerâ€”and a little bit of love. Sullivan is obviously a fan of the culture, climate and diving in the Caribbean. The way he described each island and each dive that they made is painted in this amazing colour that I felt like I was there. Overall, Deep Shadow will probably be up there with my Best of books. Express Publishing When Professor Aronnax and his crew set off on a quest to find a deep sea monster, little do they know that their discovery will stretch far beyond their imagination. A thrilling adventure awaits for them on board of the submarine Nautilus, commanded by enigmatic Captain Nemo, the greatest inventor of his time. Being held captive, Aronnax and his companions will spend the next ten months at sea, exploring volcanoes and desert islands, hunting sharks and fighting a giant squid. Life of Pi by Yann Martel Image credit: Mariner Books

"Many readers will agree that Yann Martel touched nerves with his story of a teenager cast adrift on the Pacific in a lifeboat with a zebra, a hyena, an orang-utan and a Bengal tiger for company. You might read Life of Pi in this light, as a fable. When Pi reaches land after days at sea, he describes the tiger with whom he has shared his boat as "companion of my torment, awful, fierce thing that kept me alive. Set in the tropics, the story unfolds when a young innkeeper Jim Hawkins comes into possession of an old treasure map. Accompanied by a seasoned captain Smolett, heroic Dr. However, it is not long before the voyage turns into a treacherous journey unveiling the true intentions of mutineers aboard the Hispaniola. First published in , this ultimate all-ages crowd pleaser became one of the most frequently dramatised novels in history.

Each mission consists of a preset challenge, ranging from normal story battles, to quiz missions, boss rushes and other challenges that differ from the regular gameplay. Missions can be playable as many times as the player wishes. To open more blocks on the Map, other missions have to be completed before they may become accessible. Sometimes a mission requires to be cleared in a certain rank before they may open to the next block. Wavy, black lines on the Map serve to border between blocks, and in order to get to the blocks they obstruct, missions have to be completed around them. Some Battles restrict which Warriors or Weapons can be used in them. Victory Ranks and Rewards When finishing a mission, the player will be graded on how well they did on a scale of "A", "B", and "C" or "S", "A", and "B" in certain game regions. Each Battle requires Warriors to earn a specific Rank in an adjacent Battle in order to be unlocked, and a large number of missions require the player to get an "A" rank to earn a specified reward; except for Costumes, these rewards also require that their designated owner be the character used to get the "A". The exact requirements for an "A" rank vary by Battle, but are generally similar. The "Clear time" requirement is 7 minutes for most Challenge Battles, and 15 minutes for Adventure Battles. As in Legend Mode, the player also receives a Rupee bonus for how well they performed in each category. The overall Battle Rank is calculated by averaging the ranks in the applicable categories and rounding down. Thus, an "A" rank in "K. Item Cards Main article: Item Card In Hyrule Warriors: Definitive Edition, an Item Card Shop was added. This allows Warriors to purchase Item Cards which they have previously obtained. Network Links appear similar to Link but wearing black, blue, light blue, purple, or red clothing. Once a Network Link appears, the Battle on the square it stands at can be played for an extra Reward, including Weapons, Materials. The Rewards Map is significantly smaller than the other Maps, and Adventure Battles can only be played by completing a specific Illustration. Each Adventure Battle is inspired by the content of the Illustration that unlocks it, such as the "True Partners" Illustration unlocking a challenge that requires picking a Warrior to ally with. The Map only contains new Costumes as Rewards. The Master Quest Map provides new missions and challenges, but with additional clauses that limit the abilities of the Warriors; such as no healing, guarding or items allowed, in addition to the regular mission objectives. The Map contains rewards for the playable characters Cia , Volga , and Wizzro , along with new costume and additional rewards for other playable characters. The Twilight Map provides new missions and challenges on a slightly smaller Map, as well as additional new Item Cards based on items from Twilight Princess. The Map also has Warp Portals to move to other sections of the Map, as well as Twilight clouds that cover certain mission tiles and give them additional clauses that limit the abilities of Warriors. These clauses can be removed with the Tear of Light Item Card. Defeating enemies in battles will have an increased chance of producing two dropped items, with greater likelihood that at least one item is a Material Bag. The Map has a time limit caused by the falling Moon which resets the Map after a certain amount of time has passed. The counter initially starts at 3, but for every subsequent reset, it starts at 1. Whenever a battle square on the Map is finished or otherwise ended, the counter goes down by one. This counter can be manipulated by using select Item Cards, and the Map also includes Owl Statues that protect select sections of the Map from resetting upon activation. Completing the final battle square on the Moon will remove the time limit, allowing the Termina Map to be completed without a counter. Defeating enemies in battles will have an increased chance of producing two dropped items, with greater likelihood that at least one item is a Weapon Bag. The Map contains new "Mask" costumes for characters, several Heart Containers, and new 8-Bit weapons. The Map contains squares with Great Sea Rules, which hinder the Warriors when battling on that square. It is an exact copy of the Great Sea Map in layout but with a different starting tile. The Dark Ruler of this Map is on a battle square adjacent to the starting position, but Warriors must traverse the Map to obtain a Hookshot Item Card to access that battle square. This Map has eight Item Cards based on the Instruments of the Sirens , which can be used to dispel Nightmares and apply an Siren Power across the entire

Map for three battles. After each Instrument is used for the first time, an Egg Counter will increase by one. The true power of the Instruments will also be unlocked, allowing the Item Cards to be used on any square and increasing the duration of the Instrument Power to six battles. This is the only Map with rewards for Marin. It is composed of two sections, the one on the right based on the World of the Ocean King from Phantom Hourglass, and the one on the left based on New Hyrule from Spirit Tracks. Both sections have their own starting tile, allowing Warriors to progress through whichever section they want. In the center of the Map is the Phantom Hourglass, which is protecting the Map from a curse. After every third battle, some sand will fall down to the bottom of the Phantom Hourglass. If all of the sand falls to the bottom, the curse will cause all squares to require an A-Rank to progress. When a square with "Final Battle!" in both sections, one square contains a Boss Giant Beast that must be defeated to lift the curse and reveal a new section of the Map where the Phantom Hourglass was. This section is based on the Dark Realm from Spirit Tracks and the Dark Ruler can be found at the end of this section. If an Item Card is used on a square with a Song Stone, the Stone will blast off, revealing a chest with a duplicate of the Item Card used. Both of these will vanish after use but will reappear later. Occasionally, the Linbeck Trading Company will run a two-for-one sale, giving two pieces of food for an Item Card instead of one. This is the only Map with rewards for Toon Zelda. It is divided into two halves- the left representing Hyrule, and the right representing Lorule. Direct passage between Hyrule and Lorule is impossible. Both worlds cover an 8 by 8 area on the Map, and traveling through a Fissure will cause the Warrior to emerge in the same position in the other World eg, traveling through the first Fissure on the fifth tile from the left edge of Hyrule on the bottom row, or tile H5, will unlock the fifth tile from the left edge of Lorule on the bottom row, or tile H As Lorule is fragmented and separated by chasms, Warriors must travel through multiple Fissures to access all of Lorule. Whenever an Item Card is used, a positive effect is added to the board, and that effect will affect the entire Lorule Map until it is overwritten. Two Powers can be active at the same time. Using an Item Card with a third Power will overwrite both of the active Powers. The Dark Ruler is located in Lorule, and is as accessible as any other- no special requirements are needed to unlock it. This is the only Map with rewards for Ravio and Yuga.
