Check new design of our homepage! Confused About the Different Types of Seeds? You are Not Alone The classification of different types of seeds can be based on the shape of the seeds, the use of the seeds, or according to the plant that will grow out of the seed. Gardenerdy Staff Last Updated: Mar 19, Seeds are very vital, because through them plants reproduce. However, some plants instead of producing seeds release spores for reproduction. There are around a million different types of seeds, so division of a specific type of seed is a bit difficult. There are also some seeds which fall into more than one category, like sunflower beans, which are used for plantation purposes or used as bird seeds. Seeds are very significant to our lives, whether it is to growing cereals, herbs, fruits, vegetables, or using them for culinary purposes like using kidney beans for making enchiladas. No matter which category the seed falls under, it is important to select healthy seeds to get the maximum benefits from the seeds. Given below are the two major categories of seeds; seeds used for plantation and seeds used for eating. Also, there are pictures of some attractive-looking seeds, which you can collect. Types of Seeds for Plantation With organic farming gaining popularity day-by-day, the planters are left with two choices: In my opinion, organic seeds are a better choice, as they are more safe and natural. However, while selecting a particular type of seeds for sowing make sure the variety of seeds, whether organic or hybrid, has been used before and has given a healthy yield. Seeds for Growing Cereal Plants You can find these plant seeds for sowing at a farmers market, or order them online. Select good quality seeds to grow your cereals, and seek advice from the supplier for the care instructions. Some of the cereal plant seeds are bran, wheat, rice, corn, etc. For example, there are various varieties of apples, try to get your hands on the seeds that are native to your region. Some of fruit and flower plants grown using seeds are peaches, apricots, nectarines, roses, sunflower, etc. Seeds for Growing Vegetables Again, you can find seeds to grow vegetables or herb plants at your local nursery. Pick out healthy, non-bruised, and large seeds to get a healthy yield. Examples of easy-to-grow vegetables by using seeds are tomato, squash, beans, cucumbers, spinach, etc. Seeds for Growing Grass To grow beautiful grass you can buy seeds from online suppliers or at your local nursery. It is okay if you go with the quality grass seeds which are non-organic varieties, as grass is used only for decorative purpose. Seeds for Growing Herbs Herbs add great flavor to a recipe. Many people tend to keep a small herb garden near their kitchen. Some examples of easy-to-grow herbs are parsley, mint, rosemary, sage, and chives. Types of Edible Seeds Some of the above types of seeds also fall in the edible seeds type, for example cereals, many fruits, and vegetable seeds are edible such as cucumber seeds and tomato seeds. Given below are the types of edible seeds used in the kitchen and the ones used to feed birds. Make sure you select a packet of good quality ones. Some examples of such seeds are: After some time these seeds sprout, and become edible. While some seeds are soaked for hours, and then cooked well for them to become edible. Some examples of such seeds are pinto, kidney beans, white kidney beans, green gram, soybeans, broccoli, etc. Seeds That are Used for Making Beverages There are some specific seeds which are not eaten, but used to make beverages. The most common example is of coffee beans. Coffee is one of the most popular beverage around the world and many prefer to grind these beans at home to make fresh coffee, rather than using the store-available powder. Similarly, chia seeds are used to make energy drink, while rose hips are used to make tea. Seeds to Feed Birds For feeding the birds there are various kinds of seeds used. However, certain bird seeds attract specific group of birds. The seeds used to feed birds are sunflower, millet, cracked corn, thistle, wheat, oats, etc. Some Interesting-looking Seeds Many people tend to collect seeds which are beautiful. Given below are pictures of some interesting seeds, some are in their pods, some have a hard shell, while some have a fuzzy cover on them. There are also few interesting seeds like that of the Chinese lantern plant which after drying gets a hollow, intricate-looking shell. So no matter what type of seeds you are looking for, ensure you select the good quality seeds to get the best out of them.

It is being published by Moon Books in their Pagan Portals series. The cover features some dragon trees, which are described in the section about Herbs of Mars. I became fascinated by these weird plants when I first came upon them in Tenerife where I used to live. They look as if they could have come from another planet!

Ancient Herbalists You are probably wondering how there can be herbs of the Sun, Moon and Planets, and of course, as far as we know, the Earth is the only planet that supports life as we know it in this Solar System, so what does the subject of my book and the title mean? Well, the answer is that ancient herbalists, such as Nicholas Culpeper, had a system of listing herbs under different planetary rulers, according to their characteristics. For example, according to these herbalist schools of thought, herbs ruled by Mars, the god of war, have something aggressive about their form, such as spines. It also has spiky leaves that are lance-shaped. This made the tree an ideal candidate for being included in the herbs of Mars.

The Dragon Tree Seven Sections Herbs of the Sun, Moon and Planets has seven sections in which I list seven herbs and discuss their uses, and why they are listed under the dominion of a particular planet.

Chamomile Photo - Public Domain The first two of these herbs have petals that radiate out from a central disk and that makes them similar visually to the Sun. Eyebright Euphrasia officinalis is another herb of the Sun. It has markings like sun rays on its flowers and is a herbal treatment for the eyes. It also likes growing in sunny locations.

Herbs of the Moon have something to do with the night about them or something rounded or white or silvery. The white water lily Nymphaea alba is a herb of the Moon and it has white flowers and rounded lily pads. Jasmine Jasminum officinale is another herb ruled by the Moon, and this shrub has white flowers and emits a perfume after dark.

Herbs of Mercury must communicate and have something to say. Mercury was regarded as the messenger of the gods. Fennel Foeniculum vulgare is a herb ruled by Mercury. With its feathery foliage, graceful appearance and aroma and flavour of anise, it certainly communicates to our senses.

Herbs of Venus should have some association with love. The rose is, not surprisingly, listed in the herbs governed by the goddess and planet Venus.

Gardening Event I am a regular contributor to Mediterranean Gardening and Outdoor Living magazine, "the only English language magazine dedicated to gardening in Iberia," and this summer on 11 and 12 June, the publication is holding an "outdoor living extravaganza," their First Annual Mediterranean Gardening Show. I am pleased to announce that I will be one of the guest speakers at this event, and I will be selling and signing copies of my new book, which will be published just in time for this. There will be a feature about Herbs of the Sun, Moon and Planets in it too. Of course, I am looking for further publicity for my book, so please get in touch if you want to interview me about it or can review my work!
