Go for a ride with Grandma, Jeff and Amy aboard the Pacific Northwest's last working steam boat, the VIRGINIA V, and experience some of the humorous and exciting adventures that actually happened in the early days of boat transportation in the early s.

Additionally, a better transportation system was needed to bring lumber from the Lake Tahoe region to Virginia City, where it could be used to timber the underground mines and feed the mining furnaces. Work began in February and by early the following year regular train service was established between Virginia City and Carson City. By , the line had been extended to Reno, where it intersected with the Central Pacific Railroad, and ultimately the transcontinental railroad that had been completed in . By the turn of the century, the railway had shifted its focus from transporting ore to carrying tourists and other passengers. The railroad struggled to stay in business during the next 26 years with the unprofitable Virginia City to Mound House spur shut down in , losing money in each succeeding year. He laid the first tie in and started running his train for tourists three years later. Despite setbacks, such as collapsed tunnels, steep grades, and aging equipment, Gray, his staff, and many volunteers have persevered. Gray and his workers tried to reconstruct the tunnel but found it impossible to do so safely. The railroad was forced to extend the track around the hill, avoiding the tunnel. The result, however, is an even more spectacular trip as the train slowly sweeps around the side of a hill, offering a panoramic view of Gold Hill and the surrounding environs. Presently, the train runs from a small depot on F Street, just south of the St. During the leisurely ride, travelers are treated to an informative talk as the conductor relates anecdotes about the Comstock and points out places of historic interest along the way, including original mining head frames, mill sites and other buildings. For more information call . During the next decade, the railroad project made slow progress as the commission acquired right-of-way easements and financial commitments. Starting in , the project picked up steam. The contract included filling in a huge open pit mine called the Overman Pit, which had blocked previous efforts to lengthen the railroad the pit had been dug after the railroad was abandoned. The Legislature also granted Carson City permission to raise its sales tax by one-eighth of a cent to fund a big portion of the remaining expenses. The reconstructed railroad follows the original railroad right-of-way between Virginia City and Carson City. From there, it crosses the filled-in Overman Pit and continue through American Flat, a former mining mill district near Silver City, before reaching U. The route crosses the highway and enters the Carson River Canyon area, where it winds along the banks of the river, offering spectacular views. It concludes its mile route in Carson City. Much of the museum equipment was obtained from Hollywood studios, where they were often featured in movies and television. The Museum also has an ongoing research and restoration program.

Newport News The Skinny: The Newport News Park bikeway is not paved but is in good shape. It traverses rich woods through the 7,plus acre park. Here you can extend your ride if you please, on one of the tour roads You will share the road with cars and pedestrians here, however, speed limits are low. However, the interconnected nature of the battlefield roads makes shortening your route easy. It is fun and easy to make the 5. Add other park activities to the agenda. The Newport News Park Bikeway showcases much of the park. Within this large multi-purpose preserve is the site of the Battle of Dam No. The hiker trail system overlain on the battlefield is scenic and comprehensive. Allow time to enjoy the facilities at Newport News Park, including additional trails, an archery range, playgrounds, picnic areas with shelters, a fine campground with electric and non-electric campsites, an arboretum, history exhibits, nature programs, golf courses, even acre model airplane field. Head over to Yorktown. Even if you do not tour the American Revolution Museum at Yorktown , stop by the Yorktown Pub , overlooking the Yorktown River, to enjoy burgers, salads and seafood. This paved path parallels the Roanoke River through downtown Roanoke. The greenway will stretch 10 miles one-way when completed, yet a 7-mile long section can currently be pedaled from Ghent Park to Fallon Park, also incorporating the Tinker Creek Greenway. Roanoke Mountain Adventures , and ride from the shop and jump directly on the Roanoke River Greenway. Soon pass Roanoke Mountain Adventures bike shop. Cross the river on trail bridges.

4: History in Virginia - Virginia Is For Lovers

Virginia V, which had been operating for a while on the Seattle-Fort Worden run, was transferred to the Columbia River, where for a brief time she was placed on the Portland-Astoria run, thus becoming the last scheduled passenger steamer running on both Puget Sound and the Columbia River.

History[edit] West Pass Transportation Company[edit] Around the turn of the 20th century outlying communities all over Puget Sound, particularly those on the many islands, were dependent on small boats and ships for delivering goods and basic transportation. The primary shipping lane from Seattle to Tacoma was along the east side of Vashon Island. Farmers and business people along Colvos Passage in Kitsap County and on the west side of Vashon Island were very dissatisfied with the unreliable boat service they received. She was renamed simply Virginia and converted for use as a small ferry. The ship was built of local old-growth fir. She was launched 9 March , and towed to downtown Seattle for the installation of her engine and steam plant. She continued to make this voyage nearly every day until Storm of [edit] Heavy damage to Virginia V caused by October storm. On 21 October , a severe Pacific storm swept through the Puget Sound. Virginia V was attempting to dock at Olalla, Washington , when the brunt of the storm hit. The powerful winds pushed the ship against the dock as the waves pounded the ship into the pilings. The result was the near destruction of the upper decks. She was returned to service on 5 December Thousands of women in the Northwest recall a ride on Virginia Vee as she was affectionately called as the beginning of a camping adventure. Virginia V, which had been operating for a while on the Seattle- Fort Worden run, was transferred to the Columbia River , where for a brief time she was placed on the Portland - Astoria run, thus becoming the last scheduled passenger vessel running on both Puget Sound and the Columbia River. Her Columbia River career was unsuccessful. Her owners were unable to pay her crew and she was libeled legally seized for debts owed and sold at Vancouver, Washington by the U. At the end of a 5-mile 8. Captain Luther sold her to Charles McMahon in McMahon extensively refurbished Virginia V, and then continued to operate her as a commercial excursion vessel around Puget Sound. In James F. Among these was the McNeil Island federal prison tender J. Overlade ex Arcadia , built in , herself one of the last survivors of the Mosquito Fleet. Devenny renamed her Virginia VI to match her more famous running mate. The ship was placed on the National Registry of Historic Sites in , but despite her recognition as historically significant, it was increasingly difficult for her owners to maintain her as a commercial venture. It included a rebuild of the steam engine, construction of a new boiler and rebuild of the superstructure using traditional tongue and groove fir planking. Present day[edit] Virginia V, September Since the Virginia V has been providing public excursions, private charters, and visits to local maritime festivals throughout Puget Sound. Engine and boiler[edit] Triple-expansion steam engine of the Virginia V. The triple-expansion, double-acting, reciprocating steam engine is the original, installed in when it was taken from Virginia IV formerly Tyrus. The parts were cast in at the Heffernan Machine Works in downtown Seattle as one of two identical engines built for the Army. Approximately Cylinder Bore Diameter: Virginia V always used oil as her fuel. The ship originally burned heavy bunker fuel. She was converted to burn 2 Diesel fuel in In recent years, the engine has developed a noise, referred to as "The Squeak". While the cause of this noise is not definitively known, it is presumed to come from the low pressure valve. There are no physical indications of scuffing, galling, or damage to components indicating a metal-to-metal contact. The squeak is more pronounced as the engine warms up, and goes away as the engine speed increases. This fund may also be diverted to a beer fund, at the discretion of the engineer.
