The greater portion of the park cradles Dallas Bay, a great little fishing hole with direct deep water access to the Tennessee River. Chester Frost Park features picnic shelters, an enormous beach, awesome playgrounds, incredible fishing, beautiful campgrounds, boat ramps with adequate parking for boats and trailers , and unbeatable sunsets. Every evening is like a brand new light show. Chester Frost Park is very near Chattanooga and its many attractions. Chattanooga lies at the base of Lookout Mountain on the mighty Tennessee River. Lookout Mountain features numerous tourist attractions that are just cool enough to be "must sees". The Incline Railway , Ruby Falls , and Rock City are classic and historic tourist attractions, all located on the mountain. The city of Chattanooga also has many features that should be seen. The Chattanooga Choo Choo, of course, is a historical old train station with a hotel, restaurant, and sleeper cars. Museums, restaurants, theaters, parks, the river, a great zoo , outdoor concerts, and an awesome bike path also make this part of Chattanooga very nice. For people in the Tennessee Valley region, this is the place you take your kids. The park does not rely on tradition to bring people back though. They have managed to keep the fun atmosphere while honoring the tradition of their past. So, why all this about Chattanooga on the Chester Frost page? Adventure Journal Entry Date: We loved the cavernous living space the Class A provides! Our last camper had lots of sleeping space, but sorely lacked seating. Unfortunately, I had to work much of the week of Fall Break, so Rebecca and the kids were "daddy free" during the days. Each day I drove the 1. It was kind of exhausting, but well worth it. They went to see a movie Gravity , went skating, went shopping, went out to eat, and generally enjoyed a few days of fun. Known as the Scenic City, Chattanooga has virtually everything to offer. A family could spend weeks here and never experience everything the city has to offer. I took off work around noon on Friday, and spent the rest of the weekend at the park fishing, hiking, and relaxing by the fire with the Tribe. On Saturday morning we made a good old fashioned breakfast with biscuits, eggs, and bacon prepared on a Dutch Oven lid on charcoal. It was a lot of fun and the campground smelled delicious! As usual, Chester Frost Park delivered remarkably well at the end of each day. I dare you to find any place that has more beautiful sunsets. Homer II will be missed. So, we packed everything up and headed north. Chester Frost is located on Lake Chickamauga along the banks of the Tennessee River, and Unfortunately, despite record rainfall over the last few months, the lake level was low. The biggest negative is that when the levels are this low, Dallas Bay the body of water surrounding the island we like to camp on is dangerously plagued by obstacles, mostly stumps. That little factor limits boating activities. We found an incredible collection of shells, fossils, agates, quartz, chert, and a geode or two. The rocky shoreline was secluded and looked like a great place for a picnic. During our stay, the kids enjoyed riding their bikes, frequenting the playground, and various other outdoor activities. We played Frisbee quite a lot. As always, fishing was popular, but yielded few results. One of the things the kids love most about Chester Frost is its proximity to Chattanooga. That means things like bowling, movie theaters, a zoo, Ruby Falls, Rock City, the Chattanooga Choo Choo, the Tennessee Aquarium, and dozens of great eating establishments are nearby. On this particular trip, the children discovered sushi. Not the hard-core stuff, but mostly of the veggie variety. We headed back to civilization, chores, work, and school. By the way, you may notice once again that many of my Chester Frost photographs are of sunsets. For that I apologize. All I can say is you will be hard pressed to find a prettier sunset anywhere in the world. April Well, the plans for Spring Break were grand. We would stay at one of our favorite parks, and do as many of the things we could do in Chattanooga in a week. We had the boat, canoes, bikes, fishing poles, and four very entertained kids. We did leave the park for a few things. Rebecca took the kids to play Sir Goony Golf one day. On another day, we visited Lake Winnie , and it was a blast! As the kids get older, the park gets better. For the most part, we fished, played on the beach and playground, fished, rode in the boat, fished, enjoyed the campfire, fished, met lots of new friends that like to fish, and did I mention, we fished. As usual, the sunsets were phenomenal. We got here on Wednesday before Spring Break so we could get a good lakeside site. We ended-up with site which is a large lakeside back-in. I have to mention one of our favorite places to eat while camping at Chester Frost Park. I have to mention it, because we ate there three times this week. Did I mention it was exceptional? I mean, really GOOD! It is close enough to home so I could drive back and forth to work while the wife and kids stayed and had fun. Our initial campsite was horrible, but we saw someone pulling-out of a lakeside site on our first evening, so I got my name on a list. We acquired the site on the morning of the second day, and were much happier. I did have to visit the Home Depot to buy some lumber for leveling. Like most lakeside sites, there was a significant drop-off from the front to rear. Over the course of the week, we fished, swam, and generally had a wonderful time. If we had a boat, we would have enjoyed it that much more.

The Adventures of Chester. K likes. Hi, I'm Chester! I have been adopted by two great parents this is my life now!!! I hope you enjoy my.

Chester is a Glob, and does things that Globbs do, Like sitting and breathing--nothing of interest to you. One day he decided something was missing from his life, Like parents and cousins and friends, maybe even a wife. He wanted to know another friend, another hearty Glob, But he had never seen another, so he began to weep and sob. He stretched and contorted and made two more of him, But alas, he was only talking to himself, the conversation was dim. He cried until it grew to be a river, a sea, Chester badly wanted friends like you and like me. Chester decided one day that he would climb the pole next to the table. Maybe somebody lived at the top, it was a very murky fable. Chester was glad to find that he had reached the pole with his mighty leap, But the way up looked to be hard, and incredibly steep. He climbed up, away from the monster, a terrifying sight. He climbed with strength anew towards the enticing light. Then, in a terrifying instant, Chester slipped a mighty slip, But he hung on to the rim steadfast, with a white-knuckled grip. When his head hit the bottom, it tolled like a bell. But he climbed right back up, in a blind, frenzied craze. Oh, how badly he wanted to find a friendly face! It was a dump, a swamp, and endless quagmire. Oh, where was his family, for whom his love is so dear?! As Chester fought back tears, beginning to weep, He gathered himself for a suicide leap. But, when he landed, he found himself back safe at his home, Distraught, sad, and so terribly alone. He cried for days and he weeped and he sobbed, Yet there was still hope in the eyes Of Chester the Glob. Episode 6 - Will Ends Meet? Chester found himself facing another train attack, The cumbersome engines were giving him no slack. Chester sat and surveyed the chaotic mess. Then he saw the vent, way, way up high. Chester leaped a mighty leap, And started to climb the way so steep.

Origins[ edit ] There are numerous theories about the origins of the phrase "grinning like a Cheshire Cat" in English history. A possible origin of the phrase is one favoured by the people of Cheshire , a county in England which boasts numerous dairy farms; hence the cats grin because of the abundance of milk and cream. This phrase owes its origin to the unhappy attempts of a sign painter of that country to represent a lion rampant, which was the crest of an influential family, on the sign-boards of many of the inns. The resemblance of these lions to cats caused them to be generally called by the more ignoble name. A similar case is to be found in the village of Charlton, between Pewsey and Devizes, Wiltshire. He grins like a Cheshire cat; said of any one who shows his teeth and gums in laughing. On their own, either of these would have been something to grin about. Importantly, the county was described as a "palatinate" from the s and was promoted to be a "principality" in , following the support its men gave King Richard II. No other English county has been honoured in this way or was accorded such unusually wide privileges. These included its own "borderland" laws and taxes, and a considerable measure of independence from national government, which persisted into the sixteenth century. These privileges attracted many who "arrived as fugitives from justice and this seems to have become the principal motivation [for escaping to Cheshire from the Kings laws] as the Middle Ages wore on". At one point, the cat disappears gradually until nothing is left but its grin, prompting Alice to remark that "she has often seen a cat without a grin but never a grin without a cat". As a mathematician, Carroll would have been well familiar with the other meaning of catenary: What kind of a cat can grin? Carroll saw a representative British Shorthair illustrated on a label of Cheshire cheese. Other non-media contexts that embrace the Cheshire Cat include music, business, and science. Eliot had the Cheshire Cat in mind when writing Morning at the Window, but notes no other significant allusions in the pre-war period. See generally the lyrics to White Rabbit by the rock group Jefferson Airplane. He frequently sings the first verse of the Jabberwocky poem. She acts as an ally and friend to Alice. British actor Stephen Fry voices the character. He is blamed by the Hatter for desertion when the White Queen is deposed by the Red; but later impersonates the Hatter when the latter is sentenced to decapitation. Throughout his appearances, "Chess" is able to make himself intangible or weightless, as well as invisible and thus to survive decapitation , and is usually shown in mid-air, at shoulder-height to human-sized characters.

A quiet and quaint little town, snuggled in the folds of the Himalayas, where time seems to have stopped somewhere in the 19th century, lies the hilly hamlet of Mussoorie.

January 29th, I actually love hacking my old cartoons to pieces. My dad was an Artist, capital A. He had gallery shows and sold his original pieces. But I am not an Artist. My art is very functional and directed â€” it has a purpose that is fitted to my writing and my educating, like parts of a rocket that must work together to get the rocket to a specific place. I need editors to get the rocket there in the best way possible. I trained to be a journalist, so for decades I have practiced and welcomed the dynamic between an editor and a creator. If you think your art can be edited, that means it can be changed for the better. I am terribly proud of the work I did for the Daily Press in Virginia when I created Chester in and then produced daily educational comix from to But it was also a mad dash through a burning forest to get all those stories researched, written, rough drafted, edited, drawn, colored and edited again. Looking back now, 15 years later, some of those stories hold up really well. Some of the art is painful for me to look at. This transition work completely challenges my storytelling skills and makes me rethink the point of each panel. The rethinking is so revolutionary that they feel like completely new stories. Some of the changes will be unnoticeable to most readers: I have literally found commas that were backwards! Other changes may be noticeable to the sharp-eyed fans: I can feel the art breathing better. Comix is like alchemy â€” there is a magic to getting just the right balance of words and pictures in each panel and across a whole page. A lot of the changes will be wildly obvious to longtime Chester readers â€” these apps have stories with entirely new panels!! But just as significant has been the turn of the images from vertical to horizontal. My space in the newspaper was vertical, so my storytelling was oriented that way. That seems to fit the flow of historical storytelling better â€” racing across the timeline as you swipe from panel to panel easily. Plus, Chester is wider than he is tall, anyway.

Six months later, Flint humiliates himself during a promotion ceremony when his invention, the "Celebrationator", explodes. Meanwhile, Chester is informed that his search-parties on the island have been attacked by monstrous cheeseburgers named Cheespiders a combination of a Cheeseburger and a Spider which are learning how to swim. Maren is pleased, knowing she can use her boat. Upon arriving back at Swallow Falls, they notice that a jungle-like environment made of food has overgrown the island. Tim stays behind with Maren, while Flint, Hubie and the others investigate, finding a vast habitat of living food animals called foodimals and meet a cute strawberry named Barry named by Sam. Tim and M, searching for sardines at his abandoned tackle shop, along with Maren encounter a family of humanoid pickles and bond with them by fishing. Chester discovers that Flint allowed his friends to join him on the mission, so he travels to the island with Barb, chagrined and determined to separate them, and he arrives just in time to save them from a Cheespider. After escaping a Tacodile attack, Sam and Marina notice that the foodimal was protecting its family, and they both suspect Chester is up to no good. Sam attempts to convince Flint to spare the foodimals, but Flint is intent on making Chester proud. However as they leave, Hubie, Marina and their friends sneak off and follow Flint and Chester, knowing that something fishy is going on. In addition, Sam proves that the foodimals mean no harm by taming a Cheespider. They also learn that the foodimals had known the truth about Live Corp before. A crushed Flint is knocked into the river. Hubie, Marina and the others watch in horror. They hurry to save him, only to lose Zazu who gets snatched away by three hyenas, Shenzi, Banzai and Ed. They had been secretly working for Chester the whole time. Hubie and Marina manage to find them moments later, but are too late when Zazu is shoved into a geyser birdie boiler and blasted off into the sky. Buck forces Hubie, Marina and Rocko into the river to save Flint while he and the others are surrounded and captured by Evil Corp. While Maren is having coffee, Zazu collides into her boat. They see that Hubie, Marina and Rocko have managed to rescue Flint and they bring him to his father. After explaining the bad news, they and the foodimals all work together to allow Flint, Barry, Hubie and his friends to infiltrate the Evil Corp building that is under construction on the island. Afterwards, Flint, Hubie and his friends confronts Chester, who threatens to make food bars out of their friends. The hyenas arrive one again to attack our heroes, but are no match and they flee for their lives. The film ends with Flint fishing with his father for the first time, finding it enjoyable. Not long after, Maren takes Hubie, Marina and their friends to their next destination. She and Zazu say goodbye to them and reassure that they will cross paths again in the future. After they leave, Hubie and his friends are left teary-eyed, but happy.
