3 Suppose you could do some great thing, which I am sure you cannot, and it were possible that you could from now on be perfect, and never sin again in thought, or word, or deed; how would you be able to atone for your.

This article focuses on the ten most important job interviewing tips for jobseekers. You should understand the employer, the requirements of the job, and the background of the person or people interviewing you. Review Common Interview Questions and Prepare Your Responses Another key to interview success is preparing responses to expected interview questions. First, ask the hiring manager as to the type of interview to expect. Will it be one-on-one or in a group? Will it be with one person, or will you meet several members of the organization? A good tool for remembering your responses is to put them into a story form that you can tell in the interview. There are excellent tools available to help you with interview questions and responses. Dress for Success Plan out a wardrobe that fits the organization and its culture, striving for the most professional appearance you can accomplish. Keep accessories and jewelry to a minimum. Arrive on Time, Relaxed and Prepared for the Interview There is no excuse ever for arriving late to an interview. Short of a disaster, strive to arrive about 15 minutes before your scheduled interview to complete additional paperwork and allow yourself time to get settled. Arriving a bit early is also a chance to observe the dynamics of the workplace. The day before the interview, pack up extra copies of your resume or CV and reference list. If you have a portfolio or samples of your work, bring those along too. Finally, remember to pack several pens and a pad of paper to jot notes. Finally, as you get to the offices, shut off your cell phone. And if you were chewing gum, get rid of it. Remember that having a positive attitude and expressing enthusiasm for the job and employer are vital in the initial stages of the interview; studies show that hiring managers make critical decisions about job applicants in the first 20 minutes of the interview. Be Authentic, Upbeat, Focused, Confident, Candid, and Concise Once the interview starts, the key to success is the quality and delivery of your responses. Your goal should always be authenticity, responding truthfully to interview questions. Always attempt to keep your interview responses short and to the point. Finally, no matter how much an interviewer might bait you, never badmouth a previous employer, boss, or co-worker. Effective forms of body language include smiling, eye contact, solid posture, active listening, and nodding. Detrimental forms of body language include slouching, looking off in the distance, playing with a pen, fidgeting in a chair, brushing back your hair, touching your face, chewing gum, or mumbling. Thus, even if the hiring manager was thorough in his or her discussions about the job opening and what is expected, you must ask a few questions. This shows that you have done your research and that you are curious. The smart jobseeker prepares questions to ask days before the interview, adding any additional queries that might arise from the interview. Sell Yourself and then Close the Deal The most qualified applicant is not always the one who is hired; the winning candidate is often the jobseeker who does the best job responding to interview questions and showcasing his or her fit with the job, department, and organization. Some liken the job interview to a sales call. Finally, as the interview winds down, ask about the next steps in the process and the timetable in which the employer expects to use to make a decision about the position. Thank Interviewer s in Person, by Email, or Postal Mail Common courtesy and politeness go far in interviewing; thus, the importance of thanking each person who interviews you should come as no surprise. Start the process while at the interview, thanking each person who interviewed you before you leave. Final Thoughts on Job Interview Success Succeeding in job interviews takes research, practice, and persistence. To view the original version of this article please click Here. 2: Ariana Grande's Advice For Engagement Ring Seekers Is Simply "Don't"

In Advice for Seekers, legendary pastor and man of faith Charles Spurgeon offers timeless wisdom for those who have gotten lost in their faith walk by using the map.

Not always, but frequently. Some of the oldest hymns contain the greatest spiritual truths. Many of the oldest cathedrals contain the greatest beauty. And some of the oldest books contain the deepest insights into the Word of God. Advice for Seekers is one of those that rank with the best. Written by Charles Haddon Spurgeon, and originally released in 1855, Spurgeon relates some of the most foundational spiritual realities in a way that is sometimes the greatest things come in the oldest packages. Written by Charles Haddon Spurgeon, and originally released in 1855, Spurgeon relates some of the most foundational spiritual realities in a way that is both deep and profound, and yet simple to understand, especially to his contemporaries. Since the writing style has changed over the last century, and not always for the better, you may have to slow down to read Spurgeon. His words carry weight and wisdom, and they make you think. Reprinted by Attic Books, an imprint of New Leaf Press, Advice For Seekers is an excellent volume, full of insight, and small enough to carry with you, or give to a friend. Advice For Seekers is full of several short essays, primarily focused on reaching out to those seeking Christ. Although that may look different today than it did over one hundred years ago, the truths contained in these pages is the same. Writing about such topics as faith, salvation, sin and redemption, Spurgeon reminds his readers that we cannot do this on our own. He shows us that we need to rest in the light of Christ for our help. We must trust in the one who made us to rescue us from out of our own miry pits. Spurgeon does his best to answer these questions, providing assurance for the seeker and the disciple alike. Several passages have been added to my file full of quotes, and I suspect certain parts of this book will even turn up in my own teaching. Especially if you make sure to take the time to slow down your reading and pull every morsel of truth contained in these pages. Disclosure of Material Connection: I was not required to write a positive review. The opinions I have expressed are my own. Every paragraph glories in Him, every phrase sings of His mercies, every sermon exalts the Lord, every chapter crowns Him loving King. His breathtaking use of language to explain such rich theology stirs the heart. What a gift this man had! This book is beautifully written and Advice for Seekers is pure Spurgeon, and if you have ever encountered Spurgeon anywhere you know his writing has one heart: This book is beautifully written and crystal clear to understand. If I had to give one book to the man questioning how to come to the Cross, asking what sort of Savior Jesus is, wondering if He will be accepted by the Lord, I would give Advice for Seekers. For the one who knows Christ, reading this book is like reading love-letters that remind you of the earlier days of your conversion and how sweet these truths are. His love for Christ is like a great flame shining out of everything he wrote. It warms you as you read. A final word on this edition: Old fashioned black type, thick, rough edged pages, and a sturdy cover. The only thing this book is missing is the old book smell. I am blessed to receive this book from New Leaf Publishing to review. Click Here to view the inside of this book and read the first pages. Attic Books has done it again – produced a new, reprinted version of the book that looks like a classic book. The pages have that ragged torn look even though they are heavy and well made. The print is easy to read, but it still has the old book feel to it. Because this book was recreated from the original Words of Adv Before I dig into the content of Advice for Seekers, I need to point out the physical appearance of this book. Spurgeon, it maintains the original spelling and style. Spurgeon does not mince words in this book. As pastor recently said, you might want to make sure you have your steel toe boots on when you start reading. For me, this is encouraging. I want someone to tell me like it is. I want them to make me think, make me truly reflect on the Lord and His teachings which are contained within the Bible. Spurgeon is not luke warm in his stand for the gospel of Christ.

Advice for Seekers is a book by Charles Haddon Spurgeon () recently reprinted by Attic Books, a division of New Leaf Publishing Group. Unlike some reprints that have been done by other publishers, this one is a true reproduction.

By attending to how they appear electronically and virtually, older job seekers will reduce the unfair assumptions that hiring managers might otherwise make about their suitability. With Facebook, Instagram, YouTube, Twitter, LinkedIn and Snapchat in the present and older but still active platforms like Tumblr and MySpace still online, it is easy to overlook an older but eternal presence. Job seekers must regularly Google themselves to ensure that inappropriate images or comments cannot be attributed to them. This may require the recovery of usernames and passwords and the deletion of older tweets and online comments. It is not just politically motivated "mobs" that mine old web pages for dirt on celebrities and politicians. Recruiters and hiring managers increasingly explore the information depths of the internet to learn about applicants and to manage the potential downside liability of hiring the wrong person. When in doubt if a comment is inappropriate, ask a colleague or friend and try to imagine how a given reader might interpret or even misinterpret what you have written. Think through political, ethnic, gender and sexual orientation lenses to make sure that no one will dismiss your job skills based on extraneous factors. Employers get nervous when they see a button-down image on one platform and partier on another. A common headshot and personal description will help. Also, on social platforms like Facebook, regularly inventory your privacy settings to reduce access to friends only. Sometimes career fair promoters or other job search events will feature a professional photo booth for this purpose. Otherwise, pony up the cash for a high quality and flattering professional headshot. A blurry or inappropriate candid photo will quickly disqualify an otherwise good candidate from a visually perceptive hiring manager. Likewise, it is OK for your photo to be a couple of years old, but no one will be fooled by the insertion of an "ancient" yearbook photo. Furthermore, a whimsical email name like CoolGuy or LadyKillerZ will distract the recipient from your true value. Instead, create a fresh email address that you use only for the job search with a simple moniker like JSmith Approach former supervisors, peers and subordinates to request that they complete these for you and volunteer to do the same for them. Most recommendation writers also appreciate some prompts as to what to write. For example, you might tell the proposed recommender, "I would appreciate it if you could write something about my attention to detail and analytical abilities being of high quality. You may remember the work we did together in saving the XYZ account back in August This will signal that the older job seeker understands the difference between a generally immutable format and an editable one like Microsoft Word. Furthermore, using PDFs will prevent the delivering of unreadable files that sometimes occurs when transferring documents between PC and Apple products. Job search in the modern age is at once more convenient but also more complex. There are more potential missteps from the days when job seekers simply had to speak well on the phone and check their cover letters and resumes for typographical errors.

4: Technological Advice for Older Job Seekers

Many struggle to accept the gift of God's love for lack of understanding. Charles Spurgeon, known as the "prince of preachers," offers Scriptural truths to help you grasp the simplicity of the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

As annoying as being bombarded by advice from the entire peanut gallery can be, real, qualified advice can be priceless. With that in mind, here are some tips from professional career coaches, HR consultants and career experts. You never know when you might need it. You begin by engaging in some form of assessment. It could involve taking a standardized assessment instrument, keeping a journal or talking with people whose advice and feedback you value – friends, family, or a career coach. The goal is to achieve self-awareness in the form of a career target. The next, and equally important, step is a reality check. Here is where you determine that the goal you selected makes sense. Is it appropriate for you and is it attainable? What is your ideal time-frame for finding a new job? When will you perform job searches – is there a day of the week that you will meet for coffee with your networking connections? Post the plan somewhere you will see it and put important dates on your calendar. From there, the resume tweaking, network building and LinkedIn optimizing become a lot easier and more effective. For many roles, hiring managers are looking for people who will be quickly deployable to do the work and usually the tasks you need to complete on a regular basis are learned or refined on the job. If you meet the majority of the qualifications for a job you are interested in and are confident you can quickly learn the remainder, apply for that job, but make sure your resume demonstrates your past success in learning new skills. Hiring managers are bombarded with hundreds of resumes that come in through the internet. But, then think about what you can also do offline. For example, do you have contacts at the company that you could network with? Could you reach out to the hiring manager directly? When you connect to the company offline, you become a real person! These straightforward offline steps will put you in the fast lane when it comes to hiring. And you only do that by cultivating professional relationships and acting from a place of authenticity and integrity. Like attracts like, and people who are themselves authentic and trustworthy are looking to hire and work with people who show the same commitment to a positive work environment – show in every interaction you are the type of colleague or boss who keeps her word, values the team and contributes to a positive work environment! Focus on people and opportunities will open up. With the increased use of online applicant tracking systems even among smaller companies, it means the recruiter or hiring manager may not see your resume unless you use just the right keywords! Referrals [also] increase the likelihood that a recruiter will see your resume.

Check out what advice others shared with us to pass along to job seekers here on our blog. Finding a job is easier said than done. While you may know to submit a professional résumé, write a thoughtful cover letter and practice before an interview, sometimes you still don't get the job.

Letters Advice for Seekers Immerse yourself in the Scriptures. Follow the example of the Bereans in Acts. They both diligently studied and searched the Scriptures to know for themselves the truth of Scripture. They were not content to know Scripture in a second hand manner. Ryle encourages us to do the same: That blessed book is given to be a light to our feet, and a lantern to our path. No man who reads it reverently, prayerfully, humbly, and regularly, shall ever be allowed to miss the way to heaven. By it every sermon, and every religious book, and every ministry ought to be weighed and proved. Would you know what is the truth? Do you feel confused and puzzled by the war of words which you hear on every side about religion? Do you know what you ought to believe, and what you ought to be and do, in order to be saved? Take down your Bible, and cease from man. Read your Bible with earnest prayer for the teaching of the Holy Ghost; read it with honest determination to abide by its lessons. Do so steadily and perseveringly, and you shall see light: The way to do a thing is to do it. Act upon this advice without delay. As you do so be mindful of several factors that can become an obstacle to arriving at a correct understanding of Scripture. Allegorical interpretations of Scripture

“Allegorizing Scripture occurs when one applies a meaning to a passage of Scripture that the original author never intended. For example, in Genesis 6: Some have said that the pitch represents sin in our lives. However, such an interpretation can not be justified from Scripture. No where does Scripture say that the black pitch represents our sin. A person can make the Bible say anything that they want in order to justify virtually any belief. To avoid this pitfall it is vital that one use good hermeneutics. Catechism preaching

The danger of this is that you use the catechism as your starting point and then use the Scripture to support the points in the catechism. However, it should be the other way around where the Scripture is your starting point and then, if needed, you use outside sources to support your points. What can result is that the catechism develops an authority equal to that of Scripture. After centuries of the Roman Catholic Church elevating various creeds and traditions to a level that was equal to or beyond the authority of Scripture, the Reformers reestablished the foundational principle of sola scriptura meaning the Bible is the sole authority for faith and practice within the church. Over the last several centuries many godly men and women have used the KJV with great profit to their soul. However, all languages are dynamic and change over time. The English used today is not the same as what was used years ago. It is the opinion of this author that the use of KJV can present a barrier to developing an accurate understanding of the Bible due to its use of archaic words. A Plea for Realism by D. Carson Baker Book House, Recognize the authority of Scripture. Confessions and catechisms are subordinate standards and must continually be interpreted in light of Scripture. We must remember that the Confessions are only subordinate standards. They are not of equal authority with the Scriptures, and we must be careful lest we allow ourselves to be jockeyed into positions in which we are just defending the Confessions of those two centuries at all costs and not facing the realities and the practicalities of the situation in which we find ourselves in this present age and generation. The American Presbyterians seem to me to provide us with a most instructive and excellent example at this point. The American Presbyterians in the 18th century did not hesitate to modify the Westminster Confession. They modified it over the question of the relationship between the church and the State. Now that, to me, is spiritual and biblical thinking. The Westminster Confession was not divinely inspired, and we must be free. We must use these Confessions of Faith as guides and not allow them to be tyrants. They are not to be rigid codes which we must never vary or change in any respect. Let us use them, let us thank God for them, but let us claim that as Christian people we are born again, that we have the Spirit, and are equally capable of determining the teaching of the Scriptures and the true doctrine with regard to the church. We must remember that in all these Confessions “I trust I have brought this out” there was that historical element; there was the factor of the historical condition at that time because of their peculiar circumstances, and therefore I argue that it would be wrong for us to insist upon adhering to them always in all points and details. We have got to recognize the historical element, and so must examine the Confessions in light of Scripture. The church must go on being Reformed and she must continue to put herself under the Scriptures. There is surely a great misuse of the Confessions today. Some are dishonestly paying lip-service to them, and then just throwing them into the Museum. And there are others, it seems to me, who are fighting a rear-guard action by hiding behind them. I suggest that these are two very bad uses of the Confessions and that the honest thing to do is to examine them in light of Scripture, and to realize that God calls upon us to do this in our day and generation, even as He called the Protestant Reformers to do so and the Fathers in the 17th century. I am urging this for this reason, that if we do not avoid the mistake into which they fell we shall also fail; and we have to avoid, in particular, this tragic mistake of going to extremes, and insisting upon particulars which are non-essential, in a rigorous manner. If you trust Him by trusting His Word there is no need to be afraid even if thousands should oppose you Psalm 3: Who do you fear? The fear of man often prevents people from drawing conclusions that are contrary to the beliefs of friends and family around them. It is vital to recognize that the fear of man is a deadly snare: No man can take this joy away from you. If you do arrive at a conclusion that is contrary to NRC belief and you feel that it is a biblical conclusion, be prepared for the reality of massive family and social pressure to remain faithful to the NRC. Prepare yourself ahead of time for this. Continually pray that the Holy Spirit would give light to enable you and others to understand the Scriptures better. Your responsibility is, in a kind and gentle way, present the truth to them and leave the results in the hands of the Holy Spirit. By reading church history you will be able to put the NRC in historical context and will quickly discover that the problems in the NRC today are not unique. Other churches and denominations in the past have fallen into the same or similar errors. So church history is invaluable to the preacher. It is not the preserve of academics. I would say that Church history is one of the most essential studies for the preacher were it merely to show him this terrible danger of slipping into heresy, or into error, without realising that anything has happened to him. The first 25 years of his life was fairly typical of other Roman Catholics of his day. After graduating from Merton College, Oxford in he took a vow of celibacy and for the next 21 years lived as a monk. However, he did not last long in this role. Due to persecution that arose from his reformed beliefs he was forced to flee to the Continent and remained there for almost 10 years. After the death of Henry the VIII in he felt compelled to return to England to support the work of the reformation in his own country. Upon his return his spiritual leadership abilities were soon recognized and was selected as a candidate to fill the vacant role as the Bishop of Gloucester. The vestments he objected to as remnants of Popery, which ought to be clean put away. He believed that much more was at stake than merely what sort of clothes a pastor can or can not wear. Ryle, says that he saw the long term impact of this vow to a much greater degree than any of his contemporaries. He looked further ahead than they did, and saw the possibility of evils arising in the Church of England, of which they in their charity never dreamed. He foresaw, with prophetic eye, the immense peril of leaving nest-eggs for future Romanism with our pale. He would not have left a single peg on which Romanizing Churchmen could have rehung the abominable doctrine of the Mass. It is my decided opinion that he was quite right. Events have supplied abundant proof that his conscientious scruples were well founded. Another example is Charles Spurgeon. For my part, I am quite willing to be eaten by dogs for the next fifty years; but the more distant future shall vindicate me. Regarding church history, read everything you can on the subject of genuine revival. If you are not familiar with this subject and would like to learn more the Suggested Reading page has a few suggestions on where you can start. Look at the periods in church history when the Holy Spirit was moving with great power and compare those times with our own. In times of revival, the church is influencing the world, rather than the world influencing the church. The church is healthy, God glorifying, repentant, and fearlessly preaching and teaching according to sound doctrine. Often the church was influencing the world rather than the world influencing the church. Many of the characteristics that exist today in the churches are not the result of the Spirit of God but are due to the absence of the Spirit of God. Finally, pray for the Holy Spirit! Pray that He would come in a mighty, mighty way. Incidentally, the initial prayer meetings at the beginning of that revival were held in the consistory room of the Old North Dutch Church on Fulton Street in New York City. History has given ample evidence that God can in a very, very rapid period of time can radically change a desperate, hopeless situation into something above and beyond anything imagined. Manifestations of this nature bring great glory to God. No person, no church is beyond the power of God! There is hope for everyone! The majority of the books by these authors have been published by publishers such as Banner of Truth Trust, and Soli Deo Gloria.

The following is some advice on how Seekers should conduct themselves if they wish to develop a connection with a Craft Teacher. Remember, the number of covens offering training are few and we all know each other.

We wish to engage only with Seekers who can demonstrate a serious interest in moving forward on their path. Only those with a thirst for learning and a true devotion to the Gods of the Witches are suited for this life-long commitment. We have no interest in those seeking a social outlet or those simply seeking somewhere to belong because they do not fit in elsewhere. If you are sincerely seeking a Witchcraft Tradition, to experience the Mysteries, then a conversation may begin. Do not contact us if you have not undertaken some research and developed a good general knowledge of contemporary Paganism and Witchcraft. A suitable candidate is expected to have already read at least three books on contemporary Paganism and Witchcraft. For a suggested reading list please click here. Do not make contact if you experience anxiety about your body image or have an issue with being naked in the company of others. Do not make any contact if your life is currently in chaos. The following is some advice on how Seekers should conduct themselves if they wish to develop a connection with a Craft Teacher. Remember, the number of covens offering training are few and we all know each other. If you are seriously seeking a Craft path the onus is on you as a Seeker to introduce yourself to the Teacher you wish to connect with. Present yourself in an open, honest and reasonable manner. We do not respond to queries from those using pseudonyms so be open about who you are. You must state your age and indicate which town or city you reside in. You must provide a recent photograph or link to an online profile. You should be able to explain why you are interested in a particular tradition over others, please see above menu for further information on the traditions we offer training in. Be open to describing your spiritual path to date and any personal practice you may have. You must list the specific books you have read on relevant topics. Your introduction should be a lengthy and considered expression of interest. E-mails will go unanswered if they are one liners, lack personal introductions, or are of a demanding nature. If a Teacher takes the time to respond to a query, the Seeker should have the courtesy to reply swiftly and maintain consistency in their communications with the Teacher. If the Seeker fails to do so the Teacher may decline future requests for contact. Seekers will be asked questions by Teachers to help understand where Seekers are on their journey. Seekers should answer these directly; minimalist and vague responses will likely result in the Teacher disengaging. It is very important that Seekers have begun the internal work of letting go of the baggage of Christian conditioning, and are fully aware of what they may be stepping into; an experiential path which includes a process of acculturation. This is why Seekers are expected to have undertaken some research and have a good general knowledge of contemporary Paganism and Witchcraft. The onus is on the Seeker to progress their journey. Teachers do not spoon-feed. Depending on how correspondence progresses, a Teacher may be open to a meeting requested by the Seeker. This may be the first of many meetings in what can be a lengthy meet-and-greet process before a decision is made on acceptance for training. This may take weeks, months or more than a year depending on the individual and where they are in life. This time allows for a Teacher and Seeker to get to know each other first, so that the Teacher can be assured of the suitability and sincerity of the individual seeking the tradition, and whether the Seeker would be a suitable addition to the coven. A Seeker should be able to demonstrate self-care, personal integrity and commitment. Seekers are expected to demonstrate their knowledge of contemporary Paganism and Witchcraft at length during the meet-and-greet process. The Seeker will discuss the particular books they have read, their understanding of various Pagan paths, different Witchcraft traditions and well known Elders. Teachers of the Craft are not obliged to accept anyone for training. If deemed a suitable candidate and accepted for training, a Seeker will undergo a Neophyte training phase in preparation for initiation into the Craft. The Seeker will attend Full Moon and other rituals throughout the annual cycle. All training comes by way of instruction and skyclad ritual nudity practice in a coven setting. Seekers residing in other countries must be able to commit to very regular travel on a long-term basis or consider relocation. The Neophyte phase will last for a minimum of twelve months during which the candidate will be required to follow instruction, read at least three more books on Occult matters, and complete all assigned tasks. Candidates are assessed for suitability throughout this process after which there is absolutely no guarantee of initiation. There is no entitlement to the privilege of initiation. Those accepted are chosen by Elders whose wisdom is guided by our Gods. Seekers who meet the above criteria are welcome to submit a considered expression of interest to temenostacarman gmail.
