On board ship from Holland with Jan van Riebeeck on the Drommedaris, they encounter storms, then doldrums, a pirate ship attack and then a legendary phantom ship! Based on the historical events of , the authors have made the past come alive by liberally imagining all sorts of humorous events for this family at sea! It will captivate both first and second language Afrikaans readers between ages This is a great book to add to the Footprints On Our Land programme and will be a good match for the lapbook about The Dutch at the Cape! Sample from Hendrik Leerdam Seereis na die Kaap Read more about the rest of series of Afrikaans historical fiction that is planned by the creators of this book. This story focuses on the flight of one family in particular and makes this period of history come alive. This story is suitable for ages 8 and upwards. While the flames are still burning, Helena starts up a patriotic Afrikaans song on the piano which had been carried out into the garden before the British soldiers set fire to the house. Dirkie, Drika, Frederika â€” Franci Greyling Dirkie, an Afrikaans farm girl, wishes that she could also go on commando with her father and brothers during the South African War. It sounds so exciting in comparison with the monotonous life on the farm. One day, she and her mother, grandfather and younger brothers have to leave for the sake of their safety. They pack their wagon and an adventure begins. You may want to pre-read this to see if it is acceptable for your family. He forms a partnership with a young Afrikaner. The story reflects the exciting life during this time in the late 19th century. Since the story centres on two young adults, this gripping story is most suited for teens. Eiland in die Wind, Empie Maritz This mystery adventure takes place on Robben Island during the time when it was used as a hospital for lepers and the insane. A boy who landed there after a shipwreck discovers that the woman he has always considered to be his mother, is not his real mother. There are also other secrets on the islandâ€¦! Plek van Dolfyne, Maretha Maartens A black boy from the Free State goes on holiday with a white family and a group of elderly folk from their community. Trekspoor in die Wildernis, John Coetzee A young boy, Kobus and his Uncle set off to find out what happened to a company of family friends who trekked away from their hometown, Schoemansdal at the foot of the Soutpansberg. Their journey leads them on an adventure through the wild Bushveld of the Save and Buzi riviers of Mozambique. This story is based on true events. Looking Back This is a picture book for younger children about children on the Great Trek. They are also taught that men should not look back but look ahead â€” an echo of a Biblical principle.
