See inspiring examples of a movement-rich life from our readers! A Day in a Movement-Rich Life Movement can be incorporated into your daily routine, not only for more movement but for the benefits movement brings to your life. Here's a glimpse of a day in my family's movement-rich lifestyle.

However, there are times when it takes much more strength to know when to let go and then do it. The universe around you is changing. This could be a relationship, a job, a home, a habit, etc. It happens to you slowly as you grow. You discover more about who you are and what you want out of life, and then you realize there are deliberate changes you need to make to keep up with the changes happening around you and within you. So you cherish all the memories, but find yourself letting go and moving on. This feeling is normal. In other words, who you spend your time with has a great impact on the person you are and the person you become. If you are around cynical and negative people all the time, you will become cynical and negative. You have grown apart from someone. As time goes on they will prove over and over again that they are committed to misunderstanding you and clashing with your needs. You are truly unhappy with your current circumstances. Your goals and needs have changed. Fear is holding you back. You catch yourself living in the past. The mental space you create by letting go of things that are already behind you gives you the ability to fill the space with something fresh and fun. An old grudge is still hurting you. All positive change is the end result of learning. He believed there was one right way to do things – go to college, get a degree, get a job, and dedicate every waking moment of your life to it. I had other plans. I have one too. Years later, our relationship is now a mere shadow of what it was and my life is honestly far brighter for it. Accept the truth and be thankful. Distance yourself for a while. The best way to do this is to simply take a break and explore something else for a while. So you can return to where you started and see things with a new set of eyes. And the people there may see you differently too. Returning where you started is entirely different than never leaving. Focus only on what can be changed. Claim ownership and full control of your life. You are in full control of your life so long as you claim it and own it. Through the grapevine, you may have learned that you should blame your parents, your teachers, your mentors, the education system, the government, etc. Then nurture these things and make positive adjustments until your current life can no longer contain them, forcing you to grow and move beyond your current circumstances. Change the people around you. They are supposed to be part of your memory, not your destiny. The challenge will not wait even if you hesitate. Life only moves in one direction – forward. This challenge is your chance to let go of the old and make way for the new. Your destiny awaits your decision. Read The Untethered Soul. Figure out what the next positive step is, no matter how small or difficult, and take it. Ultimately, the only thing you can ever really do is to keep moving forward. Take that leap without hesitation, without looking back. Simply forget the past, look straight ahead and forge toward the future. Share your thoughts with us by leaving a comment below.

2: Should You Move? Take our Quiz and Find out! | Livability

Based on the moving plan you created, now is the time to remove anything that is going to get in the way. Remove doors from hinges or taking off stair railings. Get any lingering furniture out of the way, so you have a clear shot out of the house and onto the moving truck.

Disruption of our Plans The Apostle Paul had received an apostolic commission to preach the gospel to the Gentiles. In keeping with his mandate, he targeted key cities in the Roman Empire to visit. Yet, the New Testament narrative informs us that on at least one occasion he was not able to fulfill his objective because God saw fit to stop him. When they came near Mysia, they tried to go into Bithynia, but the Spirit did not allow them" Acts Like Paul the apostle, while attempting to do the will of the Lord, perhaps you were heading down a certain roadway and you ended up "hitting a wall" and were stopped in your tracks. From that point on, no matter how hard you worked, you were incapable of making significant progress. Initiatives and projects that were originally inspired by a lofty vision and deep passion ended up languishing, some of them even terminating. When stuck at an impasse, it is a natural tendency to return to familiar surroundings. They went back to fishing even though they had clearly been mandated to forsake their vocation and follow Christ See Luke 5: Because they were commercial fishermen, there may even have been economic motives behind their actions. Nevertheless, we see clearly that there was no lasting provision and no permanent peace in returning to past environments. When God leads us out of a place of familiarity and the way forward is blocked, what is the solution? There are some breakthroughs reserved for us that can only be accessed through prayer. We must seek God until we receive a clear answer from heaven. Dissipation of Resources When God wants us to move in a new direction, He may also permit us to experience the dissipation of resources. Elijah had been powerfully used by the Lord to declare prophetically the purpose of God in dealing with Israel. During the famine, God looked after Elijah. He gave him specific instruction relative to how he would be sustained. And it will be that you shall drink from the brook, and I have commanded the ravens to feed you there. The ravens brought him bread and meat in the morning, and bread and meat in the evening; and he drank from the brook" 1 Kings Cherith which means "place of covenant," was where the Lord demonstrated His faithfulness in taking care of Elijah. However, the day would come when the brook would run dry and the birds would no longer fly see 1 Kin. Although Elijah had come to depend on such provision, God seemed to have no compunction at all cutting off these resources. Have you experienced something similar? Your streams of resource have dried up. You struggle to make ends meet and you do not know how you are going to keep going. During such a time, trust that the Lord will soon speak to you like He did to Elijah. More than a cute cliché, you will see that the place where He leads you will be the place where He feeds you. Where the Lord guides, He provides! Dissolution of Relationships A third way the Lord works to set us in motion in a new direction is through the dissolution of certain relationship. We see this clearly in the life of David. The heart of King Achish, once favorable to David, turned away from him. For to this day I have not found evil in you since the day of your coming to me. Nevertheless the lords do not favor you. An unanticipated meltdown in a relationship can cause great pain. Abandonment and unanswered questions will naturally follow. One vital truth to come to grips with is that God will on occasion send certain people into our lives for a short season or perhaps even a brief encounter. God-sanctioned, transitory connections, though nonsustainable, serve a purpose in facilitating the plan of the Lord. Here is a powerful truth to embrace when a key connection you value has dissolved for no apparent legitimate reason: The Lord is turning the hearts of men in the direction He desires Prov. Therefore, do not take the matter personally and become bitter with people as though they are rejecting you. Does it seem to you that God has messed up your plans? Have resources dried up? Has a relationship disintegrated? Scripture even attests to this reality. This is because the LORD possesses infinite knowledge and perfect wisdom. He is eternal, Almighty and omniscient. He sees the end from the beginning and is completely aware of the final outcome of all things. No matter how it may appear on the surface, He is actively involved in the affairs of our lives. On occasion, He may even interrupt our plans resulting in us experiencing a sense of anxiety due to a perceived loss of control. However, as uncomfortable as we may become, we must trust that He is leading us along the best pathway for our lives. Trusting God at all times is a non-negotiable prerequisite for living supernaturally in the kingdom! Glenn Bleakney is the founder and president of Awake Nations Ministries. - Some people come into your life just to strengthen you, so you can move on without them. They are supposed to be part of your memory, not your destiny. The bottom line is that when you have to start compromising your happiness and your potential for the people around you, it's time to change the people around you.

Inspiration when you need it. We keep moving forward, opening up new doors and doing new things. Some are cheap shots, some are glancing blows and some can bring you to your knees. It is interesting where inspiration can be found at times. Our son, Andrew, bought the Rocky Series not long ago. This DVD set contains all six Rocky movies. Recently, I had an opportunity to watch the last movie in the series, Rocky Balboa, with my son. The movie contains a very poignant scene between Rocky and his son. The message Rocky delivers is one of hope, courage and determination when life hits hard: This scene is a great reminder that character is not defined by what happens to you, but rather by how you react to what happens to you. When you get hit, do you stay down? Or do you reach down somewhere deep inside of you and pull up the courage that lifts you back on your feet to keep moving forward? You do have a choice. Forget Regret Leave your mistakes and regret in the past. When you stay in the past you become stuck and unable to move forward. We all have made mistakes with our job choices, friends and relationships. The consequences can hit us pretty hard. However, to begin learning how to put these experiences behind us “ by letting them go, we can begin to live in the here and now. Give yourself the gift of forgiveness and keep moving forward. Learn from Failure Learning from failure and having regret are two separate things. Regret is an emotion; a feeling of disappointment along with a modest amount of shame or guilt. But to look back at a circumstance and figure out what went wrong gives you some very important information. Often when you are removed from a situation, you can look at it more objectively which will allow you to make better choices to keep moving forward. Ask for Help You are not alone. It may feel that way sometimes, but there are many people who would extend their hand and lift you up if asked. All you have to do is ask. Consider co-workers, neighbors, or your church. A hand to grasp, a shoulder to cling, and a face to radiate hope can help you to keep moving forward. Believe You are Worthy Whatever your goal, your dream, or your desire, you are worthy of achieving it. The closer you get to it is when the enemy of you soul will begin putting doubt in your mind by playing the self-limiting tapes that say you are not worthy. Your career, your relationships and your happiness are all under your direct control. But the real pain is only deferred. You have to live with yourself. In order to move forward in life, you need a firm foundation to step from. Understanding what and where you want to go in life will provide your vision and spirit “ your foundation. The how will figure itself out when you know you want to keep moving forward. Trust There are no accidents without value. When you get hit hard and land on your back, look for the reasons and for the value in this. Open your heart and trust this happened for a reason. Perhaps it was to test your determination or to alert you to the fact you were on the wrong path. Either way, trust the experience is happening for a reason and be open to making adjustments in order to keep moving forward. Want it More How badly do you want it? How badly do you really want to achieve what you are working so hard to accomplish? When you get hit hard, you have an opportunity to answer this question. But to walk through the pain; to get up and keep moving forward knowing there may be more pain ahead, is a test of your determination and resolve. Keep the Faith Faith: A strong belief in something without proof or evidence At the end of the day when you are weary from all of the effort and energy you have expended and you are sore and tired from being hit hard so many times, but the dream is not realized, the one thing that tells you to keep going; to get up tomorrow and to keep moving forward, is your faith. Honor this and cherish it. Faith is what makes you human. It gives you energy and hope. And if you let it, your faith will deliver you to wherever you want to go in life. Right-click an object and select Edit. This opens the Build window to the Object tab. Choose Move to enable the Position function. Clicking on the red X , green Y , and blue Z arrows lets you drag the object only along those axes. Rotating Right-click an object and select Edit. Choose Rotate in the Build window to bring up the rotation sphere. Click and drag anywhere within the sphere to rotate the object freely along all three axes. Resizing Right-click an object and select Edit. Choose Stretch from the Build window to bring up the sizing box. Click and drag one of the white corner boxes to scale the entire object proportionally. If Stretch Both Sides is unchecked, the opposite corner remains in place. If unchecked, the textures retain their original size. If you are downsizing, you will see only as much of the original texture as fits on the smaller object. Entering specific values Under the Object tab shown above , enter specific X, Y, and Z coordinates to move, re-size, or rotate the object. Changes to these values are always based on the center of the object the point where the red, green and blue axes meet. Advanced edits The Object tab offers several additional options for editing basic prim shapes. Here are some common examples: Takes out a slice of the object along its Z axis. You can specify where the cut starts and ends. Puts a hollow center in the object starting from the center of the shape and expanding out. You can specify what percentage of the radius is hollow. Puts twists into the object, warping its shape as well as texture alignment. Reduces the size of the top or bottom sides x or y axes, negative or positive of the prim. You can shift the X and Y axes separately. Cuts a hole in a sphere from ring of latitude you specify the percentage to the top or bottom of the Z axis. The dimple cuts straight to the origin of the object leaving a cone-shaped hole. Three useful features You may find the following features useful as you build and move objects: Show Light Radius for Selection - This feature shows the range of illumination for a lighted object. Select the checkbox next to Light. The object is now a light source. Show Selection Beam - The selection beam is the line of particles you see when you are pointing at and manipulating objects. The feature is on by default, but if you think it gets in the way, you can disable it: Using Shift-drag to copy objects You can Shift -drag to copy an object you have permission to copy. Right-click the ground and choose Build. Click the ground again to rez a generic cube. Right-click the cube and choose Edit. The positioning arrows appear. Hold down Shift , left-click one of the arrow heads, and drag the object. You can do this to align it another way. Using the Copy selection feature Copy selection allows you to duplicate selected prims and align them adjacent to each other. From the Build Tools window, select Create. Check Keep Tool selected so we can do the following steps repeatedly. Click the Copy selection checkbox. For now, check Center Copy and uncheck Rotate Copy. Now, click on the faces of the cube. Each time you do so, the cube is duplicated, aligned edge-to-edge with a previous cube. Center Copy - Copies are centered on the target object, which is useful for neat building in-a-line where you want objects to be aligned along an axis. Otherwise, objects will be placed edge-to-edge, but may be staggered or askew. Rotate Copy - Copies rotate to match the target object, instead of the original values the source object has. Using the Content tab If you have permission to modify an object, you can use the Content tab to:: Drag any objects from your Inventory into the Content folder. Copy or move the contents of an object to your Inventory. Permanently delete objects from the Content folder. To add inventory to the object Content folder: Right-click the object inworld and choose Edit from the pie menu or press Ctrl-3 and click on the object. Drag the desired item from your Inventory into the Content folder. To remove objects from the Content folder: Right-click on the object inworld and choose Open from the pie menu. Use one of the following options: Open your Inventory and drag the contents to your Inventory window. Click Copy to Inventory. Click Copy and Wear. If the contents have copy permissions, a copy is placed in your Inventory. If an object is no copy , the object will leave the Contents folder and move to your Inventory. Select one or more objects Ctrl-select more than one object , right-click and select Delete or press the Delete key on your keyboard to remove objects without placing them in your Inventory. Objects that are not rezzed, but are instead deleted from a Content folder do not go to your Inventory Trash folder! They are permanently deleted. If the object is no copy, be aware it will be gone if you select it and press the Delete key! Linking objects You can link several primitives prims together to create one cohesive object. A linked object is, for all intents and purposes, considered one object. It has one name, acts as one object for example, if physics are enabled on it, and it cannot be broken apart unless you Unlink it. One prim of the object is considered the parent or root link. The name of the parent link is the name of the whole linked object. The inventory of the root prim is, for most purposes, the inventory of the whole object. The center or origin of the root prim is the center of the whole object, even if the root prim is not the physical center of the object itself. As a result, it is important which prim you select as the root prim. Linking Follow these steps to link together two or more prims: If you are not in the object Editor already, right-click any object and choose Edit, or open the Editor with Ctrl With no object selected in the editor, hold down Shift and click on each prim you wish to link together, one at a time. Then, go to the Tools menu and select Link, or just press Ctrl-L. Be aware of the following limitations: A linked object cannot exceed 54 meters in any dimension. Normally a linkset can have up to prims; sitting avatars count as one prim each. There is no nesting of linked groups. In other words, if you link a third object to two objects already linked and then unlink them it will not yield two groups but three. Watch this video to learn more: Changed any of the texture settings on an object. Added contents to an object. What does undo work on? Undo primarily reverts changes made to the position, size, and rotation of an object. For example, if you accidentally move a sofa inside a wall, undo snaps it back to where it was last. As shown in the video above, Undo can help you retrieve objects lost in walls. Undo should also work on attachments. Each object has its own independent "chain" of undos which remembers multiple steps. Since this data is stored on our servers, you should be able to revert changes to objects inworld even after relogging. Remember that you must specifically select an object to undo changes to that object.
