Rhetoric Rhetoric Definition Rhetoric is a technique of using language effectively and persuasively in spoken or written form. It is an art of discourse , which studies and employs various methods to convince, influence, or please an audience. Instead, you simply want him to stop irritating you. Thus, you direct language in a particular way for effective communication, making use of rhetoric. Wherever and whenever a figure of speech is used in written texts and speech, it alters meanings of words. Common Rhetoric Examples Below are a few examples on how rhetoric is employed by using various literary devices: How did this idiot get elected? Here comes the Helen of our school. I would die if you asked me to sing in front of my parents. All blonds are dumb. Nevertheless, the difference between rhetorical devices and figures of speech is so minute that both share many features. A figure of speech becomes a device in rhetoric when it is aimed at persuading the readers or listeners. Examples of Rhetoric in Literature Let us try to analyze the use of rhetoric in some literary works: To quote an example from Book V: I watch you, face to face; Clouds of the west! I see you also face to face. Function of Rhetoric Rhetoric, as explained above, is a tool for writers and orators which empowers them to convince their readers and listeners about their point of view. Often, we find rhetoric examples in religious sermons and political speeches. They aim to make comparisons, to evoke tender emotions, to censure rivals, and all this is done to persuade listeners. Advertisers give their ads a touch of rhetoric to boost their sales by convincing people that their product is better than other products in the market.
