Members of the chamber and friends of Lakeview Marina all gathered to enjoy a fun evening on the lake. Delicious food from Marker 2 Grille was served and the drinks were cold. About half way through the evening, the chamber gave out prizes donated by the after hours sponsor and other members to some lucky winners. After prizes were given out, the band began to play, cranking up the party. Many people stayed and danced all night. Friends networked and caught up with each other, and some even left with new friends. As always it was a great after hours at Lakeview. In statistical data showcased that 10, will die that year due to a drunk driving crash—that is one person every fifty minutes. In addition, an estimated one out of three people will have been involved in a drunk driving crash during their lifetime. I find the most intriguing statistical data to be on repeat offenders. One out of every three convicted DUI cases is a repeat offender! As a matter of fact, after several years of declining DUI numbers, they are on the rise again. Approximately one fourth of the arrests made was a repeat offender. How can this be? Like so many of us, Dr. Adler has had his own personal experiences with the destructive consequences of substance abuse. Mike Adler and find out more about Point Zero Eight, why he is so passionate about this new program, and what a program like this means to our region. I was told my maternal grandfather was an alcoholic, however he died before I was born. My experience was in high school when four friends were killed instantly when a drunk driver traveling at a high speed ran through a red light. We had just attended our high school sports banquet. The police found the driver shortly after the accident. He was drinking at a bar and unaware that he had hit and killed someone. He was driving on a revoked license due to several previous DUI convictions. Those unfortunate experiences had a profound effect on Dr. He struggled to understand how these people had become so addicted that they had complete disregard for their safety and even more important, the safety of others. Adler began to wonder if there were early warning signs that could have been addressed BEFORE drinking took control of their lives. That curiosity led him to develop and validate an alcohol-screening tool that identified individuals who were at risk for substance abuse problems. What I learned was there are risk factors that occur early on that indicate a risk for substance abuse. Unfortunately, getting individuals to address these factors in the early stages of the problem were highly unlikely. That is exactly what Point Zero Eight is designed to do. Point Zero Eight, located in Johnson City, is an early intervention program for individuals who have substance abuse problems or are in the early stages of developing them. The program addresses risk factors associated with substance abuse early in the cycle before the individual progresses to addiction. This is typically a first or second time offender. Presently, first and second time offenders are required by law to spend a minimum 48 hours or longer sitting in jail, doing nothing to address the factors associated with substance abuse. In turn, the offender leaves jail bitter and unchanged. While jailhouses focus on punishment, Point Zero Eight focuses on prevention. Point Zero Eight will provide 24 hour supervision in a secure workhouse setting complete with cameras throughout and alarms on all external windows and doors. In addition to saving the state and county the cost of incarcerating DUI offenders and reducing overcrowding in our local jails, individuals will receive cognitive behavioral psycho-educational training to address risk factors associated with substance abuse. They also will complete a screening test to determine the extent of their substance abuse problem. Based on the results of the screening test, individuals who need substance abuse treatment will be referred to local substance abuse treatment centers. The intervention program at Point Zero Eight is structured to attack the distortions that make poor decision while inebriated okay. That number is tough for anyone to ignore. Our region is fortunate to be pioneering the Point Zero Eight program. Point Zero Eight is not a vacation center for offenders; it is a place that will educate individuals who may be in the early phases of substance abuse in an assertive effort to steer them straight. community as a whole Works in conjunction with the courts Helps to decrease overcrowding in jails Saves money for the state, the county and, therefore, all taxpayers. It is something we all need in order to nourish our bodies and stay strong, but it has also become a large part of our lives as well. We center our days around food and sometimes only see friends or family when food is involved. Family reunions are all about the food, as are other activities like tail-gating, birthday parties, picnics at the lake, and office parties. Ever try getting everyone at the office to have fun with each other and not involve food? As Americans started making more and more disposable income following WWII, the idea that a family of four could go out to eat once or twice a week become less of an abnormality and more of an accepted way of life. These days with soccer, gymnastics, karate, music lessons, and whatever else it is that we and our kids might be involved in; dinner sometimes is eaten out nearly every day of the week. It is not unusual for some people to eat all three meals out of the house on any given day. With this in mind, it can be said that restaurants have taken the time to up the ante of what can be expected by diners. Ambiance is important, but what really keeps people coming back is the food. Serve a bad burger once and that can be forgiven, but serve a bad burger twice and that patron is probably lost to another establishment. There are dozens of restaurants in the Tri-Cities area that serve up great food and, along with the establishments in the following menu guide, are eager to attract more patrons. Diners are more discerning than they used to be and that is a great thing, because this means that restaurants have to work to keep us coming back since there might be food of equal or better flavor right next door. Enjoy your food when go out to eat. Unable to settle for mainstream flavor, many Americans across the country began crafting their own brewâ€thus the craft beer craze was born. So what is a craft brewery? Defined by the Brewers Association, an American craft brewer is small, independent and traditional. Americans have proven they love craft beer and the breweries that produce them and the Tri-Cities is no exception. The interest level is rapidly growing in these craft spirit distilleries that focus mainly on moonshine and bourbon or whiskey. They tend to be popping up, mainly in North Carolina and Tennessee, and producing a lot of product to demanding consumers. Modern day moonshine is a little different than that of an earlier era because now it is a broadened meaning to include unaged white whiskeys. In this craft edition, you will find a craft brewery and distillery telling their story and how they rose to where they are today. Be sure to visit all the craft breweries and distilleries the Tri-Cities has to offer. Although our wings are near impossible not to try, we have a superabundance of other delicious menu items. Interventional Radiology Nurse Navigation There are a variety of ways to treat any specific cancer. The cancer type, stage, location of tumors, and much more, determine the course of action to take. Together they formulate the best plan of care given all the variables. As part of the BJC Collaborative, and our affiliation with Simmons Cancer Center in Springfield, the teams have access to additional cancer specialists and best practices when needed. Physicians, physician assistants, and advanced practice nurses providing services at and admitting patients to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, Herrin Hospital and St. Joseph Memorial Hospital are not employees of the hospital. Physicians, physician assistants, and advanced practice nurses exercise their own independent judgment regarding medical care and treatment and the hospital is not responsible for their actions. This will represent a significant step forward in our fight against colorectal cancer. I make one commitment to my patients: Miracles happen every day. This center will immediately improve that aspect. It will also enable the cancer care treatment team to provide a better comprehensive care for the patient. It will make travel to patient appointments easier since all the involved physicians will be under the same roof. The collaboration will lead to unsurpassed patient care. Stereotactic Body Radiation Therapy SBRT utilizes a specially designed coordinate system to find the exact location of a tumor in the body. It is extremely precise and involves the delivery of a few high dose radiation treatments, usually five or less. The area is surrounded by a large expanse of floor to ceiling windows overlooking the beautiful natural landscape of the Crab Orchard Wildlife Preserve. A man-made pond and walking paths are also in view. Each infusion station includes a comfortable recliner, access to wi-fi, and individual TVs. Seating for family members at each patient station encourages family involvement in the patient healing process. The natural light filters into the space while patients receive their intravenous treatments. The amenities of the Infusion Center are intended to provide a warm, welcoming, comfortable and healing environment for patients, their loved ones, as well as staff. Staff members have access to state of the art technology and work space that will improve the level of care patients receive, while maintaining patient privacy. Cancer rehabilitation is an important part of the cancer fighting arsenal. The cancer therapies at Rehab Unlimited are designed to help patients minimize the fatigue and impairment that often accompany oncology treatments. The Cancer Registry role is to collect this data, check for accuracy and submit it to local, state and national agencies for the purpose of education, research, and outcome measurement. Confidentiality is strictly maintained. This information is used to help government agencies to make important health decisions, such as what programs would make the most impact on our population. This is particularly helpful if that area has limited public health funds. The garden offers heavily landscaped views including natural plant life and water features that provide tranquil, calming sounds. Patrons can dine in the large open dining with floor to ceiling windows that showcases the beautiful southern Illinois landscape. During the warmer months, patrons will have the opportunity to dine outside on the landscaped patio overlooking the lake. This unique shop offers a wide variety of products designed to enhance appearance, boost self-confidence, and make the recovery process as comfortable as possible. The beautiful and spacious Appearance Center ensures privacy and comfort for those being assisted during consultations and wig fittings. The chapel overlooks a heavily landscaped courtyard with water features. With the inclusion of comfortable seating and use of natural materials such as walnut veneer and limestone, visitors have a place of respite to retreat to while dealing with stressful and difficult diagnosis. A Resource Specialist will be available to answer questions as needed. Varying pieces; some using glass, metals, textiles, paint and more, adorn the center giving a unique appeal meant to inspire healing and bring cheer to cancer patients. A diagnosis of celiac disease means avoiding foods and beverages containing barley, rye or wheat. For the beer lovers, this has often meant giving up their beloved beverage entirely or settling for a gluten-free alternative. However, they are often less than ideal replacements for traditional beer. Beer is made from barley, hops, water and yeast. Some beers also contain other fermentable grains, such as corn, oats, rice, rye or wheat, although these typically comprise far less than 50 percent of the fermentable grains in beer. So, if an essential ingredient is missing, do you still have beer? These brands replace barley with sorghum – a grain that is safe for celiac sufferers. No matter how well a sorghum beer is made, you will know the difference. In , the folks at Omission Beer part of the Craft Brew Alliance introduced something new – a beer brand made from barley, hops, yeast and water i. This gluten-removed beer is, for many, the best of both worlds. The beer is tested using the R5 Competitive ELISA a mechanism to test for gluten proteins and shown to be well under the threshold the FDA has established for gluten content while maintaining all of the flavor of a genuine craft beer. Omission Lager and Omission Pale Ale are available locally at your favorite beer retailer. Another viable alternative to traditional beer is hard cider, of course. Hard ciders have enjoyed a massive spike in popularity in the last couple of years; and cider, made from apples, is naturally glutenfree. In addition to national brands like Angry Orchard, Johnny Appleseed and Woodchuck, several local and regional hard ciders have gained followings. He is a craft and specialty beer retail consultant and an award-winning home brewer. Read his blog at beerphilosopher. Talk to one our experts on your options today! How about a fruit-infused daiquiri or a cucumber gin and tonic? All delicious options indeed, but there is one drink that tops them all when it comes to the perfect bite complemented by a refreshing zest: They are gaining in popularity because of their light caloric makeup and invigorating taste. A spritzer transforms any white or red wine into a sparkling creation that can be served at a brunch, book club meeting or bridal shower. If all of our goals could be accomplished in a month, we would all be wildly successful, fit, rich and happy, but research shows that more than half of our resolutions fail to materialize after a few months. This list just may be your salvation if your resolutions included improvements to your body, skin and hair. What do you have to lose? Those looking to promote hair growth should consider performing scalp massages regularly. Daily scalp massages have been proven to boost hair growth. Just like our skin, our scalp needs to be pampered and moisturized. A beautiful, healthy head of hair always starts with a healthy scalp. Julie Rushing, stylist, makeup artist and owner of Clique Hair Design in Marion, likes Davines Natural Tech, a line of products that contains eight scientifically developed treatments formulated for many scalp issues, including thinning hair, dehydration, brittle hair, dandruff, irritated scalp, lack of tone, oily scalp and maintenance. Botanical hair therapy treatments can work wonders for hair that often becomes dry and brittle over the winter months. It penetrates hair strands to condition from the inside out. Using the proper products will help protect from heat damage as well as add protein and shine, helping to renew your strands. Rachel Bonner, stylist and owner of Salon Euphoria in Carbondale likes the Damage Remedy line and the Dry Remedy line with several rinse-out and leave-in options to create the perfect cocktail for your hair. Still, removing the dry and damaged ends from your hair is an essential part of keeping hair healthy. On the shelf behind them are items from the Clique featured product line. You can deep-condition your hair once a week to revitalize or use a weightless conditioning product that will silken and smooth the hair, says Sherry Almaroad of Cheveux Salon in Marion. She likes those that are infused with plant-based argan oil. It is a good idea to change your hair and skin products seasonally. Make sure he or she uses only organic color systems in order to avoid the harsh and sometimes toxic chemicals that many salons use. Ask a lot of questions and make sure you know what to expect when the treatment is finished. There are many kinds of color treatment, from all-over color to glossing to highlights and lowlights. Sun damage and prolonged sun exposure causes the skin to look more aged and have more uneven skin pigmentation. Protection against these harmful ultraviolet rays is the key to more youthfulllooking skin. The Carbondale staff recommends using a daily sunscreen, one with an SPF 30 or greater, which contains zinc oxide. Zinc oxide is a mineralbased ingredient responsible for broad-spectrum coverage. Drinking more water is extremely beneficial for skin renewal. The average adult human body is made up of roughly 60 percent water, Julie says. Proper hydration is necessary to maintain a healthy balance of body fluids, but it also improves the appearance of skin. If your skin is not getting the sufficient amount of water, the lack of hydration can cause it to become dry, tight and flaky. Dry skin has less resilience and is more prone to wrinkling. Drinking at least eight glasses a day also will help the body and skin rid itself of toxins. Specialty treatments deal with special needs of problematic skin conditions such as acne, clogged pores, hyperpigmentation, rosacea and congested skin. Facials made of natural ingredients such as fruits, vegetables, herbs, dairy and whole grains can be used to cleanse and gently exfoliate while revitalizing your skin and delicate eye area. Some facials are designed to help aid in relief of allergy and sinus symptoms and include aromatherapy, a facial cleanse, steam and herbal compresses. Or just run in for a minute facial, a quick pick-me-up. This, she says, will help with dry skin, especially in the winter. Try to avoid hot baths and showers as this will further dry out your skin. Hot showers also dry out your scalp, which will make your head itchy. Using tea tree oil daily will help cure this naturally. The older we get, the more this process slows down, leaving us with fine lines, wrinkles and uneven skin texture.
