You will switch roles with your partner halfway through the day, helping to create a nurturing, supportive, and safe space in which all participants can grow together as a community. Upon completion of the elemental journeys, you will learn facilitation skills for Shamanic Breathwork. There will also be daily practice in Yoga, Pranayama, Meditation, and Astrological insights. Constant renewal is the shamanic path – the spiral of life. Everything in the universe flows in a spiral. We connect with our new community and to the new practices. We begin to release the blocks and barriers of our own heart – the habits, patterns, and traumas or wounds developed from our family of origin. Here we see in a solid way what they are, and how to free ourselves. We tap into these family roots and the interconnectedness of the tree of life as we embrace family and friends. Fire transforms all it touches. In an intense and cathartic initiation, we use the power of fire to burn away our patterns; to release anger, frustration, and blame; and finally, come to a warm heart space. Opening to the Inner Beloved We all possess an inner beloved and have the capacity to connect to the divine. Here we learn to love our ourselves, our innate gifts and our inner other. Now that we have cleared so much, it is time to see how much we can open our hearts to our own inner self – that part of you that you show up for. Connecting to our inner masculine or feminine, we experience the union of duality. Rising to the Call of Your Sacred Purpose The deepest human longing is discovering what we are here to do and why. We embrace forward movement – becoming empowered agents of change, and enabled in our mission. Here we accept the seat of a teacher and learn how to carry this role forward into the world. We step into being the best versions of ourselves as we finally connect to our true life purpose. Facilitator Skills Shamanic Energy Work and Shamanic Bodywork How to hold space or create a safe container How to hold a professional classroom How to process groups and individuals Counseling – how to work with an individual and their process to gain insight and value out of a breathwork journey, and take it into their life How to identify music and sound in your energetic body How to create a Shamanic Breathwork playlist How to pick and edit the right chakra-attuned music Sample Daily Schedule Subject to Change – may include late nights, fun surprises, and day trips!

Associated Data Appendix S1: So far, only small national samples were studied and there was no appropriate methodology to assess control globally. We present the first investigation of the architecture of the international ownership network, along with the computation of the control held by each global player. We find that transnational corporations form a giant bow-tie structure and that a large portion of control flows to a small tightly-knit core of financial institutions. Introduction A common intuition among scholars and in the media sees the global economy as being dominated by a handful of powerful transnational corporations TNCs. However, this has not been confirmed or rejected with explicit numbers. A quantitative investigation is not a trivial task because firms may exert control over other firms via a web of direct and indirect ownership relations which extends over many countries. Therefore, a complex network analysis [1] is needed in order to uncover the structure of control and its implications. Recently, economic networks have attracted growing attention [2] , e. This literature has also analyzed ownership networks [10] , [11] , but has neglected the structure of control at a global level. Even the corporate governance literature has only studied small national business groups [12]. Certainly, it is intuitive that every large corporation has a pyramid of subsidiaries below and a number of shareholders above. However, economic theory does not offer models that predict how TNCs globally connect to each other. Three alternative hypotheses can be formulated. TNCs may remain isolated, cluster in separated coalitions, or form a giant connected component, possibly with a core-periphery structure. So far, this issue has remained unaddressed, notwithstanding its important implications for policy making. Indeed, mutual ownership relations among firms within the same sector can, in some cases, jeopardize market competition [13] , [14]. Moreover, linkages among financial institutions have been recognized to have ambiguous effects on their financial fragility [15] , [16]. Verifying to what extent these implications hold true in the global economy is per se an unexplored field of research and is beyond the scope of this article. However, a necessary precondition to such investigations is to uncover the worldwide structure of corporate control. This was never performed before and it is the aim of the present work. Methods Ownership refers to a person or a firm owning another firm entirely or partially. Let denote the ownership matrix, where the component is the percentage of ownership that the owner or shareholder holds in firm. This corresponds to a directed weighted graph with firms represented as nodes and ownership ties as links. If, in turn, firm owns , then firm has an indirect ownership of firm Figure 1 A. In the simplest case, this amounts trivially to the product of the shares of direct ownership. If we now consider the economic value of firms e. This computation can be extended to a generic graph, with some important caveats [17] , Appendix S1 , Sections 3.

3: Program & Replays | Shamanism Global Summit

This is the first annual Shamanic Ministers' Global Network Conference! Join us for a weekend of networking, celebration and activation of your highest visions for your own life and for your sacred work in the world.

For thousands of years, shamans around the world have perfected the art of traveling in consciousness to other levels of reality, gaining access to information that can seem quite extraordinary about how to treat and prevent disease, avoid negative situations, clear family issues, plan for our future, and more. This information is not just available to traditional shamans but any sincere seeker who learns the core methods and humbly applies them. These normally unseen allies can take the form of power animals, ancestors, elements, nature spirits, or guides and they are exquisitely attuned to information that you may not be perceiving.
