You spark the idea in your imagination, and our experienced and creative team of designers will help you bring it to life. And we create it with care. Each decal is custom-made in our Greensboro, NC studio, not mass-produced in an overseas factory. The material we use is a durable resin without any clear film on or around your design, so it really looks like a painted-on stencil! And it can be easily applied to your wall. Even our multi-color designs usually come on a single sheet. And we have other languages in addition to English. Each of these phrases is provided by real people who speak that language as their first language. These are perfect for boosting employee morale and energy. Many of our retail customers enjoy putting evocative lettering displays on their storefront windows to draw customers in. Art galleries, museums, and theatre venues like to use our lettering to label their exhibits or announce a new production. Churches love to display scripture on their walls for their members and visitors to enjoy. The possibilities are endless! How to apply our products WiseDecor believes that a beautiful design should be easy to execute. This is why we make sure that you can conveniently and immediately apply our products so you can enjoy them on your walls in no time. You can expect a friendly, experienced, creative person who can help you realize your vision. She will have the answers and be able to offer you insights that you may not have considered. If you send us an email, the same team will handle that also, usually responding within minutes during business hours. She can help you with variations on one of our designs or help you design something completely unique, sending you mock-ups to confirm that your vision is understood. We also make it easy for you to choose the right size, because we show you the width and height as you make changes. We choose matte materials almost exclusively, because it has the most visual appeal! We also have customers who have applied it to the glass of their boutique in Florida where it withstands the extreme humidity and heat of the afternoon and evening sun. We offer affordable shipping rates, and we have lots of experience with shipping packages around the globe. We will gladly send a replacement to you or refund your money if you are not completely satisfied with our service. In fact, we will even refund the cost of shipping. WiseDecor values your happiness with our decorative lettering and our service. Have ideas and suggestions? We love to communicate with our customers and readers online. After all, hearing about how we can further improve our products and services is the best way to satisfy our customers.

Every payday he hangs one on. His version of the story does not hang together. Show More Origin of hang before ; fusion of 3 verbs: Hang, in the sense of execute, is in accordance with a legal sentence, the method of execution being to suspend by the neck until dead. To lynch, however, implies the summary putting to death, by any method, of someone charged with a flagrant offense though guilt may not have been proved. Lynching is done by private persons, usually a mob, without legal authority. Usage note Hang has two forms for the past tense and past participle, hanged and hung. The historically older form hanged is now used exclusively in the sense of causing or putting to death: He was sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead. In the sense of legal execution, hung is also quite common and is standard in all types of speech and writing except in legal documents. When legal execution is not meant, hung has become the more frequent form: The prisoner hung himself in his cell. Maurizio Cattelan Lets It "All" Hang Out at the Guggenheim Irreverence -- for the art world, for art history, and for the culture at large -- seems to be the defining feature of "All." 11/10/

In the business of art and design, having the freedom and liberty to create new ideas is downright essential. Doing the same old thing is safe, but not truly progressive. In the real world of transportation design, there are many factors that can lead to a less than daring path. But, school is still the one place where you can still let it all hang out with wild abandon. In the case of ArtCenter College of Design in Pasadena, students are being well versed in the challenges of engineering, materials, and manufacturing. This can be summed up by saying great styling is not necessarily great design. Why does this matter? Sure, there are numerous renderings and models that are magnetic, but more importantly, these designs have at least one foot in reality. Thereby, these grads will be functioning and productive team members right from day one at their first professional opportunity after graduating. To be fair, the execution on ideas is not evenly spread. And as always, there are some that one gravitates to more than others. Roaming about the hallowed hallways and classrooms at ArtCenter, where the very finest in automotive design learned their craft and occasionally teach, is an almost religious experience. The historical significance of this is not lost on those that are starting their own trek down well-traveled paths. Besides the racy styling, the ideas on how to make his vehicle, the Astronave, function seems to be on point with the capabilities of this OEM. His concept explores the manufacturing benefits that this OEM is bringing to market. The novel rapid manufacturing, an offshoot of rapid prototyping, lends itself to far more unique and varied vehicle interpretations. Matt Regnier showcases his talent and innovation on several projects including a very stealthy design that articulates. Being able to flex along the X-axis provides a visual clue as to where this vehicle is going, especially when the tires are not visible. All car owners want a little more, and Axel Kurkjian gives that to them. His design allows swapping the aft portion of the car; thereby changing the capability of the product, say from sedan to wagon or pickup. Axel envisions a high level of autonomy, much like most of the transportation products on display. Of course, the trick is being able to make the design of one product suitable for a number of variations. Not all clever ideas are relegated to the exterior. Mauricio Santiago expands on the luxury experience by developing a grand salon environment for the passengers in the front seats, and placing the driver behind and to the center. This is a complete flip-flop on our conventional ideas on what an auto should look like. The business space interior is for the new generation of entrepreneurs looking for a higher level of usiness interaction. Thinking outside the box, and off terra firma, Baoqi Xiao is displaying renderings and models of yachts. The level of detail allows for ease of understanding all aspects of the vessel. His presentation is directed to show a complete understanding of both yachts and the luxury market. It does appear that we are at the dawn of a new age, and this is reflected in the out of this world transportation design. And, if you are cruising the dunes and vast plains of Mars or elsewhere, what not look good at the same time? Charlie, Matt, Axel, Baoqi, David, and Mauricio are just a few of the dozen or so noteworthy designers. There are students representing a wide variety of artistic fields at both campus locations. Curiously, we see a number of these captivating works of art also capturing a bit of automotive flair. Perhaps this is a case of cross-pollination.
