1 "At the Airport" vocabulary (with answers) worksheet This is a basic and elementary English language exercise introducing and exploring the language and vocabulary of airports. Students try to match the vocabulary with the appropriate pictures.

Parts of an airport exercise For a pilot or a controller, knowing the names of the different parts of a airport is essential for moving planes around it successfully. This exercise has been written for both pilots and controllers, not for passengers. To see our other exercises on aviation English vocabulary, go to our aviation English exercise menu. Describing an airport In the following conversation, Peter a professional pilot explains to Juan a Spanish trainee pilot the names in English of the different parts of an airport. Then do the quiz at the end to check if you are right. So, in a terminal, what is the name of the place where passengers both go to and wait at to board a plane? These are too easy! What is the area in front of the gates where planes are parked whether directly in front of the gates or further away called? So what are the roads which the planes can move slowly on called? I know that the roads where planes take off and land are called runways. But what are the roads which connect the ramp to runways called. And you are right when you say their purpose is that planes can move between from the ramp to the different runways at an airport or vice versa. Or what is a taxiway and what is runway? These are squares or rectangles of metal which are above the ground which have information written on them e. In addition, there are lines and information painted on the actual taxiway, runway or ramp. These markings also help the pilots when moving around the airport. Both signs and markings are especially important and helpful for pilots when two taxiways or a runway and a taxiway cross or one joins another. It must be difficult to see signs or markings! So to help pilots, there are also lights on the taxiways, runways etc This is called a beacon. I have another question for you. And the last question. What do you call the buildings which planes can park inside? Click on the "Check answers" button at the bottom of the quiz to check your answers. When the answer is correct, two icons will appear next to the question. The first is an Additional Information Icon " ". The second is a Pronunciation Icon " ".
