

1: A Boxer's Behavior - Pets

Most dogs bark, howl, and whine to some degree. Excessive barking is considered a behavior problem. Before you can correct barking, determine why your dog is vocalizing in the first place.

Overview The Beagle is one of the most popular pets in the world for good reasons. This breed is gentle, sweet, outgoing, and curious. The Beagle is rather hyper as a puppy, and has a good amount of energy as an adult. The Beagle usually gets along very well with everyone and are wonderful canine family members. The Beagle has adapted very well on his journey from scent hound to the amazing family dog that he is today. With any dog breed, the Beagle does have its own unique characteristics and temperament. They are watchful, and will be protective of young children. Very active, they will be eager to play and run around with the family. Very loyal, the Beagle will happily sit down and watch TV with the household or accompany an owner when running errands. Correct socialization, introduction and planning should be implemented when: This breed usually does well with other dogs and generally enjoys having canine company. However, for other smaller pets, such as hamsters, gerbils, bunnies, chinchillas, cats and any other non-canine animal, care must be taken. The hunter instinct in this breed may result in Beagle behavior of chasing after smaller pets. It is most helpful to properly socialize this dog to other pets at a young age. It is when the dog is young that he or she can be trained to react appropriately to other animals. Due to his deep breed characteristic of being a pack dog; he can struggle to be by himself. One of the elements that helps the Beagle remain happy and to promote good behavior is to have a daily, routine schedule. Each day, certain tasks should be done at certain times. Use this time not only to allow your puppy to relive themselves but also to have some moderate exercise. Exercising your puppy in the morning will help make the dog tired out a bit, so that the pup is not so hyper during the day. This should include any of the grooming needs in which it is time to perform. This includes bath time, brushings, tooth brushing, nail trimming, fur trimming 1: When you have a Beagle puppy, time must be set aside each day for one-on-one training. This time may be used to teach certain behaviors, such as socialization training with visitors, or command training, such as teaching your Beagle puppy to sit or stay. For any type of training, a minimum of 30 minutes should be dedicated each day to showing your dog proper behavior. Your puppy will take many naps throughout the day, this is normal Beagle behavior. You cannot plan when he or she will want to nap; however an owner must allow the puppy to rest or nap whenever the pup wants to. You can expect nap times through the day for puppies. This can be the reward for your Beagle doing a great job during the previous training time. This should be an activity that your Beagle enjoys doing. With your morning walk, exercise, training, feeding, interaction and grooming done, you can feel confident that it is just fine to have some down time. This is a great opportunity to teach your puppy to be happy on its own. A Beagle must learn that all is just fine when they are given toys to play with and you and other family members are doing other things. Remember, a dog toy is not just a dog toy. Puppies need 2 types of toys: It is important to choose mealtimes for your dog and to keep those times. This evening walk is important for 2 reasons. Your Beagle may wish to sit with the family or to go on his own to play with his toys. Either is acceptable behavior. Before your Beagle gets ready for sleep, be sure to allow him to go outside, whether you have a puppy or an adult. Now that the day has been filled with activities, it is time to sleep. There are many elements needed to help your Beagle sleep good through the night. The puppy or dog must have his own special area. This should be a quality canine dog bed that properly supports the body to prevent back issues and to offer muscles appropriate support for a growing body. If you decide to have your Beagle sleep in your bed, be very careful if he or she is young. Your pup should be placed in the top corner of a bed that is cornered against 2 walls. Beagle eating poop - Known by the medical term coprophagia, this is not uncommon behavior, but needs to be immediately addressed. This is a deep, inbred instinct and therefore having a dog that runs away and chases after scents is part of owning a Beagle. This is not to say that this cannot be controlled in a healthy way. For details on this and some great tips to help with this issue, read: Beagle Running Behavior Tip: Many owners worry about the behavior of their Beagle eating feces. The official term for this is Coprophagia. While it may seem as if this is a behavioral canine issue, there are actually some medical issues that can cause a dog to do this. This behavior can also develop if a Beagle is not receiving enough nutrients due to too many fillers in his food. Medical issues must be ruled out first, food should be reassessed and checked for quality and then actions should be taken from a behavioral standpoint. Other Helpful Pages Include: My Beagle is Acting Strange - What can prompt odd behavior and figuring out how to react. How to Stop a Beagle from Chewing Everything - If your Beagle has a mission to chew apart everything in the house other than the toys you provide, these 6 steps can stop your guy or gal in their tracks. Effective and immediate results. When a Beagle Chews at the Paws - Typically, it is some sort of itchiness that causes a puppy or dog to do this, but may also be triggered by stress or boredom. This can quickly cause all sorts of issues and should be addressed right away. Learn the details of each possible cause and exact steps to take. Beagle Territorial Marking - What causes a Beagle to start marking and the exact steps you should take to stop this sort of behavior. My Beagle Pees All the Time - If your guy or gal suddenly starts peeing more often than normal, this article will guide you to understanding why this happens and steps to take. How to Stop a Beagle from Jumping on People - Some Beagles can get super excited, causing them to have a hard time sitting still. They may jump up on visitors to your home or even on people when you have your dog outside.

2: Dog Behavior Problems Can Be Fixed, Understanding Them Is The First Step

The Shih Tzu is a precious and amazingly special dog breed for a reason. This dog has a unique and surprising inbred traits that allow the Shih Tzu to be one of the most loving and incredibly great pets to have.

Privacy Policy Dog Behavior Problems: Why, What and How to Solve Them! It may be difficult to really grasp just how much of a problem this subject can be, but as per the results of a study done a few years ago in the U. So this is a very big problem for many people. Where it all begins Before we jump into a list of different groups of dog behavior problems which you can find below we need to mention a little about why these problems happen in the first place. First of all, the mutualism that dogs and humans share has changed significantly from what it originally evolved as, into what we share today. Dogs no longer have duties and jobs anymore, instead they spend their days waiting in apartments, crates or fenced back yards for our return from a busy day, just to be able to spend some time together and possibly a short walk outside. This is one of the biggest fuels for dog behavior problems. What mistakes do we do? Even though it is hard to accept, the truth is that whatever is going on with our dogs is a direct result of our influence. Mistake number one has been mentioned above; the way our life is organized and the environment where we live may not be compatible to having a dog. The second mistake is irresponsible breeding. When you are planning to get a dog, pay attention to where you are getting it from. Avoid the possibilities of creating a potential headache by getting a dog from parents that show inherited types of dog behaviors, which may in turn, lead to behavior problems for you and your dog, down the road. The best advice for how to prevent this is with knowledge. By learning about dogs before you drift into the adventure of getting one, you will help prevent possible disasters down the road.

Variable reinforcement schedule This is an important part of dealing with dog behavior problems. We use this training technique in various different dog trainings and dog sports, etc. Unfortunately the same concept applies to unwanted behaviors. By occasionally letting a dog perform unwanted behaviors regardless of us being or not being aware of it we are actually rising the criteria and that particular behavior will now take longer and will be more difficult to deal with and extinguish. Behavior extinction bursts Not many dog owners are aware of this common occurrence. Once you start dealing with and addressing a dog behavior problem, working to extinguish it, that particular behavior will first increase, before it subsides. In most cases, people see this as a failure in the treatment and therapy and they try changing the approach which is the wrong thing to do. Any behavior will increase up to a certain point and then it will start disappearing. If you stick to the training plan, and go through the behavior extinction burst period you will see a lowering of the intensity and eventually you will reach your goal. By quitting during the behavior extinction burst period, you will deliver the message to your dog to keep trying even harder next time, as he will ultimately succeed. Behavior extinction bursts and variable reinforcement schedules are one of your worst enemies when dealing with any dog behavior problems. Arm yourself with knowledge Put it this way; either you will learn and study prior to getting a dog or you will be forced to learn, after your dog expresses some type of dog behavior problem. Knowledge about dogs is an inevitable process for a dog owner. Some of the most common mistakes that result from a lack of knowledge are: How to deal with dog behavior problems This is a complex question to answer. It lays in a combination of our knowledge, time, patience and also the type of dog behavior problem, dog temperament, etc. Again a few common mistakes that most dog owners make: Many dog owners simply decide to ignore the problem as if they will disappear magically on their own Assuming that the dog will grow out of it: For some reason most people tend to take this road, and this ends up in a total disaster. What you really need is to deal with the issue. Dealing with a dog behavior problem requires outstanding team work from both your dog and you, and yes I would also recommend seeking professional help or input if you are not quite sure about how to do it yourself, at least to start with, so that you can get started in the right direction. No two cases are the same; therefore each case requires a unique approach to find the best solution for the problem. There are different techniques that people use when dealing with dog behavior problems such as: Flooding direct exposure for the dog to the trigger.

3: Yorkie Temperament | Behavior | Personality

Undesirable behavior exhibited by dogs between puppyhood and adolescence, such as destructive chewing, jumping on people, and play biting, is medically referred to as pediatric behavior problems. Though these behaviors may be perceived as a "normal" trait of a puppy, it is often not acceptable behavior for a pet.

Email Thinkstock Terriers are bred to dig out burrowed animals, which can translate into unwanted digging in your yard or garden. Like many terriers, she was energetic, determined, playful and independent. She was also something of a terror, though. My early experience with terrier tenacity is largely why I became an animal trainer. Scooter the Terrier Terror Scooter was not the devoted dog I had dreamed of; she was independent and ran away every chance she got. She dashed through open doors or pulled out of her collar and took off running. She was oblivious to my panic-stricken pleas and would run until she was cornered. Scooter destroyed our yard. She was a digger who turned our lawn into a minefield of holes and mounds. She also took it as her duty to patrol the perimeter of our fence with such fervor that she wore a path all the way around the yard as well. Most problematic of all, though, was the barking. Scooter barked constantly, which caused problems with the neighbors. One night my brother and I were home alone when we heard someone yelling and pounding on our front door. I called the police, convinced we were in danger. My parents came home to find police cars in our driveway and officers searching for the intruder. Scooter was, indeed, a Terrier Terror. Understanding Terrier Personality Scooter was a pretty typical terrier. Fortunately, I learned how to manage her and was able to train her to be obedient and well-behaved. But my experiences with her taught me some important lessons about the terrier breed " and about how to work with them. Terriers are notoriously feisty with other dogs; they were bred to hunt solo and thus had little need for sociability. A terrier who spends time around other canines from an early age may learn to be friendly with them. But even with appropriate socialization, some terriers are best suited to single dog homes and may not do well in certain situations, like at the dog park. Terriers are commonly friendly, but are rarely the type who thrive on being held or coddled. Because they were bred to work independently, terriers are less attached to people than other comparable dogs. Certain breeds of terrier are more likely to be wary of strangers; for these dogs, extensive socialization with a wide variety of people, including children, is necessary. Terriers were bred to chase down and kill small animals, which can make them a hazard to other pets, particularly smaller rodents. If introduced early enough to other animals, a terrier may learn to adjust and get along well with them. Some terriers will never be good candidates for homes with small animals, though, because their predatory drive is too high. Terriers are bred to dig out burrowed animals, which can translate into unwanted digging in your yard or garden. A simple solution to this problem is to create a digging pit for your terrier. Terriers are also escape artists who run and roam. A Busy Terrier Is a Happy Terrier Thinkstock Terriers need a variety of outlets to release their abundant energy, including lots of exercise. Despite the small size of many terriers, the group tends to be incredibly athletic. They can make ideal workout partners for activities like hiking, jogging and long walks. Many terriers excel at doggy sports, including agility, Earthdog, lure racing, fly ball and scenting. Terriers respond well to reward-based training, in particular clicker training, because they are problem solvers and highly motivated by incentives, like play and treats. Impulse-control exercises like waiting at the door are especially important for teaching terriers delayed gratification.

4: Labrador Retriever Behavior Problems - Let's Talk About Lab Behaviors!

Once you start dealing with and addressing a dog behavior problem, working to extinguish it, that particular behavior will first increase, before it subsides. In most cases, people see this as a failure in the treatment and therapy and they try changing the approach which is the wrong thing to do.

If you want to build a better relationship with your dog, you can start by working to understand the meaning and causes behind some of her most common dog behaviors. Here is a list of common dog behaviors and what they mean.

Panting Because dogs sweat through the pads on their feet, most of their body heat is expelled through their mouth when they pant. Dogs also pant to cope with pain.

Dog barking In nature, dogs bark to raise an alarm at the first signs of possible danger or to herald a new arrival. Barking is an important means of canine communication.

Why do dogs lick?

Dog chewing Just as a growing child, your dog will want to chew on toys and other objects to relieve the pain of a new set of teeth coming in. If your dog is full grown, you may also come home to find your couch cushions or favorite pair of shoes ripped to shreds, but it is not because they enjoy the taste. Your dog could be exhibiting signs of separation anxiety or anxiety in general. See 5 steps to correct inappropriate dog chewing. It is especially strong in terrier breeds. Dogs in natural packs will dig to hide food or to uncover food such as small rodents. A den dug in the cool earth can also provide shelter from the heat.

Jumping up Though it may seem like play behavior, or an enthusiastic greeting, jumping up is a sign that your dog is attempting to assert her dominance over you. By encouraging jumping up with affection, you are reinforcing the behavior.

Dog biting A dog will bite a person as a way of communicating their current state of mind. The dog could be reacting in aggression, fear or nervousness. See Dog bites Why bites happen and how to prevent them. Try taking your dog on a nice, long walk before leaving her alone in the house. Leaving her in resting mode can calm her anxiety. Are you giving Exercise, Discipline, then Affection? How has your dog misbehaved lately, and how do you plan to solve the issue? Share your story in the comments.

5: Dog Characteristics: Understanding the Terrier Personality

The Yorkshire Terrier is one of the most popular dogs, not only because of their very cute appearance, but also because of their unique and charming personalities. While, in general, the Yorkie is a very happy and amusing companion, each dog does have their very own unique personalities.

Strong and imposing figures, their appearance alone can act as a deterrent to people with ill intent. Affectionate and loving with their families, Akitas can be a rewarding companion, but they have a strong will and a complex personality that can make them a challenge to train. While they do not bark much and are a clean housemate, they can be dominant and strong willed. Akita Inus are not ideal pets for the first-time dog owner. Akita Activity Requirements Akitas do not require the same level of physical activity as other breeds of comparable size. Several brisk walks a day will suffice, and they should be allowed to run a few times a week. Because of their aggressive tendencies toward other dogs, dog parks are not the best place to exercise an Akita. A fenced-in, private yard is the ideal space for him to run. They are large and require space, and can feel confined in tight areas. Home owners should check their policies and consult with neighborhood associations before adopting an Akita. Akita Trainability Akitas are a challenge to train, as they are strong-willed and dominant. They are not for the timid or inconsistent leader. Strength and confidence are the key to working with this breed, as they can sense a pushover from a mile away. They will make their trainer prove themselves as the leader before accepting commands. Originally bred as protectors, Akitas are instinctively wary of strangers. They must know the difference between a friendly visitor and an unwelcome stranger, or they will generalize all strangers as bad. Akita Behavioral Traits Aggression toward other animals is the biggest issue with an Akita. They do not give any signs of distress before they attack, so they may be playing well one minute, but then seemingly turn on a dime if pushed too far. Akitas should be the only pet in the house to prevent aggressive and potentially violent attacks. Food aggression is also common among Akitas. Children should be taught never, ever to approach an Akita while eating or chewing a bone. Akitas do not bark.

6: Akita Temperament, Personality, Behavior

Many dogs will eat their own feces, but some will also do this with the stools of other dogs, or even with cats. Luckily, there are some things that you can do to help your Pomeranian stop this particular, disturbing behavior.

Everyday people turn over their dogs to a shelter because they exhibit problem behaviors. When people are tired of dealing with a problem behavior they usually take the easy way out and get rid of the dog instead of getting rid of the behavior through work and training. This article we will cover the first steps to solving problem behaviors regardless of what they are. Assessing the Problem When addressing any behavior problem we must first consider what the dog is getting from the behavior. Jumping is a classic example of an attention seeking behavior. You should remember that jumping is perfectly normal in the canine world. Most problem behaviors like jumping are in fact normal for dogs and dogs do not see them as problems. Sticking with our jumping problem the next thing you need to consider is the level of the problem. Is the jumping an aggressive behavior? Like the dog putting their paws on the chest, growling, and staring into the persons eyes? This happens most with dominant breeds who have been allowed too much freedom and consider themselves the leader. Or is the jumping friendly in nature? Most of the problem jumping is friendly jumping. Four Important Components to Solving Behavior Problems When dealing with any behavior problem we want to use four components. Positive reinforcement of an acceptable behavior. Management and setting the dog up to succeed. When you address any behavior problem you should keep these four components in mind. Following is an example of a dog that jumps when guests come over. Jumping is an attention getting behavior and dogs love to get attention. Any attention, even if it is negative attention is better than no attention at all to a dog. Positive Reinforcement of an acceptable behavior In this scenario the sit-stay would be an acceptable behavior. Another possible behavior would be the down-stay. You will want to start doing sit-stays by the door when no guests are present. Repeat these training sessions by the door as often as you can. The more the better. Also, if you get guests coming through the back door or garage etc repeat the sit-stay in these locations as well. You want to reinforce this behavior with treats, praise or toys and you want to do it often. Management and setting the dog up to succeed You want to have your dog on the leash when guests come over. For guests that just show up, have the leash hanging by the door. You never want to let your dog succeed in jumping on a guests at this point. If you can not control the dog, take the leash and lead them into another room out of the way. Management is important because if you allow your dog to continue jumping he will be rewarded for the wrong behavior. Setting the dog up to succeed can be accomplished by having a mock guest help you train your dog in the beginning stages. Consequence I do not advocate physically correcting a dog for a behavior problem. Unless that problem endangers the dog or the training program the dog is involved. With that said, in this case, we want to ignore the dog and remove the reward attention for his behavior. With your dog on the leash, ask them to sit-stay. Then let the guest in. You will have control of your dog because they are on the leash. Once your dog understands he or she is only rewarded for sitting calmly and not for jumping you will start to see less jumping and more sitting. The speed at which any technique works is based on the dog and how consistently the person is with using the four key components. One dog may stop jumping after two weeks while another dog may take three months to stop. Everyone in the home should be involved and everyone should train the dog exactly the same using the same techniques. If one person trains the dog to down and the other trains them to sit, your dog will become confused and their success will be limited. In Summary Using the four key components will help you get a handle on any behavior problem. Dogs are creatures of habit and Pit Bulls are no exception to this rule. Remember to be consistent and only reward the acceptable behavior. You will only confuse the dog if you take this route to behaviors. Take your time, learn as much as you can about the problem itself and if needed hire a professional to help you stop the undesired behavior. If you have any questions about this article please feel free to email me. Have a great day.

7: Shih Tzu Behavior | Detailed Explanation of All Tzu Behaviors

there were limited places to walk their dogs were less likely to take their dogs for a walk (Cutt et al.,). The research by S. G. Brown and R. E. Rhodes () showed that the motive behind dog owners walking more was a sense of obligation or responsibility to the dog.

Nothing gets dog owners more frustrated than their dog soiling the house. Soiling the house can occur for a number of reasons, but if a dog suddenly begins to do this or is urinating many times in small quantities, I always suggest taking an early morning sample and getting it to the vet for analysis. Kidney problems, urinary tract infections and other diseases can create excessive and irregular urination. In addition, female puppies can have an inverted vulva, which is difficult to clean and gets an infection that creates irritation making them want to urinate more often. But, there are ways to easily and conveniently identify these abnormalities. Some of the symptoms of hypothyroid disease are fearfulness, aggression, loss of fur, and altered brain function. Treatment will often include a combination of both a special diet and medication. Cancer and dog behavior Diabetes, testicular and ovarian cancers can certainly affect behavior. A client of ours was experiencing aggression problems with her female cocker. Comprehensive tests and examinations ultimately showed her to have a tumor on one of her ovaries. The dog eventually overcame her behavioral issues once she was spayed and underwent some additional training. Parasites and dog behavior Parasites can create internal disorders and these are often the prime cause of behavior changes. Therefore regular deworming for parasites is essential, especially heartworm. Tapeworm is more easily identified. It shows mainly first thing in the morning where it can be seen quite clearly as what looks like moving white rice grains in the feces. Deworm your dog regularly! Food allergies Some breeds can experience chronic bowel syndrome, pancreatitis and have food allergies. In fact, we often see dog allergies that create skin problems and internal disorders. Skin disease The discomfort from skin disease can initiate unpleasant behaviors. One dog we worked with had severe skin allergies and, as a result, became very touch sensitive and aggressive. Heart disease Heart problems, bacterial and viral diseases, and stress can also play a part in affecting a dog's behavior. Pain and discomfort is probably the most common reason for unwanted behavior. What to tell your vet When visiting the vet let her know about any behavior problems you have noticed on your pet, so she will know to look for specific causes. To identify certain diseases tests may be necessary. In the case of irregular urination, for instance, urine sample analysis, X-rays, and even MRIs may be needed depending on the case. Always remember that your vet cannot know how to help unless you tell her the problems you are encountering. Help your dog achieve balance through nutrition and training Exercise, discipline, and affection, in that order. Exercise feeds the body, discipline feeds the mind, and affection feeds the heart. Just like us, our dogs need a healthy, well-balanced diet combined with regular exercise in order to thrive. Work with your trainer and veterinarian to come up with a routine that works for you and your dog. More in Diagnosing a dog.

8: A dog's behavior and health—are they connected? | Cesar's Way

8 Common Cat Problems and Their Solutions Litter box issues. This is "numero uno by far" of problems people report with their cats, says Linda P. Case, MS, author of The Cat: Its Behavior, Nutrition, and Health.

This dog has a unique and surprising inbred traits that allow the Shih Tzu to be one of the most loving and incredibly great pets to have. Discussed will be personality, behavior in regard to various age groups, interaction between the Shih Tzu with other dogs, the blending of a family that includes cats and children and how to manage the slight stubborn streak that may appear once in a while! This is one Shih Tzu whose personality shines! Unique Behavior of the Shih Tzu Undoubtedly, the most amazing trait of this dog is its behavior. One can immediately see their wonderful personality before even interacting with the Shih Tzu. This breed is extremely friendly and definitely not shy! Seeming to have a naturally happy soul, this dog is a wonderful, loving companion. Always close and loyal to its owners, this Shih Tzu also bonds quickly with any person whom its family accepts. Therefore, this dog will be un-aggressive and friendly to neighbors, friends, extended family and even strangers once the Shih Tzu reads the reactions of its owners and instinctively knows if a person is "friend or foe". Energy Level One of the best behavior traits of the Shih Tzu is that this dog will contently jump up to play around with its owners or others or will cheerfully run through a field as if it is the best place it has ever seen! Alternatively, the Shih Tzu will also be perfectly content to lay on its dog bed, looking on as its human family watches a movie. As an owner, if you are busy with household tasks, the Shih Tzu will silently watch you, just happy to be in a warm and safe home. Vital to the happiness and health of the Shih Tzu is a daily opportunity to exercise. This dog is a perfect companion for everyone from homes with children, to elderly owners living alone. The ability to feel comfortable around people of all ages is one of the reasons why Shih Tzu are great therapy dogs. Remaining close to its owner, not demanding or high strung, the Shih Tzu will happily keep their human company from morning to night. They have a small size, yet are rather sturdy for a toy breed. This dog also is a wonderful family pet. Absolutely happy to get attention and be loved by 1 person or 10, the Shih Tzu is a perfect family member. Most of the time, they are perfectly content to sit quietly and wait as long as needed to finally get that hug and pat that they long for so badly. It is important to make sure that all family members realize just how little the Tzu is, and that all must be careful when playing with the dog and to watch where they step! Normal and expected behavior blends well for interaction with children. Not a snappy or aggressive dog, he or she will be thrilled to play with toddlers and children. This dog will usually follow their lead. Although this breed has a regal appearance, it will merrily romp around with children of all ages. When needing a break, the Tzu will simply retreat to their resting area as long as it is easily accessible. Just two elements to keep in mind is that youngsters should be taught proper handling techniques which includes approaching from the side, two-handed pick-up and holding the dog close to the body. Older children should be included in all care including feeding, as this teaches the Shih Tzu to respect all humans, despite their size and age. This can be toward strangers, noises or just about anything and everything. This is commonly seen when caring for a rescued, adopted Shih Tzu. While this can be troubling canine behavior, there are many reasons why a dog may behave this way and many methods that you can implement to try and help you dog. Having a other dogs is not usually an issue, as this dog will be friends with just about any other pet. Although it should be said that since the Shih Tzu so badly craves love and attention from its human family members, it is sometimes suggested to limit other pets if your time at home is limited. As with any other dog breed, there is a chance that your Shih Tzu will have some difficulty adjusting to a new dog entering into the household. For more information on this subject: The idea that the Shih Tzu has a stubborn streak should not be taken out of context nor over exaggerated. Because this dog is so lively, animated and playful, the Shih Tzu may sometimes be happily oblivious to the serious need of training and housebreaking. Therefore, an owner may need to offer a bit more time than with other breeds to instill the necessary training methods. Not only can this breed be trained; they can excel with advanced commands such as those given at dog show agility events. See why this happens and the exact 6 steps you should take to stop this dangerous behavior. Shih Tzu Rolls Around in Feces - This is a disturbing and puzzling behavior; see the top reasons why a dog does this and the 5 steps to stopping it. Shih Tzu is Stubborn - This breed can cross the line from being independent to being a bit stubborn. Shih Tzu Humping - This behavior can be seen with young pups and older adults, males and females, and though it is more common with un-fixed dogs it can be seen with spayed and neutered dogs. Read why dogs does this and exactly how to address this. Shih Tzu Coprophagia - This refers to when a dog eats feces; see the 4 reasons why a dog does this and the 5 steps you can take to put a stop to it. See what is normal and what is a red flag of a possible health issue. Also, dogs can lick compulsively lick themselves, which often leads to raw, irritated areas. We are a participant in the Amazon Services LLC Associates Program, an affiliate advertising program designed to provide a means for us to earn fees by linking to Amazon. Contact Us All text and images are protected by copyright laws.

9: Common Dog Behavior Issues | ASPCA

Aggression is the most common and most serious behavior problem in dogs. Different forms of aggression require different treatments.

Pomeranian Behavior Overview It is important to know and understand the typical behavior of a Pomeranian. You will want to know if this breed will blend well into your family, and also that what you envision as being a Pomeranian owner is indeed what life will be like with this little fluff ball. If you are having training issues with your Pom or will be getting a puppy and want to know what training will be like, we have information on this as well. Expected Behavior Each Pom is different because each has his or her own particular personality. This type of dog certainly can not be categorized by one or two words that carries over across the entire breed. That said, there are some traits that are commonly seen with the breed. For example, if a person is very loud and full of energy, in time a Pom will usually mimic that energy and be active and vocal. If a person tends to be quiet and shy, they will usually find that their Pomeranian adapts to a more quiet and relaxed state. Caring for a rescue Pomeranian will entail a bit more focused attention. A Pomeranian, through training, can become a match to his or her owners. Proper house training, and controlling unnecessary barking and biting will ensure good behavior and a wonderful bond. It is very rare for this breed to have any serious aggression problems; though this is a behavior that can come on suddenly if the dog is in pain. Those who live alone will find this breed to be a great companion. This breed tends to bond very close with owners; although in some cases if it seems that a Pomeranian does not have a close bond with an owner, some extra attention and doing more activities together may be needed to make the relationship stronger. Being very adaptable, most will also enjoy the company of other dogs. Although a Pom is a rather small dog, generally under 10 lbs. This breed was originally a much larger sled dog and therefore the instinct to protect and guard its owner is still inbred in the Pomeranian. Even if your Pom is a quiet dog, do expect its behavior to turn up a notch if a stranger comes to the door. A Pomeranian may bark if he senses a stranger or feels there may be impending danger to its owner. And Poms show great loyalty to their family members. Pomeranians love to please. They will be your best friend, your shadow, and a whole lot of personality in a little ball of fluff. A Pom will generally adapt quite well to just about any situation. The type of environment or home that is perfect for a Pomeranian is which ever home its owner is in. This dog will be happy as a clam in a sprawling farmhouse and just as content in a small apartment. However, a Pom must be an inside dog. Going for walks and playing around in warm temperatures will always be fun for him, but he must never be considered an outside dog, and should always be supervised with outside, even if it is in an enclosed yard. This is a generalization that is simply not true. Each dog is an individual; personality and behavior will depend on: The natural instinct to be a companion dog this is in the bloodline. The socialization that the breeder instills during the newborn weeks, i. The environment that the owner provides. If a Pomeranian is slowly introduced to elements in the world other dogs, the noise of cars driving by, doorbells ringing, the TV, etc then he or she should behave just fine when hearing them. If there is chaos all around, any dog would be apt to behave with excess excitement and even nervousness. The behavior of a Pomeranian can be very calm and friendly, this is done with proper training. Socialization It is first the breeder who shapes the personality of the young Pomeranian puppy and then the owner takes over that roll. Generally, the 1st year will generally establish the personality of the dog and how he reacts to people and situations. Though, even at an adult age, a Pom can be socialized to certain elements. The first 2- 3 months are crucial for a pup to learn about the world, become used to normal household noises, begin to potty train, learn about human touch and so forth. A Pom that is not properly socialized may have behavioral issues; this can include inappropriate barking, signs of anxiety with visitors to your home and more. Read about bringing your puppy home and Pomeranian socialization. With healthy Poms, there are times of being very active and then times of naps to recover from that. Are you wondering if your Pom sleeps too much or how much sleep to expect if you will be bringing a Pom into your home? Read about Pomeranian Sleeping Habits. And older Poms of just about any age may develop a chewing habit due to various reasons. While many owners struggle with this sort of thing, if you prepare for this and arm yourself with a few important tools, you can easily keep things under control. Read more about Pomeranian teething and chewing Eating Poop Known as coprophagia, this is a common behavior issue, and it is not just unpleasant to see, it can also make a dog ill. Many dogs will eat their own feces, but some will also do this with the stools of other dogs, or even with cats. Luckily, there are some things that you can do to help your Pomeranian stop this particular, disturbing behavior. Read more about Poms eating feces. Separation Anxiety This refers to the struggles that a puppy or dog can have when home alone and faced with feeling isolated and lonely. This is not uncommon with dogs, and especially with breeds like the Pomeranian that were developed to be lap dog companions. Fortunately, there are some steps you can take and methods you can use, that can combine to really help a Pom. Read more about Pom Separation Anxiety. Eating Grass Though eating greens is great for a dog, this certainly does not apply to the grass that is growing in your yard or other outdoor spaces. When a dog has the habit of ingesting grass, this can lead to upset stomach, vomiting, possible contraction of worms, and even poisoning due to lawn care chemicals. In addition, it contains fantastic chapters regarding grooming, health, and all aspects of care. It is available as both a hard copy 8. Though this breed can be overly stimulated by visitors to the door, and just the site of other dogs, some also seem to bark for no reason. There are things that you can do to cut down on barking behavior, though no dog will be completely silent. Read more about Pomeranian barking. You may also be interested in: Pomeranian is a Picky Eater and Other Eating Issues - A round-up of the most common issues seen revolving around food, with detailed answers to resolve them. Pomeranian Fearful of Loud Sounds - Exactly how to help with fear of thunder storms, fireworks, and the vacuum cleaner. Best Supplies for a Pomeranian - The essentials needed to take optimal care of a Pom.

Congratulations, youre hired Nishu-ike Shoka in Tachinobori (So-no-So) Get rid of junk mail Being in the lamp. Health Practice Research and Formalized Managerial Methods. 1994 Summer School in High Energy Physics and Cosmology Prophecy in the transition from Assyrian to Babylonian End of the drought Hurstmonceaux castle. What is a person? Down Peaceful Paths (Down Peaceful Paths) Postmodern vernaculars Beside the bamboo Installing Windows Vista My big book of everything Frank ocean thinking about you sheet music Hspt practice test 500 pages Padi rescue diver manual french Nuclear power and East-West cooperation Hamlets absent father Maya Sangh And The Valley of the White Ones Pierik, R. The left-handed boy. Importance of time management in students life Power and process Epilogue entertaining lessons. Muslim Zanzibaris of South Africa Effective interaction in contemporary nursing. Christian internationalism. Procurement for construction projects Crime (Current Controversies) A. C. Benson and the thread of gold. The Life of John Marshall (Volume II) The expectant parents companion Basic illustrated cooking in the outdoors Renewed on the run Primary care providers guide to compensation and quality All district pin code list Geology of Sirt Basin Hollywoods image of the Jew Buddhist birth-stories (Jataka tales)