Jump to Recipe Print Recipe Hola everyone! Slow cooked authentic Mexican pork carnitas is what I am making today. Those who know me well know that I am always trying to find food parallels, a culinary kin. So, here I go, authentic Mexican pork carnitas are really the first cousin to pulled pork, a US favorite. The traditional way of cooking this dish is by seasoning the pig and burying it in the ground. I read that authentic Mexican pork carnitas are traditionally cooked in a copper pot because copper distributes the heat evenly. Who would have thought? I actually like to use my slow cooker because I get to enjoy the beautiful aromas that slowly fill every corner of my kitchen. After the carnitas are nice and cooked, I shred them with two forks, and then lay them out on a baking sheet, and broil for 5 minutes or so. Now, you would expect that something that tastes this good has to have a secret ingredient, or lots of ingredients. Actually, authentic Mexican pork carnitas is such a humble dish that you probably have everything you need in your fridge and pantry. I also like to use my very own chili powder blend. Here are the steps to make authentic Mexican carnitas like a pro every time! Place the pork shoulder in the slow cooker sprinkle on the spice mixture. Add the onions, garlic and bay leaves. Add the lime slices and be sure you peel them and discard the rind. Add 1 cup of water and cook on high for 6 hours. Flip the shoulder every couple hours. Check it after 5 hours and let it cook until the meat separates easily with a fork. Once the shoulder is fork tender shred it with a couple forks on a cutting board. Set your oven on broil while shredding. Place the shredded pork on a baking tray and slide under the broiler. Broil for 5 minutes or if you like it really crispy leave it a bit longer but keep an eye on it. If you love Latin food then you have to try some of my all time favorite dishes or bookmark them for later. Here are some of the most popular ethnic dishes, their history and ingredients to make at home. A true comfort food of slow cooked beef served over rice. This is the cilantro based ingredient used in many Latin soups, stews and black beans. You need to have this tomato based ingredient for Latin style beans and shredded chicken. Latin Style or Cuban Black Beans: If you have never tried these you are missing out and they are so easy! A citrus cured fish or shrimp appetizer with some kick. If you have time leave me a comment, or tweet it! Spread the blog love! Super easy to make in the slow cooker and then crisp up in the oven. Authentic Mexican Street Corn is just like they serve it from the street carts of Mexico. This post is sponsored by Princess Cruises. All opinions expressed are my own. I have a deep love of Mexican Street Corn. The flavors in it are just so amazing. In fact, they are so inspiring that I even created a soup based on the flavors. It was great to visit the Caribbean and see first hand that its beauty remains. Now is the perfect time to book your Caribbean vacation and I highly recommend traveling with Princess. Cruising is such a great way to travel and see the Mexican Caribbean. We were able to see the coast of course, but we were also able to travel quite a distance inland to see the amazing Mayan ruins. My stomach forced me to make a bee-line for it. Clearly we saw some amazing things. We climbed across ancient Mayan ruins and trekked through the jungle and even saw a monkey. We swam with turtles and dined on the beach. We met Mayan families and explored the most beautiful underground water formations called cenotes. Not only is the food amazing, but the people and the culture is truly something special. I replicated the flavors of the street corn there exactly and was sure to ask lots of questions I could get it right for you. One of the important things to do is to grate your Cotija cheese rather than crumble it. This will give you the right texture and will work better with our mixture. The hot sauce and the chopped cilantro are optional garnishes on Mexican Street Corn. For the hot sauce, use a high quality Mexican style hot sauce. I personally like adding the hot sauce as it adds both heat and flavor. Add cilantro for both color and flavor, if desired. Watch the video below where I walk you through every step of this recipe.
