Babe: Pig in the City is a Australian-American comedy-drama film and the sequel to the film Babe. It is co-written, produced and directed by George Miller, who co-wrote and produced the original film.

Not Pig in the City! Pig in the City, during a scene that has never left my mind since I first experienced it. Fury Road is brilliant, innovative, exciting and disarmingly poignant, we should not forget Babe: That might sound like hyperbole but I mean it. Pig in the City, through narrative and superb, unique, incomparably Miller-esque visual cinematography by Andrew Lesnie, works on that kind of existential level. The chase has been exciting, visceral and scary so far, Miller never makes it cute, this is a real action scene, and as Babe is coming around a corner, heading to a bridge, the scene shifts into slow motion. And, then, it continues on. The narrator states: Miller does not sugar coat this overwhelmingly moving moment or question asked with eyes. Babe is not given an answer. The dog lunges at him intending to kill. The other animals go back inside, intending to allow the dog to die. But Babe, freshly out of the water, his fur ruffled up and wet, sadly gazes at this creature. The pig cannot allow his attacker to perish. Even the way Babe is lit is moving. Pig in the City so different. That lack of repetition was one of the reasons some critics and viewers were against the movie. Why are we in this crazy, dark, imaginary city? Why is Mickey Rooney a creepy, sad clown? Because like Fury Road, Miller did not rest on his laurels and repeat himself, even at the risk of confounding or upsetting viewers. You should feel a bit upset while watching Babe: Pig in the City. And you should feel something new, your emotions whirling all over the place. So it all goes sideways pretty quickly. Esme is off to the city with Babe, hoping to earn money at a sheepdog-herding contest in a fair far out of town. If you think the movie is going to be about Babe in that contest, Miller upends that expectation as well. This is one of many ingenious, disturbing and beautiful set pieces set to Edith Piaf. And one of myriad feelings. And Babe likely feels guilty, even if none of this is his fault. Like a child made to feel terrible from a bad parent, only to feel responsible for the bad parent. Fugly will soon be hauled out in a stretcher in a coma, endangering the livelihood of the apes, Babe: Pig in the City understands this kind of deep-rooted childhood guilt. And worry makes him lonely. The narrator speaks, ever-so- lovely, and sadly: It can leave you empty. And whom do you turn to? He thought it might help if he could recall Fly and Rex and their steadfast words, and he tried really hard, but he could barely remember the face of his beloved boss. The farm was fading. It had become just a comforting dream, an echo. Pig in the City, but what is comfort, what is happiness, without experiencing darkness, even a nightmare? How will you know what any of that means without opposition? It comes burdened with responsibilities and fragility of risking heartbreak.

Directed by George Miller. With Magda Szubanski, Elizabeth Daily, Mickey Rooney, James Cromwell. Babe, fresh from his victory in the sheepherding contest, returns to Farmer Hoggett's farm, but after Farmer Hoggett is injured and unable to work, Babe has to go to the big city to save the farm.

Plot[edit] Babe, an orphaned piglet, is chosen for a "guess the weight" contest at a county fair. The winning farmer, Arthur Hoggett, brings him home and allows him to stay with a Border Collie named Fly, her mate Rex and their puppies, in the barn. A duck named Ferdinand, who crows as roosters are said to every morning to wake people so he will be considered useful and be spared from being eaten, persuades Babe to help him destroy the alarm clock that threatens his mission. Rex sternly instructs Babe to stay away from Ferdinand now a fugitive and the house. Babe is almost chosen for Christmas dinner but a duck is picked instead after Hoggett remarks to his wife Esme that Babe may bring a prize for ham at the next county fair. On Christmas Day, Babe justifies his existence by alerting Hoggett to sheep rustlers stealing sheep from one of the fields. The next day, Hoggett sees Babe sort the hens, separating the brown from the white ones. Impressed, he takes him to the fields and allows him to try and herd the sheep. Rex is then chained to the dog house, muzzled and sedated, leaving the sheep herding job to Babe. Although he manages to scare them off, Maa is mortally injured and dies as a result. Hoggett arrives and, thinking that Babe killed her, prepares to shoot him. Fly is so anxious to find out whether he is guilty or innocent that, instead of barking orders at the sheep, she talks to them to find out what happened. Learning the truth, she barks to distract Hoggett, delaying him until Esme mentions that the police say feral dogs have been killing sheep on neighboring farms and asks him why he has taken his shotgun out. When Esme leaves on a trip, Hoggett signs Babe up for a local sheepherding competition. As it is raining the night before, Hoggett lets him and Fly into the house. However, Duchess scratches him when he tries to speak to her, so Hoggett immediately confines her outside. When she is let back in later, she gets revenge on Babe by revealing that humans eat pigs. Horrified, he runs out to the barn and learns from Fly that this is true. The next morning, Fly discovers that Babe has run away. She and Rex alert Hoggett and they all search for him. Rex finds him in a cemetery and Hoggett brings him home. However, he is still demoralized and refuses to eat. Hoggett gives him a drink from a baby bottle, sings to him " If I Had Words " and dances a jig for him. At the competition, Babe meets the sheep that he will be herding, but they ignore his attempts to speak to them. As Hoggett is criticized by the bemused judges and ridiculed by the public for using a pig instead of a dog, Rex runs back to the farm to ask the sheep what to do. They give him a secret password, first extracting a promise that he will treat them better from now on. He returns in time to convey the password to Babe, and the sheep now follow his instructions flawlessly.

Facing foreclosure, Esme Hoggett resolves to show Babe at a faraway fair for an appearance fee. On the way to the fair, Mrs. Hoggett and Babe are unexpectedly detained and forced to stay in an unfamiliar and hostile city. They find the only hotel in town that secretly accepts pets but soon become separated from each other. He tells Esme that Babe has escaped and she leaves to search for him but is arrested after she causes an uproar with a motorcycle gang. Floom is later taken to the hospital because he is ill. The concerned Landlady stays by his side and leaves all the animals alone in the hotel unprotected. This quickly arouses the suspicion of a meddlesome neighbor across the street. As Thelonus broods over his ailing master, the three chimpanzees leave to find food. Babe follows them and mentions his sheep herding skills. The leader of the chimpanzees uses Babe as a decoy to distract two malicious dogs guarding an alleyway while continue their search. Frightened, Babe runs away, but the spike keeping the dogs chained up breaks free and the dogs give chase throughout the city. Babe loses one in a junkyard but chooses to rescue the bull terrier from drowning. This earns him the respect of all the animals and the loyalty of the once-dangerous bull terrier. Babe allows the strays into the hotel and one of the chimpanzees, Zootie, goes into labor and gives birth to twins. Babe sings to the newborns and the other animals join in. Ferdinand the duck, who has been trying to find Babe after he left the farm, is finally able to reach him. The neighbor realizes that the hotel is filled with animals and calls the officials to dispose of them. The animals are taken away. Babe and Ferdinand escape, as well as a wheelchair-using dog called Flealick. Meanwhile, Esme Hoggett tells her story before a judge and is set free. Both women and Babe and his friends make their way to the institute, where a banquet is in progress. Babe frees the animals. Esme and the landlady burst into the banquet shooting fire extinguishers to keep the guards away. After being held by the waiters and chefs by her braces, Esme runs to the balcony then ties the elastic braces from the costume to a streamer from the chandelier and bounces from it trying to save Babe from a chef. As she is swinging, she bumps one of the waiters off a ladder while he is trying to keep a tower of champagne glasses from falling over. As Esme is regaining her balance, she hears a strange noise and looks down and sees that beneath the costume, an inflatable flesh-colored, suit is rapidly expanding like a balloon. She screams as the trousers rip, falling off altogether. The braces are attached somehow to the hoop of the trousers which is attached to the inflatable suit. Esme then begins to bounce around the room using the balloon as a space hopper. Three other chefs and waiters start to swing around on steamers. Esme evades them and eventually retrieves Babe, but the combined weight of her, Thelonus who is clinging to her braces, Babe, the three apes and the chefs and waiters brings the chandelier down, causing all the balloons to fall that were being held up by a banner. Esme bounces into a pile of balloons and struggles to get up due to the inflated suit. Zootie realizes one of her babies is missing and desperately searches for it. Babe sees it clinging to a live wire from the chandelier cord and about to fall. He alerts Thelonus just in time to catch it. Esme then rolls over to Babe and says, "Pig, You get here now! The animals join them as well" the chimpanzees live freely in the trees, Thelonus shows his loyalty to Mrs. Hoggett by helping her with chores, the bull terrier tries to raise his puppies whom he fathered with a pink poodle from the hotel who left the farm with another dog to be tough, and Flealick chases trucks that pass by clinging to them. Farmer Hoggett recovers and is successful in repairing the well.

One day, Babe inadvertently causes an accident and Arthur ends up in a hospital. Esme is unsuccessful tending the farm alone. Soon, two men from the bank arrive to inform Esme that she and Arthur have not paid their rent on time, and they will soon be evicted at the end of the month. Esme locates a letter from a fan saying that if she enters Babe in a sheepdog herding contest, held at a fair far away, she will win a large amount of money. She decides to enter Babe and they leave the farm together. At the airport in the city of Metropolis, a sniffer dog falsely detects that Babe and Esme are carrying illegal substances. Airport security officers interrogate them, causing them to miss their connecting flight. An airport cleaner informs them about a hotel that is suitable for accommodating animals, so Esme and Babe go there. Babe initially refuses, but accepts when the chimps mention a reward he will receive after doing the act. When Esme returns, Fugly tricks her into thinking that Babe ran off into the city. Esme leaves to look for Babe, but is arrested after causing an accident with some skaters and police officers. Fugly performs his clown act in a hospital, but Babe accidentally trips him and he throws a flaming torch into the stage curtains which catch fire, forcing everyone out. The next morning, Fugly goes to the hospital in a food coma escorted by the landlady. Babe is in his room, hungry and waiting for Esme to return. That night, the chimps try to steal food from a store and use Babe to distract two dogs, who chase Babe around the city. Babe falls into a river and swims away, but returns and saves one of the dogs from drowning. The dog becomes friends with Babe, and Babe invites him and the other homeless animals into the hotel. They share the food around and then sing, alerting the duck Ferdinand who was searching for Babe. Zootie gives birth to twins, and the animals celebrate. Animal control officers are called to capture all the animals and seize them, except for Babe, Tug, Ferdinand and Flealick. The next day, Esme is released after explaining her predicament. Esme and the landlady confront Hortense to find out where the animals have been sent, then set off to find them. Afterwards, the landlady sells the hotel and gives the money to Esme so she can save the farm. The landlady and the animals come to stay at the farm, where Arthur has recovered from his injury.
