

1: Great Garden Ideas for Backyard Entertainment

Two things to keep in mind when setting the backyard buffet table: nothing too heavy and nothing too fancy. Lightly dressed salads and slaws complement an easy menu of burgers and sandwiches (see Backyard Barbecue, Sausage Style). Here are a couple of serving tips: Use plastic squirt bottles for condiments.

Your pool is already the center of fun every summer, but how about expanding your backyard pool area by building outdoor entertainment centers complete with a pergola, television, music player and speaker system. What could possibly make relaxing by your pool on a warm summer day even better? How about relaxing by your pool under your very own pergola while watching a ball game on a flat screen TV with surround sound? Outdoor entertainment centers are also great to reduce stress. Studies show that sitting in a garden and combining music with clean air and sunlight can help you unwind and relax after a long hard day. Down to Earth Landscapes, Inc. We install the following outdoor entertainment center products: Electronics for outdoor living spaces continues to open up new ways to bring luxury and convenience into your backyard garden. For example; Audio and video content can be provided from electronic equipment inside your home and accessed with an easy-to-use remote control. Televisions for Outdoor Use When choosing an TV for outside use go with an LCD display rather than a plasma screen because it will handle glare better something that will obviously be an issue outside. There are televisions made specifically for outdoor use but do not buy them if you think you will only be using it occasionally because they are very expensive. Of course, you do have to be wary of the weather if you choose this route so make sure the TV is protected from the elements. If you plan to watch TV outdoors on a regular basis a TV made specially for outdoor use is a smart investment because it can handle the elements so much better. Speaker Systems for Outdoor Living Spaces To provide a real home theater atmosphere many of our clients install surround sound speakers throughout the pool area. Our outdoor audio products are made to blend into your environment because they can easily be hidden by building them flush on the face of pillars or into your pergola or using speakers that look like rocks. We make sure of placing them in places that look natural. The boundary between your inside and outside living space is becoming more blurred. It is now possible to think about the introduction of technology into your garden. It presents new and exciting opportunities for your landscaping and outdoor living experience. We enjoy creating fun outdoor entertainment centers. Down to Earth Landscapes Inc.

This backyard entertaining space is defined by the gravel floor, palm plants for the virtual walls. Kevin O'Gara, the editor and founder of Thou Swell, remade his patio for our Patio Style Challenge series.

There are many materials which usually used for outdoor deck but here are the common four materials. Redwood – there are numerous type of timbers such as Redwood and also Cedar are quite durable for backyard. Despite the expensive price, Redwood is suitable for outdoor backyard due to the good finish and durability. Pressure-Treated Limber – if you are still into wood finish look, the pressure-treated limber should be in the list. It is the most preferred material for classic wood appearance. Despite the beautiful classic look, pressure-treated limber requires intensive maintenance and prone to bending after extensive use. Compound – composite product or plastic requires little maintenance once in a while. However, your choice of compound material may be limited in terms of color options but there are still other alternatives materials. Lightweight aluminium – this material is considered the sturdiest for backyard deck among the others. Despite the performance, lightweight aluminium is the most expensive among other types of materials. Those are some recommendation for the backyard materials. If you have one in mind, you may need to conduct extensive research to decide which one works best to the backyard before actually choosing one.

Focus On Functional Areas When you start designing the backyard, including separating the areas for the deck, you will need to carefully think on how you will use the area. This is especially important when you are going to divide the use of deck in two or three different purpose. If you are going to separate the backyard into multiple purpose, you can use some furnishing to help you visually divide the space into the desired purposes. You can think of having a small barbecue table in the backyard or may be creating a small open kitchen for food preparation station close to the grill for those barbecue nights. You may also need to consider more than one seating for you to loosen up those muscles or you can also simply use one huge table as a statement as well as the center place when you wish to have outside meal.

Consider Circulation Of Activity After you are finished with the outdoor deck ideas and design, the next thing to consider is the amount of the activity carried out in the area. For most people, outdoor deck is the place where they can gather and bond with friends and families. Whatever design that you choose, such as climbing up levels from lower ground, personal carrying trays from the grill side, or children running around, it is crucial to develop the space with flow motion as consideration. If you divide the backyard into some smaller place, you will need to make sure that there is a clear difference of function between one areas and the other in the backyard. If you are not sure whether there is actually enough left area, you can step back and see the backyard from distance. Through this way, you will automatically see when there is more space. However, when you are not sure, always remember that leaving one open space is always a better choice.

Include Several Degrees If you are in doubt for not having enough room to wander around, think about having a couple of deck levels for the outdoor deck ideas. Creating integrated deck levels allows you to add more space for various purposes and also gives you more control of the final look of the outdoor deck. When creating several decks with level, you may want to consider the function of each space based on its own degree. In addition, you will also need to connect all level of decks with similar deck design. Also important to note, that all level of decks should be connected with easily-access and safe stairs. So, it will be easier to move from one level to another without the need to walk around.

Strategy Outdoor Deck Ideas Around Entertaining Most of the time, the deck will shine as the most cozy, enjoyable, and entertaining space of the house. Whether you want to provide simple laid-back supper for the family or hold a huge treat for close friend and colleagues, you will need to make sure that the outdoor deck can accommodate and organize the event as the basic function. For better look, you can add the suitable lightings and maybe couple of audio speakers. This will add more entertainment atmosphere to the outdoor deck. If you function the deck for party venue, you will need to add open kitchen space and perhaps wet bar for a wonderful outdoor deck ideas. This surely makes it easier for you to prepare the food while the party happens outdoor.

Outdoor Deck Ideas After bunch of things to consider, by now you surely have the general idea for the outdoor deck. You will carefully think of the deck functionality as well as the feature to add more value of the outdoor deck. No worry if you are still not sure of the general vision of the outdoor deck, here are some wonderful ideas for reference.

Sofa And Ottoman Arrangement If the main function of the outdoor deck is to gather with families and friends, you can choose the sofa and ottoman arrangement. You can choose the sofa and ottoman with matching color to the deck and the arrangement should be in circle. So, the arrangement of the sofa will support the discussion and add more togetherness.

Stunning Wood Deck Wood deck is always in trend. The classic look of furnished wood adds elegant value to the house. This type of wood deck also automatically makes statement without the need to add intricate detail. You can choose the type of sturdy wood timber such as Redwood, teak, or cedar for a long lasting deck. Despite the beautiful classic look, wood deck in actual life requires extensive maintenance depends on the type of the wood being used. If you choose this type of deck, make sure to consider the maintenance requirements as well.

Statement Gas Fireplace Another classic deck look is statement fireplace. Instead of using the old style fireplace, you can use gas fireplace with cozy sofa around it. The gas fireplace comes in various sizes and shapes but choose one that suit more with the general shape and size of the backyard. It should not be too big as it will reduce the motion space but too small fireplace will have less function as it is supposed to be. Thus, choosing the right size with the right choice of sofa is crucial for the statement gas fireplace outdoor deck ideas.

Ultra-Modern Oval Deck Oval deck is lit. It gives ultra-modern look for the house with futuristic touch. The main important point of the oval deck is that material choice. For futuristic and sleek looking deck, you can choose lightweight aluminum, but if you want elegant and sophisticated look, the timber wood material is always great. Innovative and brand new design for backyard gives nothing than wonderful outdoor deck.

Sleek Outdoor Cooking Area If you frequently have barbecue or outdoor meal, it is always a great idea to turn the backyard into outdoor cooking area. You can have a small outdoor kitchen with versatile grill and a center table for the design. The open kitchen design also serves as food preparation station, so, you will not have to go back and forth from the kitchen to the backyard. You can prepare the barbecue or even a party in the open kitchen style deck. Plus, you can choose aluminum material for the sleek and clean look.

Multi-Level Deck Space Multi-level deck space gives the wide space illusion. This design is also a great option if you want to provide clear separation of functions for example lounge space in the upper level and fireplace space in the lower level and small pool in the ground level. A compact size of deck can look wider with this design idea.

Two-Tier Wooden Deck Still in the levelling design, the two-tier wooden deck gives great architectural look. The functions of each of the deck level are clear. You can use the first level for lounge space while another level simply for open space.

Centered Table And Seating If you want something simple but wonderful, the centered table and seating design can be a great idea. You can choose a statement table which size and shape depends on the backyard and some chairs to surround the table. You can use the table for simple supper, gathering, and many more.

Integrated Bench Seats Many people may think that smaller backyard is much more difficult to design. But, the integrated bench seats with built-in seats can be a great option. This design allows you to have smaller seats as well as helps save much space for other furniture.

Tiny Seats Area For smaller space which is quite impossible to add many features, you can turn the space into tiny seats area. You can place couple of seats with small table on the backyard. This may not be as versatile as bigger deck, but you can always have an afternoon tea in that seat.

Outdoor Fireplace Outdoor fireplace gathers family and friend in those cold nights. You can create a warmer backyard by adding the fireplace as the center next to the various type of seating.

Comfortable Yard Seating If you want something out of the box for outdoor design, you can always come up with decoration and edgy furnishings. Depends on the theme, you can add decoration to improve the backyard value.

Flowing Furnishings Format Besides the design, another most important feature of outdoor backyard is the furniture. A good choice of furniture will make statement along with the best view of the backyard. You can choose flowing furniture style, classic style, comfortable style, and many more.

Modern Open Design Modern look is a good choice for sleek and tidy look. The open space concept also gives wide illusion of the deck. You can complete the design with a good choice of furniture which suits the modern concept.

Wooden Outing Bench Wooden outdoor deck concept is not over yet. Some people use the wooden concept to create a countryside touch. The wooden outing bench with small open kitchen gives the picnic vibes. The wooden bench style is perfect for late Sunday brunch.

Outdoor Swimming Pool Deck Outdoor deck and swimming pool is a perfect pair. The calming water in the swimming pool and cozy seating in the edge gives sophisticated look. The seating in the side of the swimming pool allows you to lie down and have a sip of soda after swimming session or you can even held a swimming pool party in the area. There are plenty of outdoor deck ideas to choose. Most importantly, make sure to match the design with the backyard size, shape, and its general condition. The best design that works best for your backyard will not only gives you an ultimate entertainment space but also functions properly.

Think how perfect beanbags and comfy, oversized cushions can be for an afternoon of lounging. Have some shade A place that shelters one from the sun is quite welcome when it comes to backyard entertainment. Think of tried-and-tested options like shade sails, overhangs, pergolas, etc. For something less permanent, an oversized beach umbrella or beautiful parasol can be ideal. Dining areas Make the most of those sunny days by dining outdoors. Even an old, tired-looking one can be dressed up with linen, candles and fresh blooms. Get the lighting right Who says your backyard entertainment must end once the sun sets? Just make sure whatever lights you decide on are designed for outdoor use, even if your garden area is semi-covered. Bi-fold doors, as they perfectly unify your garden with an indoor entertaining area and encourage guests to wander outside. Heating things up For warm-weather socialising, quick and easy food is best, such as grilled meats and fresh salads. Therefore, we always welcome the addition of a barbecue to enhance backyard entertainment. There is a reason why the French and Italians use gravel so extensively: Thus, instead of paying lots for a wooden deck we know they are beautiful, but they can also be costly , lay down some simple gravel. For extra outdoor style, add an edging material like steel edging, bender board and mortared stone around your gravel area to keep the surrounding grass from growing in. Add comfort with textiles Whatever style you choose for your outdoors, soft furnishings are always welcome. Think pillows, throws, blankets, tablecloths and outdoor rugs in big patterns and bright colours. Surrounding your garden with a wall of plants creates a feeling of cosiness and privacy. An especially great option is bamboo – this versatile and fast-growing plant can be ideal for creating a green screen, regardless of how large or tiny your outdoor space is. Courtyards are perfect for small and large yards alike. When it comes to smaller yards, a courtyard can be your main focal point; with larges spaces, a courtyard can serve as a secret little getaway spot. By nature, courtyards have higher walls, creating a sense of enclosure and privacy for more intimate gathering. But whether those walls be stucco, brick or wood, ensure your chosen material complements the style of your house. No need to cancel that garden party just because your grass looks a bit iffy. This is how you bring your garden back to life.

4: Backyard Entertaining - 5 Steps to Patio Perfect! - Lindsay Hill Interiors

Take the party outside with these ideas for entertaining and cooking on your porch, patio, or deck.

Tufted seat cushions When I started dreaming up my patio makeover, I wanted to create a new outdoor room in a space that was a rather bleak concrete pad. I imagined defining the floor with gravel and the walls with palms to make an inviting space that felt intimate, but accommodating and inviting. Using these elements and our new Beverly sectional , the patio transformed into an outdoor living room with lush plant life and a splash of color. I love our new sectional because it has a durable wicker weave and simple, contemporary lines that give it a timeless shape. The Beverly Collection offers 16 options for fabric colors. I knew I wanted to add a subtle pop of color to the patio, so I chose a classic spa blue called Spectrum Mist. It looks beautiful with green plants and the dark brown wicker of the sectional. The black lattice throw pillows pair well with the lighter blue pillows to add some contrast. Our patio also opens up to the back room of the house with two garage doors, so I brought out the shades of blue in the back room to the cushions. The accent tables provide the perfect place for appetizers, and even provide some storage with a shelf underneath. Our versatile pouf also provides a place for a tray to create another side table, or it turns into extra seating or even a footrest. Its woven texture and resistance to mildew makes it perfect for the patio! I placed the grill at one end, conveniently located next to the dining table. Our shiny new Dyna-Glo grill is large enough to cook for groups and it has a side burner that can be used like a cooktop eye for making sides or even frying chicken without leaving a smell in the house! First, I gave our existing patio furniture a touch up. I used Rust-Oleum matte black spray paint to give our worn-out metal dining set a facelift, and then used the same spray paint to cover an old kitchen cart. The kitchen cart became a potting table or entertaining hub, perfect for serving drinks on or potting some new plants. Enjoying dinner al fresco is one of my favorite parts of outdoor living. As the sun goes down, flickering candlelight creates a beautiful ambiance from the lanterns, string lights, and tea lights on the table. I also chose tufted seat cushions with the same color fabric as the sectional cushions to carry the spa blue palette to the dining area. Ready to tackle your own patio makeover? It's outdoor entertaining, HGTV style! Entertaining al fresco just got easier with our expert tips for decorating outdoor spaces, and summer party planning is simple with these fun warm weather ideas for guests.

And you have friends! At-home entertaining can seem a bit daunting, but with just a few simple additions to your outdoor space, you can create a cozy, relaxing environment for party-goers to enjoy. A crackling fire warms up your backyard aesthetically, but also literally, and there are plenty of options for fire pits. A traditional wood-burning fire pit surrounded by chairs is a backyard classic, but you could also skip the smoke with a gas pit. Grab a fun color or print and throw it under the dining table, or create a faux-living room setting by placing it with chairs and poufs. String together mood lighting String lights can transform a backyard and create cozy spaces on patios and under trees. Skip the Christmas lights and use bigger-bulbs for a more sophisticated, warm look. Free House Interior Design Ideas Seat everyone together For dinner parties, we love the aesthetic and convenience of seating everyone at a long table. The meal and conversation are easily shared in this family-style setting. Need to string together a few tables? Grab a tablecloth or two no plastic, please and your guests will be none-the-wiser as they gather around your new table. Grab seating from indoors that can do double duty – piano benches, poufs, dining room chairs make great additions to the classic lawn and camping chairs. A collection of chairs creates an eclectic look and gives guests an easier way to pick where to sit down. Haute Off The Rack Tune in Music relieves you of awkward silence, and dulls out any crying babies or barking dogs next door. Set a playlist at the beginning of the party and then forget about it. Go for crowd-pleaser classics: Twenty20 Up your game s Games give guests something to do and will easily start the conversation and competition between new acquaintances. Super low on space? Fearful of a stray bocce ball finding your kitchen window? Break out the board games! Easy card games and classic board games are a great thing to have laying out on the table before or after the meal. Diana Elizabeth Blog Bundle up with blankets Cold guests go home. Having a few wool blankets on hand is the perfect way to keep guests going as the temperature tapers off. Throw them in a basket, stack them on a chair or hang them from hooks up against your fence and get ready for your party to continue past the setting sun. No one wants to have to ask the host where to get a water. Weddings do this best of all when it comes to creative storage ideas, so take a look at Pinterest for inspiration like bathtubs, wheelbarrows and more. Design Within Reach Prepare food ahead of time You want to enjoy your guests once they arrive instead of scrambling in the kitchen to finish the food. Choose a menu that can be mostly prepared ahead of time and have simple snacks on hand while you finish up cooking. Food52 Hang a banner Not sure how much decorating to do? Skip the streamers and balloons and adorn your backyard with a simple banner that is sure to have everyone oohing and ahing.

Store backyard entertaining essentials in a handy spot Nothing ruins the fun of a party quicker than feeling stressed and frazzled, am I right? To make it easier on myself when I'm hosting an outdoor party or dinner, I try to keep my patio hutch stocked with the essentials that we use every time we entertain outside - paper goods, plates, serving utensils, etc.

Stones in this dry landscape are positioned to double as seats, and the steps too offer overflow seating for large gatherings. Small spaces can become delightful fantasy themed settings for a magical night in Morocco without leaving your backyard. This dining area is close enough to the pool to be part of the same space but divided by planting and a fountain. This intimate space is made even more private by the lattice fence and dense background planting. Larger spaces benefit from smaller informal conversation areas with comfortable furniture. Though this large fountain is visually appealing, it can drown out voices in the outdoor living spaces immediately adjacent. A spa doubles as the balance for this modern theme stone sculpture. An in ground spa doubles as a water feature when made more attractive by creative tile and other aesthetic features. Providing seasonal shade ensures that guests have plenty of room to gather in the exposure of choice. Entertaining is a very personal thing. Each individual, couple or family is unique in how they view gatherings with friends, and what they do during such get-togethers is equally diverse. This is why a designer must view your project as a one of a kind endeavor, because its ultimate form is derived from your idea of entertaining, the available space on site and the budget to put it all together. However, there are some standard tips that you should be aware of that will ensure your ultimate design fits your life and your lifestyle. Sit down dining for 4 Plan for more If you choose a four sided table for dining, you are pretty much limited to that number of diners. But if the table is round, you can fit a fifth person or even squeeze in a sixth without appearing forced or feeling cramped. Sit down dining for 10 Open space between parties Sitting ten people for an outdoor meal takes a lot of space. Can that area be designated for another use when guests are not present? To liberate this space plan for an expandable table. You can add leaves to seat ten, then shorten the table afterwards to create a more spacious view of the overall landscape. Cocktail parties Open for mingling Whether you invite friends or business associates, cocktails are always a highly social event. If this is a frequent entertaining option for you, the design should be open enough so the guests can wander freely without having to negotiate too many furniture obstacles. Night Parties About the light When you live for languid evenings with friends, the single most important thing is lighting. Lighting every step and grade change not only gives a festive ambiance, it ensures that there will be no accidents, particularly with stiletto heels. Day Parties Cool and warm Parties during the day can be an active family gathering, but for most adults this is brunch, luncheon or just an impromptu get together. While you are quite familiar with outdoor conditions on your patio, your guests may not be. Conversation Audio sensitivity No one wants to talk over a loud water feature. For those with mild hearing difficulties, particularly the over 50 crowd, widely spaced seating could make intimate conversation impossible. Arrange your seating so it is easy to hear everyone without voice fatigue. It is far better to err on the side of seating being too closely spaced than to risk a more wide open situation where some guests may have difficulty. This is where small gatherings of two or more people can occur with a feeling that they are protected from others overhearing their conversations. Intimate parties Transcend reality Strive for ambiance that can transform an ordinary evening into an outdoor dream. Small spaces allow you to create a really strong style that belies the reality of an ordinary neighborhood. Get this right and your space coupled with music and great food can become the equivalent of an exotic evening in Morocco or Tuscany. Large parties Keep it simple Any time you entertain on a large scale, avoid getting overly fussy about details. Spaces for these kinds of gatherings should be clean and open and quite simple in their layouts. It also saves time and money on detailed ideas that will go largely unnoticed. Attention to the basics like enough seating for everyone, a clear access to food and drink make it intuitive to enjoy an evening. Seasons Necessary coverage In climates where summer rainfall is common, design an outdoor entertaining space with a portion that is fully covered. Buffet dining Credenza a must A buffet frees up the hostess for activities other than serving each and every place setting. Design a credenza flush against a wall to make a buffet easy to do. This table can otherwise be used for collections of plants or outdoor art that makes it attractive all the time. If you decide on an impromptu gathering whether for coffee or cocktails, you have a convenient out of the way place to arrange your favorite foods and snacks without having to bring in a table or move another one around to fit. Bar Party central The bar can be ground zero for outdoor entertaining. This is not just a place to store bottles and mixers, but it becomes a social locale if the host is on one side making drinks and guests are on the other side of the bar milling around. Designing a place for the bar ensures this does not impinge on the outdoor kitchen which can become overly crowded during mealtimes. There is the option to use a portable bar unit that you can bring out for a large party, then put it away again so you need not see it all the time. Wine tasting Accommodating the aficionado For those who love fine wines, nothing is more important than to accommodate them into the plan for an outdoor entertaining space. A bar for wine tasting may be more expansive than a bar since the users will sit while they sample wines. Amenities include a chiller for wine bottles, racks and wine glass storage make it easy for impromptu enjoyment alfresco. Key is to make the wall cap wide enough and smooth to fit a tray or platter without it overhanging the edge. TV Sports outdoors Outdoor flat screen TVs eliminates the old problem of all the men inside watching the game while wives and kids are out by the pool. Entertainment spaces that are too far from poolside tend to split the party into two separate camps. But when the living spaces are designed with clear links to the pool, there is just one large area with varying uses. And when swimmers are present, this creates a more festive resort-like environment for cocktails and dining day and night. Spa Double duty The role of a spa in intimate parties cannot be overstated, but when it is a beautiful in-ground part of the landscape, you can make this double as a water feature. Interesting tile, programmable LED lighting and telescoping fountain heads turn this remedy for aching bones into a high profile water feature. Do not overlook the ability to make this spa serve double duty as a visual amenity and as therapy. Self contained kitchen Center of the universe Just as the kitchen is the center of the home, your outdoor kitchen always becomes the center of outdoor entertainment spaces. This keeps the hostess there with her guests rather than in the kitchen. Failure to understand this results in the outdoor kitchen separated from living spaces, which can potentially recreate the same separation you are trying to solve. It can be positioned in one location for an intimate gathering and in another place further out for a large party. You can even move it close to the house for a quick and easy grilled meal in winter weather. Outdoor living spaces with seatwalls are more versatile than those that rely strictly on freestanding furniture. They allow you to enjoy the space in every season, and in the summer the ability to apply colorful cushions to the seatwalls adds a festive flair.
