If you just started learning English, you first need to know some basic rules of the language. Developing a solid foundation in English grammar will not only help you create your own sentences correctly but will also make it easier to improve your communication skills in both spoken and written English.

You can use going to. We are going to bake a cake this afternoon. When are you going to clean your room? They are going to wash the car for Dad. It is going to get dark very soon. You can also use the simple present tense to talk about things that have been arranged for the future. The new supermarket opens tomorrow. The bus leaves in ten minutes. James moves to the second grade next year. The new school year starts on Monday. Next month I go to summer camp. We have a history test next week. Can and could are used with the pronouns I, you, he, she, it, we and they, and with singular or plural nouns. Could is the past tense of can. He can run faster than Arthur. She cannot afford such an expensive ring. Jack ran as far as he could. Can you help me? Can I come with you? I knew you could do it if you tried. She could not come because she was ill. Miss Lee said we could go home early. People often use can when they are asking for permission to do something. Can I use your pen? Yes, here it is. When you put not after can, you write it as one word: May I watch television now? May I borrow your pen? You may come in. You may go now. If it continues to rain, there may be a flood. I knew my teacher might find out. You can also use might to talk about things that are possible. Put your purse away or it might get stolen. You might slip, so hold on to the railing. Use do with the pronouns I, you, we and they, and with plural nouns. Use does with the pronouns he, she and it, and singular nouns. Did is the simple past tense of do and does. Dad does the dishes. Mom does the cooking. We always do exercise together. He does such interesting work. They do amazing tricks. Sally did her hair in front of the mirror. They did the dusting and cleaning. Jane did all the laundry by herself. Who did this drawing? I did poorly on my exam. I you we they.
