The dynamic duos serving as Festival co-chairs share their challenges, favorite wines and what motivates their supreme efforts. What is the biggest challenge you face as co-chairs? Juggling all the moving parts to make a successful festival, as well as hosting our vintner dinners. No matter how much effort you put out, there are things that are out of your control. We just pray for good weather. If you bid on only one item at the auction what would it be? We always lean toward the lots the vintners donate because most of them include travel, of course, wine and food, and most important, personal time with the vintner. He told us the history of Pianello, and he brought up a lot of his private reserve wines from his personal cellar for us to taste. What is your favorite wine or vintner? I lean toward the Italians, the Piedmont region, Barolo and Pianello. And we drink a lot of California wines, too. What is your most striking memory from past Festivals? And this past year we donated a magnum from almost every vintner who has ever been to the festival in the past 14 years. It was magnums total, and it went for almost a quarter of a million dollars. What does philanthropy mean to you? It means providing a helping hand to those less fortunate. And it comes in many forms, from financial support to giving your time and expertise. When we were newlyweds, it was more our time and expertise. Now we provide financial support and we certainly have tried to step up and be helpful. That has created a tremendous increase in competition for philanthropic dollars, for the vintners and the chefs. If you bid on only one auction lot, what would it be? I try not to get too involved ahead of time because impetuous buyers spend more, and part of my enthusiasm is to surprise myself. We often bid things up so somebody else has to spend more for it, and sometimes you end up owning that lot! They recently did sell their winery, but their wines over the years have been amazing. Gaja [Winery] in Piedmont Italy. We tasted a Chardonnay there that was just fantastic. How did you get involved in the Festival? We have a great appreciation for wine. If you have the opportunity to go to a vintner dinner, meet a renowned chef, have a wonderful meal and taste iconic wines, it is not a hard decision. But we also knew the auction lots were fantastic, and percent of the funds raised go to support underprivileged children in Collier County. Philanthropy is a state of mind. Everybody can do or give something of positive value to achieve a better society, no matter their economic situation or age. While other people may not have the same money, they have the same attitude and giving spirit we have. Sharon joined the Grant Committee the following year. The Florida native shares insight on her role and why she thinks the musical has been so overwhelmingly successful with audiences and critics. Is this your first national tour? I graduated from Carnegie-Mellon in May, and I got very, very lucky. They were able to treat my second semester as a sort of study abroad-internship while I was on the road with the show. The Book of Mormon was my first big gig, my first big step into the industry. For seven months, Naples resident Faith Harkey toiled over her page novel for middle-schoolers, Genuine Sweet Clarion, to perfect the story. It was a neat experience because I got to go along on the adventure, too. Ultimately, she learns she had the power all along to help. Why do you think the show has been so popular with audiences? It makes your jaw drop, but it has so much heart at the same time. But it all ends up with such a good heart in the end. Recently launched by the Naples resident, Canipelli, Firenze presents her carefully curated collection of the finest Florentine-made goods. Her store, with decor designed to capture the light, airy atmosphere of the Italian city, sells artisanal items she discovers on the frequent visits with and her husband, Andrea—exotic-skin handbags, gorgeous embellished sandals, gossamer fur pieces suited for Naples winter evenings, Marchesi de Frescobaldi wines, jewelry, hand-decorated Il Papiro paper goods, and other Italian delights, many of which can be customized for one-of-a-kind designs. One section of the store is dedicated to a broad collection of Cavalli Class by Florentine designer Roberto Cavalli. The architecture features Venetian plaster, Italian marble and crystal, adding to the authenticity of the Florentine shopping experience.

This is the second in a series of profiles of San Mateo County residents coping with diminished means and expectations in a weak and increasingly stratified economy: Although the unemployment rate is dropping in San Mateo County, the good news is concentrated in professional and business services jobs. The way it is usually presented in stories, play and movies, the first generation immigrates to the United States in search of a better life for themselves and their children. They labor long and hard at physically demanding jobs, struggling to gain a toehold on the American Dream. At the cost of much sacrifice, their children go to college, graduate and land well-paying, professional positions with room for advancement and security for themselves and their parents. But I have a very large family and I do not want to dishonor the family name in any way. Two years ago, she was laid off from her job at a local school district, which was forced to make drastic cuts because of the recession. Her sister has been laid off from her job for the summer, and perhaps longer. Jude is with me. He worked as a gardener, janitor, at construction and every other job he could find, saving every cent he could. For a while, he slept behind a gas station in East Palo Alto. Eventually, he saved enough to send for his wife and family. Her father, said Veronica, wanted his children to be educated in America. She has been restless and worried and depressed at not being able to find another job. She has trouble sleeping. And she has lost weight. During the past two years, she estimates that she has applied for more than jobs. In the beginning, she only looked for work in her field of education. Later, she widened the parameters of her search to include other, related fields. Now, she is willing to take on just about anything in order to pay the rent and put food on the table. She has applied at local restaurants to work as a waitress. She has scanned the listings for nanny jobs, and is considering working in home health care. She has sent out innumerable applications. Even for those, like Veronica who have the education and experience, finding work has become increasingly difficult in the current economy. Since she can no longer afford Internet service at home, she uses the computers in the library to scan the job listings. She follows up applications with visits to the work place. She is considering doing more. Another thing that bothers her about being poor is how isolating it is. She is not able to socialize with friends, or do any of the other things she enjoys anymore. Fortunately, she said, she and her sister have each other to lean on. We all need someone in our lives at a time like this. I say my prayers every day. Peter Claver, a Jesuit priest who in the early s spent his life serving the needs of African slaves. His example is a fitting reminder that we are called to be aware of the modern-day global slave trade with all its brutality and pervasiveness. It is estimated that 27 million women, men and children have been bought and sold for labor or prostitution and are currently held in slavery-like conditions. This slave trade, known as human trafficking, is considered the third greatest criminal activity in the world, ranking behind narcotics and the weapons trade. How ugly and immoral. Let us listen to the voices of those who have been trafficked. No child should ever have to know that kind of fear. They treated us like animals. I did not feel hopeful of what my future was going to be because I could not see what was going to happen tomorrow. Now that she has been rescued I feel hopeful, I can dream. I can see myself doing something with my life in two weeks, in two months. I am free now. Many committed people reach out in a variety of ways to meet the needs of victims. If the bill does not pass, U. In this precarious economic environment, more vulnerable and marginalized people may fall victim to those who would exploit them. Senate from the U. If you want to take some action, a call or email to your senators is one possibility. For an online petition, see [http: I close with prayer to St. Josephine, we pray that all modern-day victims of trafficking will be freed and that this horrid practice will end soon.](http://I close with prayer to St. Josephine, we pray that all modern-day victims of trafficking will be freed and that this horrid practice will end soon.) Guest Editorial A modest suggestion Any discussion of modesty in dress for church demands a sense of humor. While the Southern part of the United States may be more formal, and the Western part more informal, in general, casual dress is far more common today than it was three or four decades ago. Today there is a fledgling movement in parishes to recommend dress codes as a way of reminding parishioners to dress appropriately for a sacred occasion such as the Mass. Such concerns dovetail with the larger issue of inspiring a greater sense of reverence in Mass. This is a legitimate and laudable priority in that the Mass is so central to who we are as Catholics and how we nourish our faith. The discussion of reverence includes a variety of factors, ranging from dress and posture to the quality of sacred objects and liturgical music. These are all real issues, and the church in some ways is always seeking to improve a sense of reverence the revised translation of the Roman Missal and combat the temptation to make it a rote exercise or a simple obligation. In this context, dressing appropriately for Mass is an external sign of our appreciation for what is taking place in the Eucharistic celebration. The danger with placing too much emphasis on externals such as dress is that we may miss the larger point, which is an interior reverence that resides in the heart. That is why many parishes are encouraging their people to share the Sunday readings at home before Mass and to meditate on them. Also encouraged is getting to Mass early so as to collect oneself in prayerful silence. Families have many challenges getting everyone dressed and out the door, but just moving the schedule ahead five minutes can make all the difference. Rick Perry prayer rally photo Aug I saw some of the prayer rally as well and was inspired by what he said and did, especially his prayer asking our Lord for forgiveness to help America at this critical time. He prayed for guidance and wisdom for our governors and for President Obama Letters welcome Catholic San Francisco welcomes letters from its readers. Send your letters to: I can only hope for more tolerance. Patricia Keylon South San Francisco Support retired priests I think it was not a good decision, from a PR standpoint, to picture a marina of expensive boats in the brochure, distributed through the parishes, soliciting contributions to the Priests Retirement Fund. Given the negatives associated with the economy, jobs, disposable income, the image of a prosperous retirement for the servants of the faithful may not inspire the most generous giving. I think the profiles of Msgr. And so are Paying close attention to the liturgical prayers is a discipline that can counter the temptation to an unreflective recitation of the words. Focusing on the sacred actions is a powerful stimulus for prayer as well. Finally, the Mass is where we gather as a community. So a sign of our interior reverence also would be our efforts to welcome the stranger and exhibit the kind of generosity of spirit that makes us truly Christ-like. Scripture has ample warnings against a pharisaical approach to religious observance. Because we know how easily we can become agitated when we see people who, in our opinion, are dressed with a slovenly disregard at church, perhaps what we need to do is let God be the judge of what is appropriate for that person at that moment. Instead, we should focus on developing in ourselves a deeper sense of interior reverence, a task that is never completed. It is reprinted with permission. Perhaps the church, like her bridegroom, still proclaims words of eternal life. Perhaps a more meaningful statistic is the 15 million people who voted with their feet to enter the church in alone "roughly equal to the Americans who exited over a year period. Father Byron notes that of the U. Is it my way that is unfair, or rather, are not your ways unfair? When someone virtuous turns away from virtue to commit iniquity, and dies, it is because of the iniquity he committed that he must die. But if he turns from the wickedness he has committed, he does what is right and just, he shall preserve his life; since he has turned away from all the sins that he has committed, he shall surely live, he shall not die. Remember your mercies, O Lord. Your ways, O Lord, make known to me; teach me your paths, guide me in your truth and teach me, for you are God my savior. Remember that your compassion, O Lord, and your love are from of old. Their responses are usually all over the board. Most, however, put themselves in the big, apathetic middle. I used to find this very discouraging. I wondered if there was anything I could possibly say, anything I could possibly do, that would bring God into their lives and help them develop a real and lasting relationship with our Lord. One day, as I sat in a funk at my classroom desk, pondering whether or not I should give up teaching religion to become a long-haul trucker, I noticed something. These kids who seemed so indifferent to religion were among some of the kindest, Twenty-Sixth Sunday in Ordinary Time Ezekiel Good and upright is the Lord; thus he shows sinners the way. He guides the humble to justice, and teaches the humble his way. If there is any encouragement in Christ, any solace in love, any participation in the Spirit, any compassion and mercy, complete my joy by being of the same mind, with the same love, united in heart, thinking one thing. Do nothing out of selfishness or out of vainglory; rather, humbly regard others as more important than yourselves, each looking out not for his own interests, but also for those of others.

Words and music by the team of Richard M. Sherman and Milt Larsen. Milt Larsen is a lyricist, actor, author, entrepreneur and creator of the world famous Magic Castle private club in Hollywood. Cohan and the gay nineties comedy team of Weber and Fields. Richard currently wrote words and music for a new song to accompany the fireworks finale celebrating the Disneyland 60th Anniversary. Their offbeat comedy songs are now available on line. Go to Sherman and Larsen at iTunes or Amazon to enjoy their comedy songs today. Sherman, along with his late brother, Robert B. Sherman, have written more songs for motion pictures than any team in cinematic history. For decades, Richard has enjoyed raising money for numerous worthwhile causes by performing at charitable events. One of his proudest moments came when he, along with former president, George H. Sherman continues writing songs and composing music every day. Recently, two collections of his solo instrumentals were released on Solid Air CD: In he founded the world famous private club for magicians, the Magic Castle in Hollywood. He is the President of Magic Castles, Inc. In the year Magic Magazine polled their international readership and voted Milt Larsen as one of the most influential individuals in the history of magic. He is a true renaissance man in that his career encompasses writing, producing and performing. As a writer he is best known in the field of audience participation having written Truth or Consequences starring Bob Barker for an incredible run of eighteen years! In his early days he authored five joke books and three books involving Magic Castle. He writes a weekly column for members of the club as well as editing their monthly newsletter. He has written many stage revues and musicals. His collaborator is Richard M. Larsen owned and operated to Mayfair Music Hall in Santa Monica producing live stage revues for 10 years and the Variety Arts Theater, a seat variety theater in downtown Los Angeles for 12 years. He has been a lecturer at the Smithsonian in Washington D. The show is also heard worldwide Saturday afternoons at 4: Many consider the closing of the famed Palace Theater in New York in as the final curtain for vaudeville. At that time Milt was only one year old. He was an aspiring comedy writer and was fascinated by the comedians of the past. He started collecting recordings of showbusiness personalities as a teenager. Through his magical family he met and got to know famous people who were stars long before he was born. Edwards knew his young writer was enamored with the older stars and enjoyed talking to them. While still in High School he worked as a record archivist for Eddie Cantor. He has always loved radio and his first job as a professional writer was with the ABC Radio network. It was a daytime audience participation show with variety acts and a piece house orchestra. His weekend national radio shows recorded in his studio on the premises of the Magic Castle in Hollywood. His facilities house his huge record collection and his studio is designed specifically to play the old RPM vintage recordings. The shows are recorded using the newest state of the art MAC computer technology which includes to ability to clean up the snap, crackles and pops associated with the old records. The concept of the show is that younger generations have never heard samples of the great performers of the past. He introduces young people of today to a time of laughter and silly songs mixed in with some of the greatest music of all time. Oscar winning songwriter Richard M.

According to the records of the U. Py-O-My Blueberry Muffin Mix includes a can of blueberries and a set of paper baking cups and a sealed bag of muffin mix. Makes about 10 large delicious muffins--up to 16 small ones. So simple and economical to make Nothing adds more to a meal, a snack, or dessert--than mouth-watering blueberry muffins. The can of blueberries, right in the package, has plenty of berries And they taste simply heavenly Requiring no more than thirty minutes for preparation, including cooking time, the packaged product comes in three flavors, vanilla, chocolate and caramel. Such convenience, of course, means some sacrifice in quality. The pudding is a bit too coarse-grained to meet the standards of really fine cookery. But the flavor is pleasing, especially in the caramel and chocolate puddings. Topped with whipped cream, the dessert is exceedingly appetizing. And the preparation is easy. Contents of the larger of two paper bags are emptied into a bowl. A third of a cup of milk is added, the mixture is beaten for one minute and poured into a casserole or other baking dish. No further stirring is necessary; the dish goes immediately into a degree oven. Blueberry Muffin Mix makes naturally sweet blueberry muffins. A can of blueberries and paper baking cups right in the package! Coffee Cake Mix makes so many things. Makes two 9-inch rings! Makes pecan rolls and raised doughnuts. Also cinnamon rolls, stollen and kuchen Ice Box Pie Mix makes a complete chiffon ice box pie without baking! Graham cracker crust and chiffon filling in the package. Cake with sauce--baked together! Brownie Mix comes in the handy aluminum baking pan! N49 "Another excellent label is the Py-O-My lemon chiffon ice-box pie. Add only milk or water. Clear, concise directions for preparing the pie are printed on the back. Dear Friend, May we ask you a big favor? We will appreciate this favor. Many Py-O-My users write they have shared their discovery with 3 friends--and more! Share their discovery too! Package contains can of juicy wild blueberries, mix, and paper baking cups. So many uses, including Sunday breakfast! Includes can of juicy, spiced apples, crunchy crust, and tempting butter crumb topping. K36 According to the food historians, early baking mixes were not readily accepted. When food companies make things too simple their products are summarily rejected. Like mom used to cook. Despite the fact that early mixes often produced less than satisfactory results and invoke a complicated set of psycho-social baggage, they prevailed. Eventually mixes were accepted. Most people who make cakes for people they love regularly employ mixes universally perceived as home-made, as in "made in the home" instead of buying a premade "cake in the box. Though Betty Crocker--like her competitors--promised that cake mixes offered freshness, ease, and flavor in a box, the market was slow to mature. Puzzled, marketers reiterated the message that homemakers need only drop this scientific marvel into a bowl, add water, mix, and bake. But that was still a little too good to be true for Mrs. Certainly, cake mixes sold, but--compared with the early performance of Bisquick or Aunt Jemima pancake mix--not up to industry expectations. General Mills considered the market research of the business psychologists Dr. Burleigh Gardner and Dr. Ernest Dichter to explain the mediocre sales of cake mixes. The problem, according to the psychologists, was eggs. Dichter, in particular, believed that powdered eggs, often used in cake mixes, should be left out, so women could add a few fresh eggs into the batter, giving them a sense of creative contribution. Before long, cake mix started to gain some acceptance and notoriety; even Mamie Eisenhower instructed her cooking staff to use this novel invention at the White House. New York] p. All four included vegetable shortening, sugar, powdered egg, powdered skim milk, salt, baking powder or soda and phosphate and flavoring in their ingredients. The Spiced Cake Mix of the same brand, considered fairly good, contained some soya flour. The cake mixes were tested for rising quality, color of crust and crumb, grain, texture, flavor and aroma. The last three, considered together as a palatability, were the chief factors in the ratings. Enriched wheat flour and oat flour. Available in California, Oregon and Nevada. Grain rather coarse, but probably normal for this type of cake. Available East of the Mississippi. Wheat, cottonseed and oat flour. Excellent flavor, slightly lemon. Very good flavor, slightly lemon. Wheat flour and soya flour. Good flavor, nutmeg mace. How good are they? The value of any mix to a housewife is based on the quality of the finished product--how good it is to eat--plus ease and convenience of preparation, and cost. CU consultants subjected all products to actual baking tests, following the directions given on the packages. The scores for cake, gingerbread, biscuit, muffin and hot roll mixes were based on flavor, volume or the amount of rise, texture, or tenderness of crumb to feel and taste, aroma while warm from baking, grain or physical structure of the crumb and color of crust and crumb CU found some mixes that were good, many that were satisfactory, and only two that were "Not Acceptable. The preparation of most of these mixes calls for the addition only of water or milk, and they can be stirred up so simply that, if directions are followed, there is little danger of their being spoiled. The time required is negligible compared to that for mixing a cake from the basic ingredients. They are particularly useful for emergencies, for youngsters just trying their culinary wings, or for the gang of teen-agers who want to take over the kitchen for an evening. Cost varied considerably among different brands of the same type of mix, and while in some cases it was greater than the comparable homemade product, in many cases, it was not more, or even less. Almost all are "Acceptable," but some taste better and cost less than others," Consumer Reports, August p. In the opinion of the home economists who sampled them for taste and other qualities, none were as good as "mother used to bake. They are time savers. Counting wash-up and put-away time of utensils, the mixes have an even greater edge. They are work savers. Use of a prepared mix eliminates many of the steps necessary with standard recipes, such as the sifting of flour and the measuring of ingredients. Only one bowl is required. However, too little or too much mixing, or incorrect oven temperature, may still result in an unsuccessful cake. On the white cake and ginger cake, however, the saving was less--only 2c in each case, on the average. Convenience, more than price, favors the use of the prepared mix. With ready mixes, you are saved the necessity of storing ingredients used only occasionally In many cakes, you do not even have to have milk or eggs on hand to bake a cake. Ten of the 20 mixes tested--all of the ginger cakes and several of the others--required the addition of water only. Mixing directions are given for both hand beating and for the use of an electric mixer in most cases. A few brands even carry directions for use in high altitude regions. Swans Down, and some others, provide a "special formula" mix for high altitude baking. Packaging also carry instructions for making cookies, cup cakes, or glamorized versions of the basic cake for which the mix was intended. It is apparent that there are good reasons for the growing popularity of the mixes. However, if you have the skill to bake a really fine cake, and your taste or the occasion demands the best, you should follow your own prized recipe. Today there seems to be at least a fair prospect that the situation will be reversed. For the grocery store shelves are replete with ready-mix-cake packages in great variety, and the description of their preparation sounds so simple as to make a trip to the bakery store, by comparison, a major chore. Four samples of each mix were stirred up and baked, two operators preparing two samples of each. These were submitted, without brand identification, independently to each of three judges, along with a piece of cake of similar character made from home-mixed batter. Judgement was passed on each piece about two hours after its removal from the oven, and again to determine keeping qualities a day later.
