Perhaps you want to build a better classroom culture. Need new ways to teach reading and writing across the curriculum? Boy, do I have a list for you. The New Psychology of Success â€” World-renowned Stanford University psychologist Carol Dweck, in decades of research on achievement and success, has discovered a truly groundbreaking ideaâ€”the power of our mindset. With the right mindset, we can motivate our kids and help them to raise their grades, as well as reach our own goalsâ€”personal and professional. Dweck reveals what all great parents, teachers, CEOs, and athletes already know: Teach Like a Pirate: Learning first to spot these signposts and then to question them, enables readers to explore the text, any text, finding evidence to support their interpretations. In short, these close reading strategies will help your students to notice and note. Notice and Note will help create attentive readers who look closely at a text, interpret it responsibly, and reflect on what it means in their lives. It should help them become the responsive, rigorous, independent readers we not only want students to be but know our democracy demands. The Courage to Teach: Good teaching takes myriad forms but good teachers share one trait: The connections made by good teachers are held not in their methods but in their hearts â€” the place where intellect, emotion, spirit, and will converge in the human self â€” supported by the community that emerges among us when we choose to live authentic lives. The Surprising Truth About What Motivates Us â€” Most people believe that the best way to motivate is with rewards like moneyâ€”the carrot-and-stick approach. Pink author of To Sell Is Human: In this provocative and persuasive new book, he asserts that the secret to high performance and satisfaction-at work, at school, and at homeâ€”is the deeply human need to direct our own lives, to learn and create new things, and to do better by ourselves and our world. Drawing on four decades of scientific research on human motivation, Pink exposes the mismatch between what science knows and what business doesâ€”and how that affects every aspect of life. He examines the three elements of true motivationâ€”autonomy, mastery, and purpose-and offers smart and surprising techniques for putting these into action in a unique book that will change how we think and transform how we live. The End of Molasses Classes: He challenges parents, teachers, and communities everywhere embrace a difference in the classroom and uplift, educate, and empower our children. Read this book to find out why so many across the country have embraced these powerful rules. The Best Lesson Series: It is the most practical on the list because it is not pedagogy or theory, The Best Lesson Series: Literature contains the best work done by the best teachers, straight from their classroom to yours. Each lesson will increase student engagement, boost their appreciation of literature, and transform your classroom into a place of discovery and deep critical thinking. Each teacher guides you through their plan with clarity while offering options for differentiation. Each lesson is easy to understand and easy to implement. The Making of Young People Who Will Change the World â€” Harvard education expert Tony Wagner explores what parents, teachers, and employers must do to develop the capacities of young people to become innovators. Play, passion, and purpose: These are the forces that drive young innovators. Wagner takes readers into the most forward-thinking schools, colleges, and workplaces in the country, where teachers and employers are developing cultures of innovation based on collaboration, interdisciplinary problem-solving, and intrinsic motivation. The result is a timely, provocative, and inspiring manifesto that offers crucial insight into creating the change makers of tomorrow. She charts the rise of the Extrovert Ideal throughout the twentieth century and explores how deeply it has come to permeate our culture. She also introduces us to successful introvertsâ€”from a witty, high-octane public speaker who recharges in solitude after his talks, to a record-breaking salesman who quietly taps into the power of questions. Passionately argued, superbly researched, and filled with indelible stories of real people, Quiet has the power to permanently change how we see introverts and, equally important, how they see themselves. Instead, she helps students navigate the world of literature and gives them time to read books they pick out themselves. Her love of books and teaching is both infectious and inspiring. When am I ever going to use this in the real world? Why are we learning this?

When are we going to learn about something interesting? But what if your students came to class excited? What if they were passionate about their projects?
