Also a great Christmas present. Decent week up the mountains this past week. Weather was great and the hunting over all was pretty good. Myself I got a black bear. Our club we had 5 bucks and 1 doe. Not the best week but the great weather made up for everything. When the winds are not keeping the boats docked up the striper fishing down the shore has been on fire. Most of these bass have been hitting Mojo Rigs, Big shad bodies, 5 and 7 ounce Gator spoons, diamond jigs, umbrella rigs, bunker spoons and snagging and dropping bunker. Limits of 20 to 40 pound fish were caught all week long. Now the guys fishing the beach things have not been as good. Here guys throwing shad bodies, deadly dicks, diamond jigs and crankbaits have been catching some 20 to 30 inch fish. As you come down the coast the stripers fishing gets slower. I talked to Fred down at Wildwood and he said other than the smaller fish in the back bay and a few fish in the rips it has been dead down there. And a few guys out of Atlantic City are catching a bass here and there but nothing to write home about. But if you are fishing south off shore sea bass fishing has been pretty good. Lots of small fish but a few decent 3-pound fish mixed in. And off the jetties plenty of smaller sea bass and blackfish have been hitting crabs and clams. For bigger sea bass Barnegat north has been the best with limits of fish 3 to 6 pounds, blackfish 3 to 8 pounds and some nice cod mixed in. And for the best fishing off New York and Massachusetts some monster sea bass, cod and porgies are still hitting in great numbers. Keith fishing off Delaware coast said there are tons of smaller stripers hitting smaller spoons, bucktails and Gulp mullet. He picked up over fish in the past week all 18 to 22 inches. Up in the Delaware Bay George picked up 1-keeper stripers drifting bunker heads just below Money Island. He also had several good run offs without hooking up. Nockamixon had a pretty good week with muskies 21 to 30 inches. Bigger spinners, jerk baits and Whopper Ploppers were working best. John again fishing off the docks picked up a good amount of crappies fishing tubes and shiners. Couple guys had some decent bass fishing the upper end of Core Creek with power worms, rattle traps and chatter baits. One picture was of a fish 20 inches a bit over 5 pounds. In the main lake plenty of perch and bluegills hitting wax worms, mealworms and smaller jigs. In the spillway one fisherman picked up a couple smaller largemouth bass with live minnows. The landscaper picked up a bunch of smaller bass, bluegills and catfish fishing the shopping center lake with minnows and nightcrawlers. They are also catching a few decent crappies on this same lake with live minnows. Penn Warner has been a mixed bag with plenty of perch and pickerel hitting live minnows along the shoreline. Not the boat guys have been doing very well with largemouth bass 2 to 4 pounds with crankbaits, spinner baits, plastic worms and blade baits. Only one report from the Pennypack with this customer picking up 5 trout in a couple mornings with mealworms, power bait and trout magnets. A few bluegills mixed in. A couple guys fishing Haunted Lane doing well with catfish fishing chunked eels and nightcrawlers. Further up the creek below the Boulevard one fisherman picked up a couple 8 to 12 pound carp fishing Uncle Josh carp bait. In the Skippack one fisherman had a pretty good weekend catching rock bass and bluegills with bead head nymphs looking for a trout. Charlie fished the Tohickon catching a few bluegills looking for some bass. The upper river has really picked up for walleyes fishing minnows, shiners and jigs from Point Pleasant down to New Hope. One fisherman picked up 11 fish last Tuesday with 3 fish over 20 inches. Jimmy off the New Hope wing dam picked up 2 walleyes and 1 smallmouth bass last weekend fishing minnows in the slack water. And I talked to one person who told me how good he did this past summer for flathead catfish fishing the upper river from the Water Gap down to Trenton. He picked up over fish this past summer some with live bluegills but also had fish with white perch and live eels. His one buddy fishing down around the airport who picked up flathead up to 40 pounds this past summer all with live bluegills. Now the lower river has not changed with a bunch of catfish still hitting nightcrawlers, bunker, chunked eels and shrimp. Most of these fish have been 1 to 4 pounds. Back in Dredge Harbor the bass, yellow perch and crappies picked up fishing jigs tipped with live minnows around the rocks and pilings. Same in the Neshaminy Marina I have a few guys fishing off the backs of their boats catching some good size yellow perch with live minnows and nightcrawlers. Schuylkill reports really dropped off this past week. Ron is still catching a few smallmouth bass all with live minnows up around Norristown. Joe said quite a few smaller catfish and white perch hitting nightcrawlers, shrimp and bagels below the dam. At Gladwyne the catfish crew is now down to a couple fisherman catching 20 catfish this past week all on worms and chunked eels. And a report I read online about one fisherman picking up a few bigger catfish up in the Reading area on live bluegills so they would have to be flatheads. Jersey lakes and river really picked up in the past couple weeks. Fishing minnows and twister tails caught a bunch of pickerel in the coves. Then fishing further down river with white and bunker shad he picked up 50 stripers 15 to 22 inches. Jerry in his lakes has been crushing pickerel, bass, perch and crappies with minnows, spinners and twister tails. Richie said plenty of pickerel in Lake Lenape with some decent perch and pickerel in the river. Nothing over 24 inches. Tom picked up a 41 inch musky this past week with plenty of pickerel and smallies up to 5 pounds on Lake Hapatcong. Jerk baits and surface buzzers working best. Dennisville Lake has been very good for pickerel fishing live minnows around the shorelines. I even had one fisherman on the Pequest catch a few smaller rainbows with spinners. Well looks like the weather is changing for the worse. Lets hope this winter holds and the fishing stays good.

Seven Bribes for Seven Brothers No, the reference is not to a sequel of the feel good movie. Rather, it is a stark condemnation of the process that the President used to push health care reform to the brink of passage on Christmas Eve. What did Americans expect in this process? They anticipated what the campaigning Obama promised: And what did they get? A secretive reform plan constructed by a handful of elite Democratic congressional power brokers in the shadows of the Capitol, without the input of any Republican and most Democratic congressional members. With arbitrary imposition of deadlines to rush the legislation through, middle of the night votes, and page bills hardly read, the end product House and Senate bills had no element of transparency that the public could trust. And then there were the bribes. And so they met with the White House and came to an agreement, only part of which was made public: What was not revealed beyond the back room was the White House agreement to forgo importing cheaper drugs from outside the US and not to directly negotiate price with the pharmaceuticals, using its huge payer leverage. Only later did they realize that the President double crossed them, once he felt certain that his reform would pass, by announcing he would allow importation of cheaper drugs from outside the country. No matter, the fix was in. Fearing that they would shoulder an unfair burden of the costs of the new health reform program, the hospital industry paid a visit to the White House as well. Like Big Pharma, they came away with a back room agreement that allowed them to publicly support the President with billions in savings to the system. And their quid pro quo? Instead of having to give charity care to millions of uninsured who showed up in their emergency rooms, they would now get paid for the 30 million newly insured patients. Worried that these millions of new patients would flood to hospital facilities before the government had the money to pay for these services, the hospitals got an added bonus: That window of time would allow the government to collect the funds necessary to pay the hospitals for the care provided. Fix number two was in. If they could get a permanent fix for the flawed payment system, they would support the Obama plan. Once again, a deal was cut with the White House, and the doctors joined the party. Immediately, a separate bill was introduced outside of the health reform process for the permanent pay solution. The third fix was in. Senator Mary Landrieu of Louisiana. In order to end debate on health care reform in the Senate, 60 votes for cloture were needed. Several southern Democrats were not sure about the Senate bill and were hesitant to close debate and proceed to a vote. As Senator Landrieu hesitated, her vote for cloture of debate became critical to the President and the Congressional leadership. Fix number four was in. Senator Ben Nelson of Nebraska. After the cloture vote ended all debate and the formal Senate bill was introduced, the Democrats needed another 60 votes to pass its bill on Christmas Eve. Once again, the back room door opened, Senator Nelson walked in, negotiations for his vote ensued, and he walked away with a deal protecting Nebraska from any increase in Medicaid costs forever. The deal was possibly worth billions. The fifth fix was in. Indeed, with many of its members having negotiated these high end insurance plans instead of wage increases, the unions saw themselves underwriting the costs for the uninsured. And they did not like it. After expressing their outrage and threatening to withdraw their support of the President, a call from the White House brought them back into the fold. Fix number six was in. Both as a candidate and as President, Barack Obama has repeatedly reassured his constituency that if they like their current health insurance plan, they will see absolutely no change. But as Americans have begun to better understand the details of the legislation, a majority realizes that this reform, in reality, represents big government intrusion into their own health plans. They fear both that the quality of what they have today will suffer and that they will pay more. Yet rather than proceed to the back room for another bargain to eliminate their fears, the taxpayers are outraged by the details of the aforementioned deals, and refuse to cooperate with the power brokers. Alienated from the process they remain. Indeed the house is sharply divided. To do so may take another back room deal. But hey, who is counting?

Fisherman Magazine Update Posted on May 5, by wbrink For Fisherman subscribers wondering how they might go about winning the Dream Boat Contest, the best possible strategy may have arrived in the form of gnashing teeth and yellow eyes.

For Jessica, baking was a passion. As John explained it, Jessica started out small “ in her kitchen at first “ then in a church kitchen. But demand was high for her special kind of gluten-free cookies, cakes and pies. When Jessica started her business, she called it Sweet Nature. When John decided to join her in the business, they expanded into another area “ a kitchen rental business for other businesses that might want to start up a gluten-free business. That is what John and Jessica have behind the swinging doors of their bakery. And they are willing to rent the facility out to other business owners who may not have the cash or desire to outfit their own commercial kitchens. We are the first one “ the first gluten-free kitchen in the entire state of Minnesota, and one of the few in the United States. It gives the flour the ability to hold a shape when mixed with a bit of water. Gluten can also cause distress to the digestive tract “ sometimes severe. Most folks have little problem with gluten. Those who are affected by gluten may suffer mild discomfort, a bloated feeling or they may be severely affected and made sick enough to land them in the hospital. Those who are severely affected most likely suffer from celiac disease. Even a small amount of gluten can have major repercussions because of cross contamination of products. Brinkman and his wife keep close tabs on who is bringing in what to their bakery. They do not want any accidental cross contamination. Right now they are especially open to a catering service that would specialize in gluten-free foods. The Brinkmans had a dream when they started out, and now some of that dream has been achieved. But they are not selfish about the dream. They want others to have the same kind of chance they had to achieve their dream. Now they want to help others. We are big on having other people having their dreams become a reality. And there were many. It will all work out, but it takes a lot of time. He doubts Mix It Up will be his last business venture. Not all bakeries are created equal and in the gluten-free bakery business, there are some that create a less-than-satisfactory product. For six months before opening Sweet Nature Bakery, Jessica tested recipes and formulas. There was a lot of trial and error, John said. To guard against having a mediocre product, they decided to use the ultimate product-quality testers “ their kids. Yes, that apron is for sale as well. Other jobs “ gandy dancer, counselor at mental institution, snowmaker, apple picker, concrete finishing, janitor, furniture mover, appliance sales, insurance sales, media sales, real estate, and writer.
