

1: Ice Bucket Challenge - Wikipedia

Butchers, workers on North Sea oil rigs, unemployed and underemployed alcoholics, drug addicts, and losers--these are the people who populate the world of Duncan McLean's making, and readers of Bucket of Tongues had better have the stomach to face them.

After you create a bucket, you can upload an unlimited number of data objects to the bucket. Buckets have configuration properties, including their geographical region, who has access to the objects in the bucket, and other metadata. On the Name and region page, type a name for your bucket and choose the AWS Region where you want the bucket to reside. Complete the fields on this page as follows: For Bucket name, type a unique DNS-compliant name for your new bucket. Follow these naming guidelines: The name must be unique across all existing bucket names in Amazon S3. The name must not contain uppercase characters. The name must start with a lowercase letter or number. The name must be between 3 and 63 characters long. After you create the bucket you cannot change the name, so choose wisely. Choose a Region close to you to minimize latency and costs, or to address regulatory requirements. Objects stored in a Region never leave that Region unless you explicitly transfer them to another Region. Optional If you have already set up a bucket that has the same settings that you want to use for the new bucket that you want to create, you can set it up quickly by choosing Copy settings from an existing bucket, and then choosing the bucket whose settings you want to copy. The settings for the following bucket properties are copied: Do one of the following: If you copied settings from another bucket, choose Create. If not, choose Next. On the Configure options page, you can configure the following properties and Amazon CloudWatch metrics for the bucket. Or, you can configure these properties and CloudWatch metrics later, after you create the bucket. Versioning Select Keep all versions of an object in the same bucket. Server access logging Select Log requests for access to your bucket. Server access logging provides detailed records for the requests that are made to your bucket. Tags You can use cost allocation bucket tags to annotate billing for your use of a bucket. Each tag is a key-value pair that represents a label that you assign to a bucket. To add a tag, type a Key and a Value. Choose Add another to add another tag. Default encryption Select Automatically encrypt objects when they are stored in S3. You can enable default encryption for a bucket so that all objects are encrypted when they are stored in the bucket. CloudWatch request metrics Select Monitor requests in your bucket for an additional cost. On the Set permissions page, you manage the permissions that are set on the bucket that you are creating. You can grant read access to your bucket to the general public everyone in the world. Granting public read access is applicable to a small subset of use cases such as when buckets are used for websites. We recommend that you do not change the default setting of Do not grant public read access to this bucket. You can change permissions after you create the bucket. Warning We highly recommend that you do not grant public read access to the bucket that you are creating. Granting public read access permissions means that anyone in the world can access the objects in the bucket. On the Review page, verify the settings. If you want to change something, choose Edit. If your current settings are correct, choose Create bucket.
