Chris Reynolds "Most of the U. Kiyosaki, with his wife Kim Kiyosaki, and business associate John Fleming, provide information on how business has changed significantly in recent times. The days of a single career for life, ending in a comfortable retirement are largely gone. A lifetime of work across several different jobs will leave many people with a retirement of poverty. Kiyosaki et al then go on to talk about a way to succeed financially despite all the challenges of the current business environment. They discuss how the business model works and how to succeed at it, including different options for how to enter, and how to succeed. Wages only come as long as you work. The same is true when you work for yourself. The minute checks stop coming from clients, the self-employed person stops earning. Only when you get your money working for you do you cease having to work for wages every day. Of course you need money in the first place in order for it to be able to work for you. This is the catch 22 that most people face. In order to get your money working for you effectively, you need to own a large business or have large investments, primarily in real estate. That leaves owning a large business, where large is defined as having approx. Some people, with the right idea or product, manage to build, through hard work and good luck, a big businessâ€”which eventually allows them to start investing money coming out of the business in ways that the money begins to earn more money. Unfortunately, for every business that succeeds from the ground up, there are many that fail. The failures can come from bad timing, bad luck, too small a market share for the offering, or many other reasons. So far, the odds of success sound long. There is an alternative that the book provides which allows anyone to start a large business with little investment, no great product or idea, and do it in an environment where everyone has a vested interest in your success. The authors are referring to Network Marketing. Many people believe that they need to be constantly be selling the product offerings of the Network Marketing company headquarters. In truth, what you need to spend most of your time doing is selling others on the idea of signing up under you, so they can grow businesses that will pay dividends to you. Grow your own network as wide and deep as you can. Teach your downstream how to sell the products and the network. Help them build as wide and deep as they can. Ensure orders are processed in a timely manner, and cash flows back as quickly. That, in a nutshell, is how to build a big business from nothing in the 21st century. Insight 1 An actionable way to implement the Big Idea into your life The Four Categories of Work "But even more important than the quantity of money you make is the quality of the money you make. He is quick to point out that you do not want to be in the left half if you want to build sufficient wealth to become independent. Earning a wage from a company only earns you money when you actually work. The same is true of the self-employed. Only when you are running a large business or managing large investments do you have money earned for you by others. Only in the right-hand quadrants do you have freedom to control your life without concern for the next paycheque. Insight 2 An actionable way to implement the Big Idea into your life The Value of Networking "As a network marketer, you might think your job is to demonstrate and sell a product. Your job is to communicate information, to tell a great story, and build a network. You will need to sell the opportunity to many people in order to build a successful business. While it is possible to connect to strangers and have them become successful parts of your business, it is more work to connect to them than to connect to people you already know â€” your network of contacts. You need to know people to make this succeed. Not everyone in your network needs to be a close friend, but you have to comfortable approaching them with a business proposition and they have to be willing to give your proposition a fair listen. The wider and well-tended your network, the easier it is to find enough people you can bring into your company and set everyone up for success. The book is not a long or complex read. It is very to the point and delivers without much extraneous content, not only the thesis of the book but also provides concrete advice on how to make it happen. Then they go on to give concrete advice on how to invest money as it comes in: Build your business Invest in Real Estate Let your investments buy you luxuries

78 This book provides a provocative look at a totally different way of achieving wealth. A way that is working today for thousands of people, all of whom want you to join and succeed because this business model is not based on us or them; it is us and them, and then some more. Chris even wrote a book about Business Architecture because he was frustrated that far too few people knew what it was

This book is really designed to share with prospects to educate them about the power network marketing. Overall, I give it an 8. What I want to do in the rest of this blog post is share some of my favorite quotes from the book. Each quote is in bold and italics. After each quote I will also share my own two cents on the topic. Good jobs are hard to find and even harder to keep. Many new businesses are formed when the economy is bad. You basically own your own job. Everything relies on you and you alone. Most people have the employee mindset and have no desire to be their own boss. Most people have been programmed their entire life to work for someone else as an employee. If you want to be a doctor, lawyer or accountant, you need to go to college. Most successful entrepreneurs never went to college! College teaches people how to be employees. The more you make the more the government takes, and at a higher rate. Employees have no tax incentives either. Owning a business allows you to legally minimize your taxes. Most successful businesses in the real world take a few years just to make their first dollar of profit. Nothing worth accomplishing is fast, free or easy. Life is about helping others. The more people you serve and help, the more money you make and the more success you achieve. Nothing will ever beat word of mouth advertising. Employees focus on making more money. Entrepreneurs focus on building an asset that makes money. This is the difference between linear income and residual income. Anything that takes your money out of your pocket is a liability. The purpose of building a business is to build something that you can sell one day for a big profit, or retire from and still earn residual income. This is where most people get confused about network marketing. Your goal is to build your network, which can pay you for many years to come, not just today. I disagree with Robert on this point and that is okay. I believe all entrepreneurs must be salespeople. At a bare bones minimum, you must be able to sell yourself and sell your ideas. The real money comes from building a big network of customers and distributors. This industry is about a lot of people doing a little bit. Your ultimate goal is to build an asset that continues to pay you month-after-month. MLM is the best business school that I know of. You will learn selling, marketing, leadership, communication, accounting, business operations, training, and countless other real-world skills that will help you in your day job and future business endeavors. Until you have enough residual income coming in that pays for your living expenses each month, or more, you will never be totally free. Most people are only one or two paychecks away from bankruptcy. Take advice from people who have what you want and avoid the haters. Surround yourself with people who uplift you and encourage you and avoid the people who bring you down. Most people want to belong to something bigger than themselves. They want more friends and better relationships. Your job is to create a team culture that enables that. Your product is important, but your network is even more important. Everyone else looks for work. Once you own a network, you can make money on demand. This is a business for leaders and teachers, not salesmen. This really is a sponsoring and teaching business, not a recruiting and selling business. If you are really good at selling you might want to pursue a career that pays large commissions per transaction, such as real estate. Develop a good product story. Share your story with others. Facts tell, but stories sell. There is no need to lie, deceive, hard sell or pressure anyone to do the business. Use third party tools to grow your business. Take yourself out of the equation. Keep the business so simple even an eight year old could do it. Of course, we all want to be liked "€" but to be a great leader, you have to set boundaries, monitor the behavior of your staff, and take corrective action when necessary. Leaders have to set the example, do the right thing, and not worry about what everyone else is doing or thinking. When you are a leader you are a trailblazer, not someone following the pack. Wealth is not measured by the size of income. Wealth is measured in time. True wealth is determined by the number of months you can live, and sustain your current standard of living, without going to a job. Be smart about how you spend your bonus check. During your first few years in business, find and keep a day job to pay your day bills. Even if you are making money with your network marketing business, you should reinvest most of it back into your business to grow it. You need a job to keep the financial pressure off your back while you are building your business. My personal mentor tells me this all the time. One of my best pieces of advice is to get a job, or keep your day job, during your first few years in your network marketing businesses. Your business is like a small baby. You need to nurture it, spend time with it, and love on it until it grows and takes on a life of its own. Invest in your personal development. This is the ultimate people business. The more rock solid long-term relationships you can make, the more money you will make. If you enjoy selling in small groups, you should really consider the party-plan business. You have to roll up your sleeves and do the work. Success is usually disguised as hard work. Find a simple system that works and follow it, until you can find or develop a better way. Achieving success at anything in life takes time, money, effort and skill. There is no free lunch in the real world. There is no such thing as get rich quick. This business, just like any other business, will take you several years to get off the ground. It will also take you several years to master your skills and become a network marketing professional. This is not a business for dreamers. Everyone wants to be successful, but few people are willing to put in the required work. This is a business for doers. If you work eight hours a day, five days a week, you hit the 10, hour mark after five years of full-time effort. It takes 10, hours to become an expert at something. You will need to fail your way to success. Success is never a straight line. It has ups and downs, zigs and zags. Move one step forward, two steps back. Until you roll up your sleeves and do the work, nothing will happen in your business. It comes in softcover format and has pages. As of August it has reviews on Amazon with an average 4. The prediction uttered from the guy across from me at the Starbucks table as he pushed this piece of writing in my direction. Days earlier, I had met the gentleman in my place of work. He was nice enough. Easy to connect with. Traits that he felt he also found reciprocated in meeting me. Something that was evident when after I assisted him to the best of my ability, he asked the question that any person worth their weight in sales is asked by patrons like this gentleman. What can I say. So flash back forward after I agreed to a sit down with him. He speaks of secretive projects, people he wants me to meet, random success stories of people who run in his circle, and it all stems from the question after he hands me this book. I was given a couple days to breeze past this before I met with the guy again to discuss what I thought and where this might lead to. But I definitely know enough. Ranging from inspirational and motivational, to sales and leadership, to just plain personal development, it is a wonderful variety. Ever so often a friend would step up and help them out in their time of need. But all things considered, by , as Kiyosaki loved to gloat, he was a millionaire. Congratulations, well done, you figured out a system somehow and made your buck. I wish not do delve too deep into his theories or egocentric misleadings that he truly does care about you getting rich, but I will sum up some his rhetoric. Most of this brainwash derives from a four corner chart that all professionals can be chalked up to. From hearing that, one could assume that majority of the population resides in the E and the S quadrants while the prestigious few like Kiyosaki and his friends like the frequently name-dropped Donald Trump belong to the B and I quadrants. And according to Kiyosaki, the working class of the E and S who trade their time and energy for money are doing it wrong. Yes, Kiyosaki played with the house money and became the rare exception to come out on top. The book further preaches that in order to be a B or an I person, you need to have the determination to take those chances and throw all caution to the wind. Barring the rare exception, and even those moguls on the Forbes list get tagged with a bankruptcy every now and again, the house always wins. And yet, here he is dedicating an entire book about it and pocketing the profits. And damn am I glad the dude who had me read it just pushed his copy my way instead of making me buy my own and make my own contribution of supporting the problem. However, I begin to have problems when someone is attempting to force what they believe onto someone else and flat out tells them they are bad or they are wrong if they are not doing it their way. Kiyosaki and all his B and I cult, yes cult followers, are free to shoot for the dream and go for their wealthy lifestyles. To my credit, I said it with a smile and in the inviting fashion to engage in the ever dying form of debate. But like most people these days, they are right, you are wrong. Kiyosaki would be so proud. Life lesson learned and my first Fail grade of the year on a book.
