

1: Why Carefree and Careless Better to Be Former - Verdict

Carefree indicates freedom from anxiety or worry whereas careless indicates being negligent and irresponsible. Thus, carefree has a positive connotation whereas careless has negative connotations. This is the key difference between carefree and careless.

A Lesson About Perspective A few days ago, as I sat reading a book at local coffee shop, I overheard a single sentence of a conversation that has stuck with me ever since. Against the far wall of the shop, two young women sat at a table and talked to each other over loud the hustle and bustle of the other customers. As I came to the end of a chapter, I decided to take a short break from my reading. I shifted my attention away from the book, and my senses began to take in the environment around me. That sentence struck me as powerful, and I began to really think about the differences between those two terms. Care-free means free of cares, living life without issues and insecurities. Life is not perfect, there are always things that just happen. We all believe there will always be problems that must learn to accept, and puzzles to solve. Someone who is careless however, is someone who chooses to ignore their burdens. When you do something carelessly, that thing still gets done, just not necessarily well. When you solve the problem carelessly, that problem still exists. But there is a lesson to be learned here about how the things in our life impact us. Things like stress, anger, and grief are a part of life. Being rid of all negative emotion or difficult situations is not something that can be achieved. It is however, possible to change how much we let the conditions around us get to us. We all have the ability to live inspired, and to be the person we intended to be. We encourage you to join our community of likeminded individuals, all going down a path towards an inspired life together. When we work as one, we can ensure that our cares never stop us from being free. By Lynne May 9th, Categories: Blog 0 Comments

2: 9 Words for the Wild and Carefree | Merriam-Webster

Carefree: Carefree means free of worries, anxieties and responsibilities. A carefree person does not worry too much about his problems. But that doesn't mean carefree people ignore their problems, rather they take a different approach to the probl.

When dreams were unreserved and hopes high. As much as we still want to dig that carefree, easy feeling, we are older and wiser now. We really ought to cherish them forever. Carefree [kair-free] an adjective meaning without anxiety or worry; requiring little care. Synonyms are lighthearted, joyous, elated, and cheerful. Its antonym is careful. A loud smack of skin with a cracking sound underneath. A sharp out breath, a yelp of pain. The fight was over. Bill stormed down the stairs. I shrieked at him. Nik had a towel on his face, blood everywhere. And I knew, of course, that Ada and her friend had watched the whole thing. I could hear Ada crying. Then I had this thought. This ugliness means something, this pointless ugliness in front of my child. Were we shameless, was that it? That must not have been it, because I felt a hot, deep shame. In that moment we had closed the distance between carefree and careless. Somehow, as we grew older, we lost our liberated, irresistible claim on being carefree. It had snuck up on us and hardened into something else. Encompassed and enthralled by it. And throughout we are confronted by what we may have once considered carefree and what may have turned careless – our feelings, our actions, our motives. Not a coincidence that it is these three artists singing about being careless. But there are many more songs that evoke that carefree feeling: One artist strikes me as being the embodiment of carefree. He is the epitome of all things positive and upbeat. Although his music may have the sound and the sheen of being carefree, his actions go deeper. They are anything but carefree. He cares about his fellow man and the environment. He supports tree planting organizations. And pursues recycling efforts. For his Summer US tour, Jason partnered with Reverb to leave each city he visits better than it was before by lessening his environmental impact there. Planting trees and servicing them is to be grounded. But this caring artist is everything but careless. Skip down the street. Play with a puppy. Ah, to feel carefree!

3: Carefree vs. Careless – lollapalingo

I think it's similar to "removing problems" (carefree) vs. "disregarding problems" (careless). The first leads to fewer troubles, the latter allows the problems to grow and go from bad to worse. Views 1. View 8 Upvoters.

Alex Pham I have a memory. I was a little girl and my mom was going to the grocery store. I asked her if my friend and I could go to the park and play in the wading pool while she went to get groceries. She agreed and dropped us off. We needed a bathing suit. My mom had already left so now what are we going to do? Off we go, walking. We walked and walked. And we continued with our plan to swim. Is her little girl safe? What thoughts were racing through her head? My perception of who I was as a child is a bit of a footloose kid. I would go with the flow. Roll with the punches. To not be fazed was normal. My lens was full of adventure and wonder. I created pretend stories. And since I can remember, life was good and I was blessed with a carefree nature. I had lots of energy. A handful, sometimes! Thinking on this memory, was I carefree or careless? But from my perspective I was carefree. All will be well. With my carefree nature, I also have a careless nature. They co-exist in my world. But I do want to be carefree with more thoughtfulness.

Careless or carefree? I want to clarify the difference between the confusing words careless and carefree. It's easy to mix them up, but they have quite different meanings and connotations.

Share Carefree and careless youth Younger workers may be more likely to make mistakes but also more likely to learn from them Nov 24, By Jeffrey R. Smith Kids will be kids. Young people are often faced with a lot of things going on in their life. They also often experiment, gaining life experience and knowledge. Sometimes, you would think they should know better, but other times it could be chalked up to inexperience or peer pressure. This is something to keep in mind for employers that employ a lot of young people. The City of Toronto, like many municipalities, employs young people in seasonal positions in the summer. Many of these seasonal positions have to do with city-owned pools and beaches, including lifeguards and maintenance workers. Recent Columns by Jeffrey R. Near the end of the summer in , the employee attended a party with several other seasonal employees in the city aquatics department. It was decided they would partake in what was considered an annual tradition for pool employees break into a city pool late at night and go for a swim. The worker drove a few people to a city pool, while many others walked because they were intoxicated. After failed attempts to use a key to get in, someone broke a glass door to gain entry unbeknownst to the worker. They all went swimming and dove off the diving platforms in the darkened pool. The worker took three photos of himself and some friends and posted them on Instagram. The city found out about the incident and launched an investigation. Another pool employee was approached and told her discipline would be less if she co-operated, so she reported on what happened. The city also felt the posted photos on Instagram were harmful to its reputation. In fact, he had gone along reluctantly. The arbitrator also pointed out that termination by the city would preclude the young worker from ever being considered for a city job again. That was too harsh for what it chalked up to poor judgment by an otherwise good worker with eight years of service with the city. But should she be given a second chance? By their very nature, young workers might even have the potential to learn more from discipline as opposed to dismissal. Ups and downs after venus retrogradating on top of my ascendant piscis exact conjunction his descendant piscis and so.. MCs conjunct ICs in our Synastry together. My Pluto in Capp trinning his coldish 10th cancerian moon. I have accepted that I am on the other side of Saturn and while the carefree past will always be a part of me it just is not what I am now and in some way Saturn was always my north star throughout the chaos. The mental image of some guy choosing to embody late s style gives me the giggles. Mystic is a writer with great comedic dexterity as much as a star-shit-giving, stellar piece of cosmic poo as are we all! I am offended by this sexist Saggitarian with his nerf arrows of slobby twit-wittery. But into astrology since the time we had Saturn Uranus and Neptune in our sign all at once. This guy must have missed the Uranus part " or maybe too young when it happened.. Personally I think Saturn is way too concerned with crowns etc Ozymandius and his legend comes to mind, not to mention Kronos knocking off his kids and judging others. Yes, of course you are right. Your point about careless and carefree! Also Please say he was sporting soul patch facial hair.. Many of my loudest professed values are no longer my values at all. The invisible Saturn Crown is genius!! Careless not carefree " There is so much wisdom in that. Ooh yes, there is a BIG fuqing difference between careless and carefree! Your time is clearly far better spent doing other things than drinking with anyone stuck in the late 90s! One of my big Saturn revelations was that organised does not necessarily mean boring. A bunch of friends I used to hang with always seemed so carefree and I was not. Years later quite a few of them are now dead of avoidable causes. You handled the encounter perfectly, MM! Rude piece of work. But be reassured that you did not waste your precious time by having a drink with him. You did good, Mystic! Silence is the best Meanwhile in my head i have demolished you with witty succinct comebacks that have cut and shamed you to the core!!! Only in my head for the 24 hours following the incident Ps. Disappointing how dismissive he was of the wisdom of your work, but prophets have been dismissed for centuries, in many more violent manners than a wave of a hand and a curse from the lips. Hmm, yes, I feel like the North Node in Virgo was all about showing me how careless I have been with my life to date. I have always passed myself off as a flaky fish with all the things in Pisces. Recently got my brilliant Reign reading from MM and with N.
