

1: Coffee Time Quilt Add A Crochet Trim â€“ Quilting Cubby

In January I shared a little project with you, my Coffee Time Quilt made up in "Calico Days" fabric by Lori Holt for Riley Blake Designs. This was a simple project just four patches and some sashing and borders but I really enjoyed the process of making this mini quilt.

Saturday, January 23, Coffee time quilt: Why simple is good! Many of you have emailed me requesting instructions. I have added a free tutorial on my blog, which you can find here. It might be a fat quarter, it might be a little precut. Recently they sent me a 2. When I was little, it seemed like family always gathered around the kitchen table for coffee or tea. I have to say that I really enjoyed just playing with this fabric with no plan, no pattern, no pressure. I added some simple straight line quilting in the sashing. Sometimes the cleanest, simplest design is the best. As I was finishing up, it hit me. I dug it out and laid it on my little coffee time quilt. It was the perfect finishing touch to the warm, happy feeling this project was giving me. I really love this simple quilt. Quilting friends, I encourage you to take an evening and just sew a bit without too much purpose or planning. Make a little something just because it feels good. Please visit Stash Addict Quilts using their link on my left sidebar. They have a terrific inventory of fabric. You can also visit them on Facebook to see pictures of machine quilting services they provide to customers! Thank you for stopping by the blog today! I hope you get carried away quilting this weekend!

2: Coffee and Quilts – A caffeine fueled journey through fabric and quilts.

Rich cappuccinos and espressos, creamy lattes and mochas-America's love affair with coffee is hot! In this impeccably brewed, full-bodied collection of quilts and recipes, you'll find the perfect project for your discerning taste.

This was a simple project. No pattern, no pressure, just creating what my heart felt moved to create. As it turns out, this little quilt touched a chord with many of you also, and several people requested a pattern. Due to the simple construction and the addition of embellishments, I decided a picture tutorial would be the best route, so I am offering that here on my blog. I hope you will enjoy this quick and easy project. Here are some shots of my latest version of the Coffee Time Quilt. I think it is the perfect complement to this fabric. I just love it when I can do that! Instructions are included below. If you are on Instagram, please post your finished project using the hashtag coffeetimequilt. Thanks for stopping by the blog today! I hope you get carried away quilting soon! Collect all the goodies: Sew each group into a four patch. First sew the top two squares together and press to one direction. Then sew the bottom two squares together and press to the other direction. Nest the seams and sew these two units together. Press this horizontal seam open. Repeat to create 9 four patches. Add the sashing Lay out the four patches and vertical sashing. Sew each row together working from left to right. Press seams toward the sashing. Lay out the completed rows and the horizontal sashing. Sew these units together, moving from top to bottom. When I placed one row RST on top of another row, I pulled the top unit back a bit to take a look and make sure the vertical sashings were lined up. Press to the border. Quilt as desired Layer your quilt top, batting, and backing using your preferred method of pinning, thread or spray basting. Since this is such a small piece, I found that fabric adhesive was enough to keep my quilt in place and flat during quilting. I kept my quilting simple, using a pleasing grid design and allowing the fabric to be the star of the show. When you have finished the quilting, trim the backing and batting. Binding The next step is to bind your quilt as desired. My preferred method is to machine bind to the top, and hand stitch the binding to the back to finish. Embellish with trim and buttons NOTE: The methods for attaching any kind of trim crochet work, lace, ribbon may need to vary depending on the design and condition of the trim. If it is very delicate or intricate, you may need to attach by hand. I used a spray adhesive on the back of my trim pieces to temporarily adhere them to the top of the quilt. I use Spray Adhesive, which is acid free and temporary. When I got to the corners, I simply turned the trim as best I could and did a bit of tucking. My pink and white trim came in two pieces, so unfortunately I had to match two seams. I put the seams on the corners as I knew I would also be attaching vintage buttons. After I had the trim lying flat and looking nice, I sewed it in place using matching thread and my walking foot. I sewed very slowly to ensure that the trim did not get caught and bunch up. Finally, I hand stitched the corners just a bit to keep the trim in place and then added the buttons.
