Sunday - closed Tuesday - We have created this one-page to provide an organized approach to using our website and searching for your ancestors. Below you will find more detailed information about these selected resources: Online Catalog The Online Catalog provides access to the holdings - approximately books, ancestor charts, 50 journal titles, 80 maps, and 10 pictures - at the FRC. Ancestor Charts provided by Olde Meck members. Journals from many area, state, and national Genealogical Societies. Maps from Mecklenburg County, the local area, North Carolina, and other states. Pictures from Mecklenburg County. Ancestor Charts During many of the early years of our society, new members were asked to submit an Ancestor Chart often know as Pedigree Chart for the families they were researching. At that time, sharing such information was one of the best ways to connect with others who might be researching the same lines. These charts retain a wealth of information submitted by members who were committed to their research. They have been indexed and scanned. Ancestor Charts may be viewed online by logging into Members Only. Family Books Although primarily representing families which came through Mecklenburg County, these volumes encompass an eclectic variety of surnames from all over the country. Processioning Records During the period from about until , it was not uncommon for a landowner to need to verify the boundaries of his property. If he requested this, a survey team was sent out to survey or "procession" the land. The records of these endeavors are referred to as Processioning Records and can provide a wealth of information to family historians including the names of neighbors, family members, and actual plat maps describing the properties. There are 66 such files in our collection. Below is a brief description of each. Check them out to see if your ancestors are listed. Description Family Files Over the years, many people have donated files about their family history to our society. We have collected these diverse records into folders housed in two filing cabinets at the FRC. Although indexing is not complete, the "Every Name Index" resides on the main computer at the FRC and enables researchers to identify quickly which folders in this massive collection contains their ancestors names. Lemmond The collection is an extensive group of records, family trees and histories along with plat maps for Lemmond, related families, and neighbors. The families were primarily living in the eastern part of Mecklenburg County and Union County. Other counties are included where they pertain to related families and relocations. Ronald Lemmond, the researcher who pulled this together, was a surveyor. His individual plat maps include deeds and estate records to document his drawings. County and state maps are numerous. In addition there are written family histories, Revolutionary War Applications, Bible recordings, tax lists, marriage records, obituaries, records from Philadelphia Presbyterian Church, and much more. Surnames listed are not inclusive but include: Records include bible records, wills, and family papers. Reid From the years of researching by Louis E. Roy Smith ran a genealogy business, primarily helping people qualify for membership in the DAR. Her files contain correspondence with her clients, copies of old documents, and family information. The four drawers of file folders are organized by client name but, as with all genealogical files, can contain many other names within each file that may be associated with the family. Volunteers have begun the task of indexing these folders. There are family file folders for approximately 1, surnames housed in filing cabinets in the FRC. These files were collected by Mr. One aspect that makes this collection unique is the inclusion of information on Native Americans in North Carolina.
