The state has so many outdoor exploits that some of the fantastic and exciting sights get overlooked. In this article, we will examine some of the exciting adventures that await you off the beaten track in the Centennial State. This part is known for Bristlecone Pines. These trees are incredibly durable and are some of the longest living trees on the planet; many of which have been alive for thousands of years. These trees are twisted in eerie, almost sinister shapes that branch out at strange angles and leave people in astonishment. The best place to view the trees and surrounding landscape is the Windy Ridge Scenic Area. This outlook was established by the forest service in and protects the trees, so travelers for centuries to come can enjoy them. On your way to Windy Ridge, you will get to explore the untouched nature of the Colorado forest and mountains. For nature photographers, these trees are an unconventional source of material. Grand Mesa Grand Mesa is the largest mesa in the world. A mesa is a flat-topped mountain surrounded by sheer cliffs. This particular mesa is stunning and offers plenty of scenic hikes around the mountain and through the forest. It offers excellent day hikes and spectacular sunsets over the lake. If you are an outdoor enthusiast, this is the perfect part of Colorado for you to explore. However, if you are not a fan of hiking, but still appreciate grand views, not to worry; you can drive to the top. Grand Mesa has a warm and welcoming atmosphere that will appeal to travelers and outdoor enthusiasts alike. Each of these one hundred year old cabins has its own private hot spring pool right outside the front door. Spend your afternoons soaking in the warm water, sipping wine, and staring up at the 1,foot cliffs. Here you can enjoy the natural beauty of Colorado without hiking a single step. Standing on the peak of the massive dunes, you capture the rare view of a vast stretch of desert and snow-capped mountains. The entire park is over 44, acres, and a feature that makes this desert unique is the streams running along the outside of the dunes. The dunes offer many activities for families including sand sledding, camping, and horseback riding. Imagine camping in this park with no light pollution and gazing at the thousands of stars burning in the night sky. Tucked inside the mountains are crystal blue glacial lakes, each surrounded by rolling hills of emerald grass and meadows of wildflowers. There are several hikes of varying degrees to choose from. Find the one that is right for you, and start trekking up the rocky hillsides while enjoying the fresh Colorado air. Your climb will take you up to 1, feet within the first couple miles before you reach the first lake. There is nothing quite like the sight of bright blue water while surrounded by the scent of hundreds of wildflowers. Island Lake shows off the deep natural beauty Colorado has to offer. Colorado is a great state for those looking to get outdoors and off the beaten path. From sand dunes in the middle of snow-capped mountains to glacier lakes surrounded by meadows of flowers, Colorado draws travelers looking for new and exciting adventures. It is a phenomenal state to get out of the big city, breathe some fresh air, and enjoy the natural beauty of America. What are your favorite off the beaten path experiences in Colorado?

Made Possible by Curated by Boulder, Colorado, is a seductive place—the kind of town where people come for a year and stay for life. The beauty of Boulder means you will never be able to leave. Come see for yourself. It seems you can barely walk half a block in town before encountering yet another unique coffee shop. Most exude a welcoming vibe, inviting you to linger over a hot cup and engage in stimulating conversations or work projects. Stepping into Amante is like being transported to Italy. This coffee shop oozes Euro-culture, complete with sleek styling and a bar that serves up not just caffeinated beverages but a selection of booze to boot. A hangout for artistic types, the Laughing Goat overflows with creative funk, right down to the milky designs in their drinks. The wood-paneled coffee bar, warmly colored walls, and framed prints welcome you to settle in for a spell, especially at night, when the Goat hosts live music and literary performances on its stage. Boxcar Coffee Roasters charms with exposed brick walls and tasty pastries. A very Stonich Boxcar Coffee Roasters roasts its own beans in small batches to ensure the perfect cup. Sharing a space with Cured—an artisan meat, cheese, wine shop, and gourmet grocery—Boxcar offers a variety of cozy nooks to chat with friends or bust out some emails. In the trendy West Pearl neighborhood, Ozo Coffee Company serves delicious brews as well as Bhakti Chai in a hip, yet homey atmosphere. If you fall in love with their coffee, as many do, you can pick up bags of beans in the store or sign up for a coffee subscription delivered to your door. For a totally decadent treat, dig into one of their bacon-topped maple donuts. The Cup gets all of its coffee from Conscious Coffees, a craft micro-roastery in Boulder that sources only organic beans from small family farms. In addition to enjoying a hot beverage at The Cup, you can also tantalize your taste buds with a selection of delicious pastries, bagels, salads, and sandwiches. Where to Hit the Trail Taking to the trails at the base of the Flatirons Terry Stonich With miles of trails in a vast open space network surrounding the city, Boulder is a great place to bring your hiking shoes. Slather on the sunscreen, bring plenty of water, and be prepared for heavy breathing since the sun is strong and the air is thin at 5,000 feet. Here are three top trails. Nestled at the base of the famous Flatirons, Chautauqua Park is the starting point for dozens of hikes up into the hills west of the city. Choose from trails that meander alongside lush streams, cross enchanting mesas, lead you to a natural rock arch, or climb to the top of 8,000-foot peaks. Choose from a couple of different routes, or combine a few. For bonus points, continue over to South Boulder Peak. Here are some great places to check out. Get up early and spend the better part of a day knocking out a 1,000-foot multi-pitch climb. With more than 1,000 routes, the options are practically endless. Eldorado Canyon State Park, just south of Boulder, is world famous for rock climbing. The towering sandstone walls rise up on either side of a narrow canyon, creating an awe-inspiring backdrop for trad, sport, and top rope climbs that run the full gamut of difficulty. Just be prepared for cold. The water comes straight from Rocky Mountain snowmelt and is frigid—which can be bone-chilling or can offer welcome relief on a hot summer day. Otherwise, put in just west of Eben G. As snowmelt increases, the creek morphs from Jekyll to Hyde, so beware of heavy runoff, which sometimes prompts the city to prohibit paddling. South Boulder Creek is a good bet for advanced paddlers who want to put their skills to the test on class IV and V waters. You can start at Gross Reservoir for a thrilling 6. If flat water is more your speed, head to Boulder Reservoir, a popular spot for standup paddleboarding. You can bring your own board or rent one on-site. Put in at Dream Cove, to the left after you pass the entrance station and pay a fee. Be prepared for winds that often kick up on summer afternoons. Hippies will feel right at home at Mountain Sun, a downtown Boulder institution that features tie-dye adorned walls, dozens of craft beers brewed on-site, and an affordable menu of pub food. Its cousin, Southern Sun, offers a similar experience at the south end of town. And just underneath Southern Sun, Under the Sun is a slightly more upscale experience, with a wood-burning oven, smoked meats, and fireside living room. You can even take a guided brewery tour, or grab a growler to go. Order a meal in a basket or toss it all together in a bowl for a high yum factor. You can even sign up for BBQ school if you want to learn the tricks of the trade.

Choose from wood-fired pizzas, bacon-wrapped dates, hummus, calamari, and more. Or settle in for a full meal, relaxing in the large dining room or out on the patio in a festive atmosphere decorated with colorful tiles. Pick a place downtown or nearby so you can get home safely on foot or in a cab. Just a few miles up Boulder Canyon, Boulder Mountain Lodge was recently purchased and is being transformed into the Boulder Adventure Lodge, a go-to lodging spot for adventure lovers that will include a hostel room, campsites, slackline park, mountain bike trail, and community room. The first stage of renovations will be complete by June. Julien Hotel and Spa in downtown Boulder is the place to go for a truly romantic getaway. Julien is a romantic dream come true. Chief Niwot was onto something when he settled here.

This guide is part of the free travel guides series on this blog. The Mile High city, sitting one-mile or 5, feet above sea level, is the highest major city in the United States. Here are a few of the top must-see landmarks for the first-time visitor to Denver. Built in , the Denver Mint is the largest single producer of coins in the world. Tickets are ONLY available at the ticket office first thing every morning, so arrive early. The surrounding enormous red rocks of this natural wonder jut high into the sky, containing the sound within the natural amphitheater. The venue is free to see on days when no events are held and is an excellent jumping off point for several hiking trails. Denver Art Museum framing up the Denver Library Denver Zoo Opening in , the Denver Zoo is an acre park complex which focuses on conservation, animal care, and preservation of species that are going extinct in the wild. Keep an eye out for the peacocks wandering the park as you stroll through. Both are uniquely different with the York St. Interactive exhibits will keep both kids and adults alike busy in awe and curiosity. Pei, the 16th Street Mall runs from Union Station to Broadway through the middle of downtown Denver featuring shopping, hotels, restaurants and plenty of entertainment. Use the free mall ride for accessing most of downtown. Recently receiving a new facelift, it is also a go-to place featuring upscale restaurants, coffee shops, bookstores and more. Hang out, enjoying the free wi-fi and charging stations, catch the Amtrak to anywhere in the country, get to and from the Denver International Airport, or explore Denver by light rail or bus. Then check out these fun and exciting locations and go off-the-beaten path in Denver. Denver Contemporary Art Museum One of the lesser known museums in Denver, the Denver Contemporary Art Museum features modern and contemporary art from both local and international artists. They even recently opened a free art lending library featuring the work of 26 local artists. Wander the streets in search of urban art by local and world renown artists leftover from the September Crush Festival. Or check out local galleries and enjoy the many delicious restaurants and bars. Street Art in RiNo Ruby Hill Little known even to locals is that Ruby Hill Park just received a facelift that included a concert venue featuring many free summer concerts, a skate and ski park, plus a hill for sledding in the winter. Come for a show or just to play and relax on the grass-covered hill which is free for all to use. Where to eat in Denver Denver is home to a growing food scene including a huge food truck following and just hosted Season 15 Top Chef Colorado. Locals flavors include green chili, the Denver omelet or sandwich, and rocky mountain oysters. There is something for everyone with tastes from around the globe. Here are just a few of our favorites. On the pricey side, there is still a two-hour wait if you show up late. Feel like a kid again and have a glass of Kool-Aid and rice-crispy treat for dessert. Shondiz Food Cart Snack: Bonnie Brae Ice Cream Shop: One of the oldest ice cream shops in Denver, with all flavors, made in-house, this creamy ice cream shop is the place to go for a traditional cone. Or try with the house freshly made waffle cones. Looking for excellent fresh sushi at low prices? Our favorite place for Italian in Denver. Farm-to-table goodness with in-house cured meats and cheeses, house-made pasta, and an extensive choice of Italian wines. Valet parking is free with stamped receipt. Home to one of the best burgers in Denver, you can top that bad boy anyway you like including peanut butter and jelly. Both the fries and onion rings are crispy and delicious. But we do have plenty to choose from, including campgrounds for those who are more into roughing it. Great places to find recommendations for where to stay is Denver. Tips for Visiting Denver Denver is one of the fastest growing metros in the US, so traffic and parking are issues. And if you love beer, you must sample the local brew. Denver is home to over 72 breweries and Colorado over , making it the second highest state in the US for breweries. Design your own tour or join of the local organized ones. Common sense travel actions are required. Watch your belongings, especially when on the 16th Street Mall and be aware of what is going on around you. If out late at night at the bars or clubs, whether male or female, avoid dark alleys and walking home. Instead, grab a cab, a ride-sharing option, or the bus. This guide is just a sampling of the many sights, attractions, and things to do in Denver. Heidi Medina calls Denver, Colorado home and works as a freelance content strategist. Each series will include at least 1 epic boondocking area, complete with pictures and GPS coordinates. Twin Lakes is like no other. Incredible boondocking area, beautiful scenery and we met some wonderful people. The lake is incredible, with amazing kayaking and fishing. Leadville is a quaint town to visit that is pretty close. Boondocking Tip Twin Lakes: Make sure to stop and soak in what might have been so long ago! Super fun and interesting place! This is located in Fort Collins, CO. The spires come in shades from creamy white, to orange, purple, gray, rust, and dark brown. Another ecosystem thrives there. So please read up before visiting. But well worth the sites. My recommendation is to read the history not this before going. But we absolutely love stuff like this. It always will be free. If you look closely, you can see me standing on the balcony there. This tells you how big this bizarre place really is. Make sure you make a day out of this! Friends and people in the community commented after he started building it, that it resembled a castle. He thought that sounded like a great idea, and continued on with this bizarre, and interesting castle of his. He was there the day we visited, and we got to chat with him just a bit. By far, this was our favorite thing in Colorado. Weird, I know, but maybe because there is so much mystery around the story, and such a crazy, strange place to visit. Well if we build them, we will come! Located in Antonito, CO. On the corner of State St and E 10th Ave. Hanging Lake Yes the picture is real! Hanging Lake is a crystal-clear, travertine lake located high atop the cliffs of Glenwood Canyon. They can be cumbersome. Hanging Lake is a geologic wonder. They ask that you not touch the lake at all. Not even dip your toe in it. Please make sure you follow their rules. No animals allowed, so leave your pup home on this trip. I wanted to add this to our list even though the lake is becoming a very popular summer-time hike. Flying Saucer House Yep another one! But where else can you see all these strangely built houses? The house is not a personal home today, but is used for private events. The pool is about 82 degrees and bubbling. I know I could have added about 10 more things to this list. Please comment below if you have a really cool place to share in Colorado.
