His mother was Susanna Fontanarossa. Bartolomeo worked in a cartography workshop in Lisbon for at least part of his adulthood. In one of his writings, he says he went to sea at the age of 14. In 1470, the Columbus family moved to Savona, where Domenico took over a tavern. Some modern historians have argued that he was not from Genoa but, instead, from the Aragon region of Spain [12] or from Portugal. Later, he allegedly made a trip to Chios, an Aegean island then ruled by Genoa. He docked in Bristol, England [17] and Galway, Ireland. In 1482, he was possibly in Iceland. Columbus based himself in Lisbon from 1483 to 1492. Between 1483 and 1492, Columbus traded along the coasts of West Africa, reaching the Portuguese trading post of Elmina at the Guinea coast in present-day Ghana. He returned to Portugal to settle her estate and take his son Diego with him. Columbus recognized the boy as his offspring. Columbus entrusted his older, legitimate son Diego to take care of Beatriz and pay the pension set aside for her following his death, but Diego was negligent in his duties. According to historian Edmund Morgan, Columbus was not a scholarly man. Yet he studied these books, made hundreds of marginal notations in them and came out with ideas about the world that were characteristically simple and strong and sometimes wrong. For example, part of the argument that he submitted to the Spanish Catholic Monarchs when he sought their support for his proposed expedition to reach the Indies by sailing west was based on his reading of the Second Book of Esdras Ezra: Towards the end of his life, he produced a Book of Prophecies in which his career as an explorer is interpreted in the light of Christian eschatology and of apocalypticism. With the fall of Constantinople to the Ottoman Turks in 1453, the land route to Asia became much more difficult and dangerous. Portuguese navigators tried to find a sea way to Asia. Afonso rejected his proposal. Christian writers whose works clearly reflect the conviction that the Earth is spherical include Saint Bede the Venerable in his Reckoning of Time, written around AD 700, Alexandria and Syene modern-day Aswan. He also believed that Japan which he called "Cipangu", following Marco Polo was much larger, farther to the east from China "Cathay", and closer to the equator than it is, and that there were inhabited islands even farther to the east than Japan, including the mythical Antillia, which he thought might lie not much farther to the west than the Azores. In this, he was influenced by the ideas of Florentine astronomer, Paolo dal Pozzo Toscanelli, who corresponded with Columbus in [32] and who also defended the feasibility of a westward route to Asia. The true figure is now known to be vastly larger: Most European navigators reasonably concluded that a westward voyage from Europe to Asia was unfeasible. The Catholic Monarchs, however, having completed an expensive war in the Iberian Peninsula, were eager to obtain a competitive edge over other European countries in the quest for trade with the Indies. The precise first land sighting and landing point was San Salvador Island. Instead, Columbus returned home by following the curving trade winds northeastward to the middle latitudes of the North Atlantic, where he was able to catch the "westerlies" that blow eastward to the coast of Western Europe. There, in turn, the winds curve southward towards the Iberian Peninsula. The corresponding technique for efficient travel in the Atlantic appears to have been exploited first by the Portuguese, who referred to it as the Volta do mar "turn of the sea". By sailing directly due west from the Canary Islands during hurricane season, skirting the so-called horse latitudes of the mid-Atlantic, Columbus risked either being becalmed or running into a tropical cyclone, both of which, by chance, he avoided. Columbus also requested he be made "Great Admiral of the Ocean", appointed governor of any and all lands he discovered, and given one-tenth of all revenue from those lands. That meeting also proved unsuccessful, in part because not long afterwards Bartolomeu Dias returned to Portugal with news of his successful rounding of the southern tip of Africa near the Cape of Good Hope. Columbus before the Queen, as imagined [37] by Emanuel Gottlieb Leutze, Columbus traveled from

Portugal to both Genoa and Venice , but he received encouragement from neither. He had also dispatched his brother Bartholomew to the court of Henry VII of England to inquire whether the English crown might sponsor his expedition, but also without success. Columbus had sought an audience from the monarchs Ferdinand II of Aragon and Isabella I of Castile , who had united several kingdoms in the Iberian Peninsula by marrying and were ruling together. On 1 May , permission having been granted, Columbus presented his plans to Queen Isabella, who, in turn, referred it to a committee. After the passing of much time, the savants of Spain, like their counterparts in Portugal , replied that Columbus had grossly underestimated the distance to Asia. They pronounced the idea impractical and advised their Royal Highnesses to pass on the proposed venture. However, to keep Columbus from taking his ideas elsewhere, and perhaps to keep their options open, the Catholic Monarchs gave him an annual allowance of 12, maravedis and, in , furnished him with a letter ordering all cities and towns under their domain to provide him food and lodging at no cost. After continually lobbying at the Spanish court and two years of negotiations, he finally had success in January Isabella turned him down on the advice of her confessor. Columbus was leaving town by mule in despair when Ferdinand intervened. Isabella then sent a royal guard to fetch him, and Ferdinand later claimed credit for being "the principal cause why those islands were discovered". He had the right to nominate three persons, from whom the sovereigns would choose one, for any office in the new lands. He would be entitled to 10 percent of all the revenues from the new lands in perpetuity. Additionally, he would also have the option of buying one-eighth interest in any commercial venture with the new lands and receive one-eighth of the profits. He and his sons, Diego and Fernando, then conducted a lengthy series of court cases against the Castilian crown , known as the pleitos colombinos , alleging that the Crown had illegally reneged on its contractual obligations to Columbus and his heirs. Diego resumed litigation in , which lasted until , and further disputes continued until Voyages of Christopher Columbus The voyages of Christopher Columbus Between and , Columbus completed four round-trip voyages between Spain and the Americas, each voyage being sponsored by the Crown of Castile. On his first voyage, he independently discovered the Americas and magnetic declination. The largest was a carrack Spanish: The other two were smaller caravels. The name of one is lost: Exactly which island in the Bahamas this corresponds to is unresolved. He called the inhabitants of the lands that he visited indios Spanish for "Indians". I believe that people from the mainland come here to take them as slaves. They ought to make good and skilled servants, for they repeat very quickly whatever we say to them. I think they can very easily be made Christians, for they seem to have no religion. If it pleases our Lord, I will take six of them to Your Highnesses when I depart, in order that they may learn our language. Columbus, for his part, continued to the northern coast of Hispaniola , where he landed on 5 December. The wreck was used as a target for cannon fire to impress the native peoples. Columbus left 39 men, including Luis de Torres , the converso interpreter , who spoke Hebrew and Arabic ,[citation needed] and founded the settlement of La Navidad at the site of present-day Bord de Mer de Limonade, Haiti.

Why did that not work both ways? The population of the New World was to all intents and purposes cut off from the Old World before the adoption of agriculture and the keeping of domesticated animals for food. The only domesticated animals in the New World were llamas. Many of our diseases stem from living in close proximity to animals; recent examples of these are bird and swine flu. Once a pathogen becomes established in a population, that population develops a level of tolerance; it is not in the interests of the pathogen to kill its host. So the pathogen becomes endemic, only killing a small proportion of those infected. The hunter gatherers that found their way into the Americas, however, would live in small groups, too small for an infectious disease to sustain. So even if the original settlers of the New World did take some diseases with them these would have died out. Thus when the invaders arrived, bringing new diseases, the indigenous population had no resistance. Moreover, they harboured few, if any, diseases of their own to transmit the other way. Some of his soldiers are said to have been among the Spanish army that later stormed Naples; after indulging in the usual rape and pillage, they scattered all over Europe. Within a few years a terrible epidemic had spread across Europe, with revolting abscesses eating into genitals and faces: Simon Rodway, London W14 One reason that Europe was a net exporter of such diseases would be that any European explorer infected with a New World disease would have to survive the long journey home if the disease were to catch hold in Europe.
