1: Confessions of a Prayer Wimp: My Fumbling, Faltering Foibles in Faith by Mary Pierce

In Confessions of a Prayer Wimp, you'll come to understand that faith is less about what you are or do or say, and more about who God is—someone who loves you no matter what you do. Read more Read less.

January 15, by Mary Pierce Monday morning: With the dog settled in her favorite spot on top of the couch, the husband off to work, the kids gone to school, I sit at the kitchen table with a hot cup of coffee. I look out the window on this cold early winter day. No breeze stirs the nearly-bare oaks. No rustling critters—no squirrels, no chipmunks, not even a bird—disturb the scene. Even the refrigerator is silent, not emitting any of its usual groans and hisses. I savor the silence for just a moment when I hear a woman shouting. Why does she sound just like me? Who is this shrew living in my head? I need to just sit sometimes and rest my body and mind. Just being there, not structuring every moment with God like I structure the rest of my life—but just being with him. This activity has a technical name: What a stunning thing it is to be able to do that, to be allowed to contemplate a holy God! So why is it so hard for me to do this wonderful thing? Peter hit on two of my biggest challenges. It means silencing my inner shrew. Could time with God be something to look forward to—something I want to do instead of something I have to do? Foster seemed to think so. He and thousands—millions maybe—of other people found it wonderful to spend time with God. Meditation is another way to worship. My cathedral is my kitchen. I worship the God of the universe at the altar of my kitchen table, with the jelly stuck to the placemats and faint impressions in the wood where a child did his homework and pressed a little too hard with the pen. But my kitchen table is where I meet God in the morning. Where I lift up my voice and sing songs of gratitude and praise. Where I sense him smiling as he listens. He is a Friend. Jesus defined the term. He did just that for me. Sometimes he whispers softly, words of love to my heart. Sometimes he states clear direction for the day, prompting me to call someone, to pray for someone, to go somewhere, or to tackle a particular task. Sometimes he causes an awareness of his presence—a tingling rush of his spirit that excites and energizes me at the same time it comforts and soothes. Sometimes, as on that gray winter morning, he directs my attention to the wonders of his creation outside the window. The rush of sudden wind rattling the oaks, the last leaves shaken loose and falling, dying. The world white with early, unexpected snow, like forgiveness. And buried deep, the hope of spring and resurrection.
