With the holiday season fast approaching, perhaps you can learn how to tie a bow during your spare time. Ribbon Any kind will do This tutorial uses a satin ribbon The following are some of the many ribbons you will find at a craft store: Cut out about 1. Fold the Ribbon Begin with your wide ribbon. Keep Folding Fold over the entire length of the wide ribbon. It should stack neatly on top of itself. Clip Sides of the Ribbon Once you have your entire ribbon folded accordion-style over itself, clip the sides of your ribbon. Clip out a V, making sure to catch all the layers of ribbon when you clip. Add Thin Ribbon Take your thin piece of ribbon and place it under the V-notched sides. Tie Thin Ribbon Around the Bow Tie your thin ribbon in a basic overhand knot around the wide ribbon, pull it tight. I used a wire ribbon to add more body, but any kind of ribbon will still work. Keep reading for two more easy bow tutorials! You will need approximately one yard of ribbon and your scissors. Cut your yard in half. Remove the Wire This step is optional, as I chose to work with a wired ribbon because I liked the color. Do this by taking the wire in one hand, the ribbon in the other, and gently pull. Move the ribbon down as you pull the wire out. Fold the Ribbon Over Itself Fold the ribbon over itself, accordion-style. You can choose your own size, but I found this length works well for the width of the ribbon I chose. Add Another Ribbon Once you have folded your ribbon over itself, take the other half of your ribbon and put it underneath it. Tie a Knot Around the Ribbon to Form a Bow Bring the other ribbon around the folded ribbon and tie a basic overhand knot. Adjust the Ribbon to Make a Bow Bring out the folded pieces of the ribbon. Open them up, space them out, and work with them until you are happy with your final shape. Now you have a basic layered bow with a tail. You will need wire ribbon for this bow technique. Do this by taking the wire in one hand, the ribbon in the other, and gently pulling. Throw Away Wire Set the wire aside, you can recycle it later. Tie Other Wire in a Knot Take the wire that is still inside of your ribbon and tie it in a knot at the base. To tie a knot with this thin wire, all you have to do is wrap it around itself several times. Hold the Wire Taut and Pull the Ribbon Down Now to create your flower-shaped bow, you will need to bunch up your ribbon. Do this by holding the wire taut in one hand, and bring the ribbon down with your other. The knot you tied at the end of our wire should hold the ribbon in place so it will remain bunched and not fall out the other end. Spiral the Ribbon After all the ribbon have been bunched at the bottom of your wire, work the ribbon in your hands so the wired side faces in, and work the ribbon around itself in a spiral shape. Poke the Wire Through Middle Take the long piece of wire from one end of your ribbon and poke it through the center of the spiral. Now poke the long end through the ribbon, catching a wired edge beneath it, and pull it tight. Do this twice and cut your wire. This flower ribbon was probably the easiest of all to make, and you can use this technique to make bows for packages, floral arrangements, and Lord knows what else! Make your own boutonniere and corsages, floral wreaths, and more. Watch this video from Lia Griffith for more tips and tricks on how to tie a bow: Learning how to tie a bow is fun and easy.
