Most want to consolidate as much as possible and work with a limited number of knowledgeable, experienced professionals whom they can trust to take care of whatever needs to be addressed in their home. This is particularly true with businesses such as pest control, since some homeowners have become accustomed to having one provider for several related services. The company began with general pest control services, then gradually added on. Every time we serviced, they asked about their plants and what was killing them. The add-on services have also made Palm Spring Pest Control more competitive in its marketplace. And it has led to positive growth as well, with Campos stating that business and profits have increased every year. Mosquito services have been an area that PCOs have found to be of benefit in gaining and retaining customers, particularly in areas where mosquito-borne diseases are a threat. Not only is it a service that a PCO can add with minimal cost, but often the same products and equipment can also be used for other public health vector control, such as fleas and ticks. There also are times that current service can be expanded into an add-on. For example, you may already be providing bed bug services “but can you provide a fumigation option? Even though it is just a small part of its business used only when needed, Collins Pest Management has significantly increased its profits by adding this service with the help of Univar Industry Specialist Jeremy Jackson, who has helped more than 30 pest control companies go into bed bug fumigation service. I try to use IPM first, but sometimes you have to go beyond that. Collins also will refer residential customers to the companies who refer fumigation business to him. Bed bug fumigation can be an expensive business to add on since it requires an investment in equipment, insurance and training. And it comes with certain restrictions and regulations that the PCO needs to understand ahead of time. See related story on page This service also can be a higher expense than many customers can afford in a lump payment. But rather than losing those customers or having to wait on split payments himself, Parker contracted with a financial services company with whom customers could finance the service and make regular payments. Campos recommends that pest control companies include add-on services from the very start. Customers like that they can hire one company to do everything. But there is one top recommendation that was made by every expert consulted: Listen to your customers. Determine if your company can afford to develop additional service offerings and absorb the cost and risk associated with them. Confirm that the new offering is compatible with and complements existing services to ensure that you do not lose focus on your original mission. This also enables you to test new offerings with minimal capital expense by using existing equipment and labor. Use a test market to introduce a new service and develop procedures. Once you have established these offerings will be profitable, then look at investing in and introducing them company wide. Initially, marketing to your existing customer base is the most economical approach versus new campaigns for new customers. Confirm that there is a definite need in your market for the add-on service, and that the market is not saturated with competitors offering the same thing. Ideally, identify a service niche that no one or only a few competitors offer in your service area, but demand is high, Herman added. This enables you to focus resources and training specifically on that area. Know when to draw the line at what is right for your business. When customers have a request for animal control “such as live snake removal, Palm Springs Pest Control Owner Carlos Campos refers them to local animal control. While add-on services should be a good fit for both your business and your customers, there can be significant differences between general pest control and an add-on service. As such, it is critical that PMPs thoroughly research the service and prepare for the expansion. As an example, while wildlife service can be a very profitable add-on business, there are some key factors that PCOs should understand in advance about this business segment to determine if it is right for their company. Wildlife control can be a profitable add-on business, but do your homework before adding this service. Goodwin AdobeStock Time Management. The biggest difference between pest control and wildlife is time management. An appointment you expect to be short certainly will be extended if you have to address an animal situation for the client. We regularly schedule two hours for an inspection if it is an average sized home of up to 2, square feet. If it is bigger, it will take even more time. With pest control, you see what is causing the situation and take action to kill or eliminate the offending pest. Many of the situations we deal with are in regards to animals that are either protected by federal, state or local laws. As an example, while there are only three birds not federally protected under The Migratory Bird Act, there are endangered species in the U. We have biologists, entomologists and zoologists on staff to make sure we are following the rules. Issues with trapping in an attic also can be bad. For example, if you trap a raccoon, it can do more damage from inside a cage than living in residence for a long time. Raccoons have a bad attitude when trapped. Another issue is equipment. We have many thousands of dollars in machines and tools that we use on a regular basis, quite literally for each job we perform. It can be a large investment. One person cannot do all that needs to be done. We send crews of up to 10 people to complete various jobs. So, you need to consider if you can afford to pull that many employees out of circulation for one job. It is critical to be trained and gain expertise before adding wildlife services, otherwise it can lead to client dissatisfaction and the cancellation of all further services, pest control included. Wildlife is not to be taken lightly â€” sometimes it is best to give a referral rather than lose a client.

CRAWLY BUG AND THE FIREHOUSE PIE by Toby Speed Illustrated by Margot Apple Weekly Reader Book Club, Ages ISBN # "Crawly Bug crept over the sill and stole a crumb from Mama's hot pie.

A new collection of stories is published each weekday. At least according to police in Medford, Oregon. According to investigators, Provencio entered an apartment through an unlocked screen door, threatened the resident with scissors and sprayed him with WD Provencio has pleaded innocent. The young fisherman caught a red belly piranha in a creek in a Portland, Oregon, suburb. The flesh-eating fish bit Jason on his finger as he pulled it out of the water. Jason has decided put the fish in his bathtub and plans to sell it to a pet shop. The experts figure the piranha was probably in a fish tank, before someone set it free in the creek. Reena Patel and Olabayo Olaniyi were busted in March for allegedly making a bomb threat. Capitol Police spotted them chanting and singing inside the building. They had glass jars duct-taped to their bodies. But the costumes turned out to be harmless. The couple insisted that wrapping themselves was part of their art. Prosecutors have decided not to press charges. The winner will be awarded the cherished Golden Skillet for mascot-racing excellence. The whacked mascot -- year-old Mandy Block -- was more amused than abused by the whole thing. The Brewers have assigned Block to less public duties since Sausagegate. But after being trapped by herself for three hours Thursday in her Manhattan apartment building elevator, the year-old was rescued by firefighters. And all it cost her was a wedgie. Firefighters from Engine Co. Reporters nearly outnumbered those assembled in front of the Boulder County Courthouse for the event and participants said that ruined what was supposed to be a spontaneous and wacky stunt. The so-called flash mob phenomenon, in which crowds organized by e-mail lists and Web sites perform harmless stunts for a few minutes in prearranged public location before abruptly disappearing, apparently took place in Brazil for the first time. Similar acts have recently occurred in cities such as New York, Tokyo and Vienna. It was unclear who organized the stunt. Police burst into an apartment in Narbonne, southern France, on Monday and discovered the skeleton on a bed in a room that had been sealed off to prevent odors from escaping. The woman was in her early 90s when she is believed to have died, in February Health officials grew concerned about her when they realized she was not filling her prescription medication. They alerted authorities, who opened a missing persons investigation. She told police that her mother died while under hypnosis, authorities said. Police say Walter McKinney had been drinking with neighbors and was showing them pictures of his fire-breathing act. He decided to do a demonstration and poured lighter fluid into his mouth. He then reportedly put a burning stick up to his face - and his face caught fire. One neighbor says he helped extinguish the fire with some beer - saying it was the only thing close at hand. Calendar organizer Millie Wiggins says firefighters, real estate agents, chefs, and bikers have all expressed interest in dropping their drawers for charity. The calendar will be published next March. Suharto - a five-star general - ruled Indonesia with an iron hand for 32 years before he was ousted in amid pro-democracy protests and riots. Hundreds of thousands of his political opponents were killed or exiled to penal colonies during his rule. But a Jakarta court ruled that the ailing year old autocrat was too feeble to stand trial. Sutiyoso, himself a former general, was appointed governor of the Indonesian capital by Suharto in the final year of his rule. A Lincoln company is auctioning off part of the famous Mars meteorite Zagami, which fell to Earth Oct. Bids for the fragment, which weighs about 6. It is the largest known fragment from the meteorite, said Sell2All, the Lincoln company coordinating the auction for a private individual. One side of it is cut to display the natural layers. He went to the suburban Miami gas station, where he bought the tickets to jot down the winning numbers. It was the 10th largest jackpot in Lotto history. LOUIS - Now that his own life has been saved, Quentin the "miracle dog" will be trying to save the lives of other pets. The pound basenji was supposed to be euthanized at a St. But somehow, he survived the gas chamber. And the founder of a St. Louis group that tries to rescue stray dogs says he figures Quentin was meant to serve some greater good. The founder of the California group, called In Defense of Animals, says the first goal will be to eliminate the gas chamber as the primary way of euthanizing stray dogs in St. The year-old Texas man is back behind bars, accused of robbing his third bank in five years. He left in a car parked near the bank, but a witness got the license plate, which police tracked to an address in Goldthwaite, miles southeast of Abilene. About a half-hour later, Rountree was pulled over by officers 16 miles south of Abilene on U. Rountree was jailed on a charge of bank robbery. The Green Party presidential candidate ended up with pie on his face as he was endorsing fellow party member Peter Camejo for California governor. The culprit fled through a side door. Offenses under the law include failing to flush, vandalism, spitting and littering " as well as more irregular behavior in toilets such as bathing, cooking, washing clothes and lighting fires, Low was quoted as saying by the Bernama national news agency. Follow That Bar Stool! It started Monday when an officer saw a man riding the motorized bar stool at 35 mph. He was being followed closely by a woman in a Mustang. Both driver and rider were pulled over. The woman told police she had been on the phone with a dispatcher reporting the bar stool stolen. The owner of the bar stool confirmed that the stool, powered by a small engine, had been taken three weeks earlier. Jarrett Orcutt, 22, said he had bought it a little over a week ago, thinking it was a toy and added that he had driven it between Reno and nearby Sparks several times. Orcutt faces Reno charges of possession of stolen property, possession of drug paraphernalia and numerous traffic violations. Sparks police are handling the stolen vehicle report. The year-old police sergeant, whose name was not released, used a digital camera to surreptitiously snap the shots when the woman was reporting a stolen bicycle at his station in the western city of Takarazuka. The woman became suspicious after she saw a flash go off. She later reported the incident to state police, a spokesman said on condition of anonymity. The sergeant has admitted to the accusations and is expected to face disciplinary action, the spokesman said, without elaborating. The camera was not police property, he added. Newspapers reported that police will ask prosecutors to charge the sergeant with violating public nuisance laws, but the spokesman said the punishment was still under consideration. Martin Holness says when coins in his trousers set off a metal detector, a guard asked him to run the pants through an X-ray machine. TSA spokeswoman Lauren Stover says the passenger was frustrated, and took the pants off by himself, insisting that they be X-rayed. She says Holness caused a scene and says the screener did nothing wrong. Michael Melo has pleaded guilty to flooding Fox Entertainment with angry e-mails, after a Boston Red Sox game pre-empted an auto race. Melo admitted that he wrote a computer program that blitzed Fox with more than a-half million e-mail messages. Melo has also been sentenced to six months of home detention for his May stunt. A security guard outside heard crying and found the four children in the truck. She bought her winning ticket Saturday afternoon at a liquor store down the block from an Econolodge motel she had moved to three years ago when she could no longer afford her town home. She said she has also received a marriage proposal. Aside from buying a home with an ocean view in Long Beach, Frierson plans on using her winnings to purchase a Corvette and travel to Hawaii and Jamaica. Muehlmeier was finally informed last weekend by Guinness World Records Ltd. No explanation for the three-year delay was given. The winning combination was - and the stuck balls were numbers 18 and In taking the title, State did not have to face its inside-the-Beltway rival, the Defense Department. Reeker said at his briefing after announcing the result of the tournament and displaying a trophy. The Defense Department did not make the playoffs. The rapper, whose real name is Sean Paul Henriques and who is riding the Billboard charts, paid the fine shortly after exiting the courtroom, then signed autographs for fans waiting outside before being whisked away in a van. His July performance was laced with expletives, which are illegal in public in Jamaica, police said. Authorities said the men - disguised as a pair of bug exterminators - offered to spray the comic book shop and then tied up an employee on July Suthard was not at the store during the robbery. The duo were foiled after they allegedly tried to sell the books at a comic shop in Margate a few days later, Lauderdale police Sgt. Plastic barriers have been set up within the arrangement to minimize the damage if dominos start to fall, Kim said. In addition, rat traps ring the expo hall, but they are "just a precaution," he said. Ma has been putting in hour days to meet her deadline and only takes short breaks for meals and the occasional badminton game to help relieve stress, Kim said.
