The Dangerous Days of Daniel X James Patterson & Michael Ledwidge As stated on the back cover of the book "They killed my mother and father- and I will hunt them to the ends of the earth" Daniel is an alien who has the power to shape shift and control objects with his mind.

Plot[edit] Twelve years after the murder of his parents, fifteen-year-old alien Daniel X has taken up the task of his parents as Defender of Earth. In the sewers of Portland, Oregon, he defeats number 19 on the List of Alien Outlaws on Earth, Orkng Jllfgna, in hopes of working his way up to number 1: While traveling, he spends a night in the woods, camping with the "friends" he conjured up with his powers: Joe, Willy, Emma, and Dana. The next day, Daniel arrives in LA. With the help of his "family", which he created, he rents a house. The next day, Daniel decides to go to school, a first in his life. At the end of the day, he bumps into Phoebe Cook, who is also new to the school. Daniel decides to search the city for clues about the whereabouts of Seth, and stumbles in upon a child-slave and drug-dealing operation. The following day after school, Daniel walks Phoebe to his house, which he finds destroyed. Soon after, he is contacted by Seth, who again warns him to leave LA. The next day, Daniel goes back to school and, so as not to seem too smart, purposely flunks a history test. After the test, Phoebe tells Daniel why she had changed schools. Daniel suspects it to be the work of Seth and hurries home. After his house is compromised again, Daniel feels it is unsafe to return, so he goes to spend the night with Phoebe. The next morning, Daniel awakens to find Phoebe missing. He finds Phoebe near the school. He talks to her, and she transforms, revealing herself as Ergent Seth in disguise. The ship flies away from Earth as Daniel is put into a cell for the duration of the trip. He summons his friends, who begin reconnaissance. It has been taken over by Seth and his henchmen, killing or impoverishing most of the inhabitants. Daniel escapes from a landing party and flees under the wreckage, where the few survivors live. After regaining his strength, Daniel goes after Seth again. Daniel leaves Alpar Nok and returns to Earth.

Characters[edit] Daniel X

â€” The main character of the novel. His main target is Number 1 on the List, a dreadful alien known as The Prayer. Daniel has the power to create with his mind, but must be focused and calm. Plus there seems to be a mass limit. Or sometimes I seem to run up against a mental block of some kind. One time I tried to create a really cool, flaming red Ferrari, but nothing happened. He is forced to move from town to town because of some laws he has broken, and he must move to wherever the next alien on the list is living. Throughout the whole book, he is after Number 6 Ergent Seth on the List. The dream is about Seth in a classroom, trying to figure out a confusing problem, and everyone is calling him "dumb-dumb. He is responsible for many horror movie sequels. Daniel is chasing after this character the entire story, until Seth is killed by Daniel at the end of the book by transforming into an elephant inside his head. He is known to be very cranky. She, along with Joe, Emma, and Willy, were assumed dead when the planet was attacked, although their bodies were never found. Dana has long blond hair and fair skin. She is explained by Daniel as "the girl of his dreams. But in "Armageddon" she shows "feelings" for Willy. Emma â€” Emma is from Alpar Nok. She is a self-proclaimed environmentalist, a vegetarian, and an extreme animal lover. She is white and has brown hair and brown eyes. Joe â€” Joe is from Alpar Nok. He is fairly tall and very skinny even though he eats four times his own body weight. His mouth is always moving; he is either talking or eating. He is the clown of the drang and is constantly joking. He enjoys playing video games and computers. Daniel usually summons Willy for help with machinery, weapons and combat. He never backs down from a challenge and is constantly reminding everyone that there is nothing to fear except fear itself. And has feelings for Dana, per "Armageddon". One of her hobbies is teasing Daniel. She cried and Daniel clapped her out of existence, possibly erasing her memory of her new knowledge because her behavior goes back to normal by her next appearance. Daniel meets her later in the book on Alpar Nok. Killed in prologue of the first book but constantly conjured up by Daniel. His soul dies in "Armageddon". Also killed in the prologue in the first book. Her soul dies in "Armageddon". Melody Judge - A girl Daniel meets in "Armageddon". She is said to be very much like Dana, and at the end of the series, it turns out that they are one and the same. Daughter of Special Agent Martin Judge. It was released exclusively on the Nintendo DS.

The Dangerous Days of Daniel X is a novel by James Patterson and co-author Michael Ledwidge, written in the same vein as his Maximum Ride series. Patterson returns to the realm of science fiction in this novel.

Little, Brown and Company, Pages: The vengeful creature would have murdered Daniel, too, if he could have found him. His most astonishing ability is to create real flesh-and-blood people with his mind—including his own parents, a younger sister named Pork Chop, and a quartet of best friends. When he needs extra brawn, brainpower, comfort, or just a little company, he can mentally project them into actual existence with his memory. He, himself, is an alien, but a good one. Now Daniel is in L. Ergent Seth, a suave and ruthless mogul, believed to be in the film industry, 6 on the List, and reported to have Level 6 strength. To blend in with the community, Daniel enrolls himself at Glendale High School, an all-new experience for him, where he falls for Sarah Wilson, a girl who likes him back and needs his help. Readers will demand more books about the wise-cracking, elephant-loving, hard-fighting, danger-luring gourmand Daniel as he dispatches the depraved aliens on the List. The graphic novel, Daniel X: Alien Hunter, where he takes on 7, will be out in December, , and another novel soon after. Your kids will be on guard for aliens with every grownup they meet. A group of motor oil-guzzling aliens has been videotaping footage for an intergalactic reality show production. Who is the leader of these murderous henchbeasts? Number 5 calls his new concept of alien programming entertainment, which he then syndicates to networks across the cosmos. Daniel has discerned the stench of Number 5 inside and prepares for battle. Unfortunately, the baddies have just cleared out, leaving behind a trashed restaurant and an unconscious young waitress, whom Daniel revives. Her nametag reads Judy Blue Eyes, and Daniel takes quite a shine to her. He puts himself on superspeed and has the place cleaned up in seconds. All over Holliswood, things are weird. Daniel looks on, mystified, as one pregnant woman at the local S-Mart fills her minivan with cases of motor oil and fish food. Other pregnant women converge on the store, desperate for more of those two odd items. Inside, broadcasting from a video screen, is the scowling fish head of Number 5 himself. Hearing a commotion coming from aisle five, Daniel rushes over to find a makeshift film set staffed with 10 henchbeasts who start to melt terrorized shoppers with their weapons. The whole town seems to have been cut off from the rest of the world and its residents brainwashed. As an alien himself, Daniel has quite a list of talents and super powers. Still, Number 5 seems to be far more powerful than Daniel. Number 5 has hacked into all the electronic devices in town and is able to track and watch Daniel right through his TV screen and laptop. If you love this book, then try: Virus on Orbis 1. And others in the Maximum Ride series. The Dangerous Days of Daniel X was a quick romp of playful imagination. I always enjoy following Patterson's creative mind. I got his Maximum Ride series for my grandson - but was soon hooked on the outcome of his very colorful and endearing characters.

Why should you read it? Like the fast-breeding creeps with burnt-looking metallic faces and deer horns bristling above hornet noses and stingers, who populate the American Midwest and parts of Europe. Or some very nasty sluglike thingies with jowls like water balloons about to burst all over much of Japan and China, as well as New York City and Vancouver. Plus a host of human-skeletonish freaks with tentacle hair and green multifaceted fly eyes; some white chocolate-colored cretins that look like giant human babies, only with glowing television fuzz for their eyes and mouths; and a praying mantis-looking race with shrunken heads, long red dreadlocks, and a pathetic need to destroy, operating in the general area of Texas, Kansas, and Oklahoma. Maybe I should stop talking, though, before I get too far ahead of myself. Now, the rest of you, I need you to do three important things. Take a deep, deep breath. Disregard everything anyone has ever told you about life on Earth. I was taking an ordinary can of Play-Doh down from the playroom shelf when my mom called from the top of the basement stairs. Dinner will be ready in five minutes. Time to start wrapping things up, honey. I made a face. I would expect nothing less. I stared at the museum-quality replica of the Lighthouse of Alexandria I was trying to finish. I squinted suddenly as I spotted what looked like a tiny, flat black seed climbing up the side of my miniature lighthouse, and really moving too. Whoa there, little guy! It was an Arthropoda Arachnida Acari Metastigmata, I thought, recalling the phylum, class, order, and suborder of the tiny creature at a glance. A young male dog tick, to be exact. Two very odd and unforgettable things. There was a strange shimmering at the back of my bright, turquoise-blue eyes. Well, technically I was the one making it crawl, and tell jokes. Yes, you heard that correctly. I was causing the tick to do tricks and also talk. Good story, but not for right now. Something earth-shattering was about to happen at our house. Anyway, I had the little fellow give a wave before it flipped forward and did a one-clawed handstand on the top of the lighthouse. And at that exact, unforgettable instant, I suddenly flew back off the bench as a wall-shaking explosion detonated in the room above my head. Was it a freight train? A sick feeling ripped through my stomach. Where was my mom? I know you have The List. And I want it! I have it nearby. In this pathetic little hovel in Kansas, of all places? Shooting, I thought, my eyes clenched shut, my hands flying to my ears. I thought, tears flooding down my cheeks. I whispered, and reached up and clicked off the basement light. I prepared to be eaten, or maybe worse. And then I saw it - a six-and-a-half-foot-tall praying mantis. At least it had taken that terrible form tonight. What a foul beast! It had long, stringy red dreadlocks hanging down between its antennae, and a dull black metal assault rifle cradled in its sharply jointed arms. If you come to me now, I may go easy on you. But I do hereby promise, cross my heart and hope to live forever, if you continue to make me play this silly game of hide-and-seek, you are going to learn the meaning of the word punishment. The Prayer smiled eerily then, flashing jagged yellow, broken-bottle-shard teeth. It covered fifteen feet of room with a single hop. Maybe you know where The List is. Of course, I thought. I had a plan, a shred of hope that could salvage my life. The Prayer swung its evil-looking head around the side of the water heater. And found absolutely nothing! I smelled you there a second ago! I looked crosseyed at my new beaklike hypostome as I scurried away on my eight new clawed legs. The answer to my immediate problem had been straightforward: Do you follow what had just happened? The full significance of it? Now I was the tick. I had transformed myself. Then a jet of jellylike blue flame shot from his mouth. The basement walls, carpet, and ceiling caught fire in the blink of my eyes. I flame-broil my meat. I reached up tentatively with one of my claws. Some good news at last. My claw stuck to the concrete like superglue. I locked my hypostome down tight like a seat belt on a strand of his hair just as the homicidal Prayer jumped effortlessly to the top of the burning basement stairs again. There I got a horrific, never-to-be-forgotten look at my parents on the kitchen floor. I knew there was nothing I could do for them. I knew it in my heart and soul. Then The Prayer smashed through the kitchen window and burst into the night. I was a three-year-old boy again. No longer a tick. I stood and turned back, and stared in disbelief and terror that could find no voice at that awful moment. Already our house was a blazing shell of its former self. There was the sound of glass shattering as the upstairs window to my bedroom blew out with the heat. Then, for a long time, there was the roar of the flames, and my soft, little-boy cries as I stood alone in the world for the first time, orphaned and homeless. I recalled a song my mom used to sing to me: Star light, star bright. First star I see tonight. She and my dad loved the skies and the stars. And I remember thinking, very clearly, as if I had suddenly grown up on that horrifying, unforgettable night: I know where The List is – my father has taken me to see it many times. Maybe for just this reason. And I know what it is: And I know who I am: Daniel, son of Graff, son of Terfdron – the Alien Hunter. No last name, just Daniel X. I have to tell you one more thing about that night. I must get it out. I have done hand-to-antennae combat with an entire civilization of insects in Mexico City, Cuernavaca, and Acapulco. And wait – it gets worse. I will not tell you how I got out of that one. But this particular creature, currently right in my face, was really, really testing my limits, and my patience. I had caught up with it in Portland, Oregon, after a month-long search through Canada and the Pacific Northwest, with a near-miss capture attempt in Seattle. More to the point, it was at the moment blocking my escape out of a disgusting sewage pipe underneath the fair city of Portland, somewhere, I believe, between the Rose Garden Arena and PGE Park. I despised this kidnapper of the elderly and their pets, dog liver is a delicacy on its hideous home planet. I can best describe this alien freak as part man, part jellyfish, part chain saw. Rather than a simple yes or no, Orkng changed itself into a kind of squid with a human face featuring a mouth with hundreds of teeth. The entire changing process took about five seconds. Could be something to work with here.
