Edit Peril and strife strike on a double front for Honor Harrington and company. After a brutal attack on the Manticoran home system, Honor Harrington and the Star Kingdom she serves battle back against a new, technologically powerful, and utterly nefarious enemy. Behind that plan lies the shadowy organization known as the Mesan Alignment. Task number one for Honor is to defend against another devastating Mesan strike—a strike that may well spell the doom of the Star Kingdom in one fell blow. Yet this is an act that the ancient and corrupt Earth-based Solarian League inevitably will take as a declaration of war. The thunder of battle rolls as the Solarian League directs its massive power against the Star Kingdom. And once again, Honor Harrington is thrust into a desperate battle that she must win if she is to survive to take the fight to the real enemy of galactic freedom—the insidious puppetmasters of war who lurk behind the Mesan Alignment! In the meantime, Captain Anton Zilwicky and Agent Victor Cachat arrive in the Haven System and present their evidence of Mesan involvement in the assassinations that triggered the resumption of hostilities between Haven and Manticore to President Eloise Pritchard. A Mesan defector, Dr. Hearing about this visit and the intelligence Zilwicky and Cachat brought with them, the Beowulf government arrives to join the new "Grand Alliance". Shortly afterwards, Protector Benjamin IX arrives from Grayson to participate in the peace talks and to represent the other members of the Manticoran Alliance. Hamish Alexander makes the point that they need to create a situation that is an "unambiguous, undeniable, decisive defeat" for the Solarian League Navy, while Honor adds that the Sollys must be made to understand that a confrontation with Manticore is war and "that wars have consequences". At the Wormhole Junction, a Solarian journalist dispatch boat is allowed transit, despite the fact that Manticore knows it is really under the control of the Solarian Navy and meant to signal the Solly forces in the Sigma Draconis System that Filareta has arrived. Honor then contacts Filareta and attempts to dissuade him from continuing on his mission. The Solarian fleet crosses the hyper limit, and Honor springs her trap: Filareta realizes that his position is hopeless and orders surrender, but to his shock, his operations officer suddenly launches all the 51 missiles from their pods and then enters a code that detonates a bomb, placed there by Mesa for this case, killing Filareta and his entire flag bridge crew. Harrington promptly opens fire in response to the attack. After a heated exchange between Truman and Tsang, in which Truman drives home her contempt for the SLN, Tsang backs off and leaves the system. Honor blames herself for all losses of the battle, believing she pushed Filareta too far. Their efforts are somewhat successful and the Manticoran embassy and the Beowulf Assembly Delegation Office are besieged by angry mobs who protest their actions. But before his meeting with them, he suddenly commits suicide, yet another victim of Mesan nanotech. He relays his suspicions that the Manticorans are right in their claims that the League is being manipulated by someone from the outside intent upon its destruction. He manages to convince Colonel Okiku, a criminal investigator, to start looking into such outside influence. Ultimately, Kingsford presents Kolokoltsov with their only options: They also maneuver to have the Beowulfan government investigated for treason as a motion to that effect is carried within the League Assembly with over three-quarters majority. The maneuver backfires badly however, when the Beowulf delegation declares that they would hold a system-wide plebiscite on the question of seceding from the League. As Beowulf prepares for the plebiscite vote, Manticore is prevented from stationing warship in Beowulf to avoid any appearance of coercion. As with the previous books, the first part of A Rising Thunder overlaps with the last part of the previous issue Mission of Honor in this case.
