United States military presence in other countries As of 31 December , U. Armed Forces troops were stationed in countries; the number of non-contingent deployments per country ranges from 1 in Suriname to over 50, in Germany. These numbers change frequently due to the regular recall and deployment of units. Domestic[edit] Including U. There were an additional 37, in Hawaii and 20, in Alaska while 84, were at sea, 2, in Guam and in Puerto Rico. Types of personnel[edit] Service members of the U. Armed Forces at an American football event: Marine Corps , U. Air Force , U. Army personnel Prospective service members are often recruited from high school or college, the target age ranges being 18â€™35 in the Army, 18â€™28 in the Marine Corps, 18â€™34 in the Navy, 18â€™39 in the Air Force and 18â€™27 up to age 32 if qualified for attending guaranteed "A" school in the Coast Guard. Each branch conducts basic training differently. The Navy sends its recruits to Recruit Training and then to "A" schools to earn a rating. Initially, recruits without higher education or college degrees will hold the pay grade of E-1 and will be elevated to E-2 usually soon after basic training. Different services have different incentive programs for enlistees, such as higher initial ranks for college credit, being an Eagle Scout and referring friends who go on to enlist as well. Participation in DEP is one way recruits can achieve rank before their departure to basic training. There are several different authorized pay grade advancement requirements in each junior-enlisted rank category E-1 to E-3 , which differ by service. Enlistees in the Army can attain the initial pay grade of E-4 specialist with a four-year degree, but the highest initial pay grade is usually E-3 members of the Army Band program can expect to enter service at the grade of E Promotion can be denied with reason. Non-commissioned and petty officers[edit] With very few exceptions, becoming a non-commissioned officer NCO or petty officer in the U. Armed Forces is accomplished by progression through the lower enlisted ranks. However, unlike promotion through the lower enlisted tier, promotion to NCO is generally competitive. NCO ranks begin at E-4 or E-5, depending upon service and are generally attained between three and six years of service. Junior NCOs function as first-line supervisors and squad leaders, training the junior enlisted in their duties and guiding their career advancement. While considered part of the non-commissioned officer corps by law, senior non-commissioned officers SNCOs referred to as chief petty officers in the Navy and Coast Guard, or staff non-commissioned officers in the Marine Corps, perform duties more focused on leadership rather than technical expertise. Personnel totals at the pay grades of E-8 and E-9 are limited by federal law to 2. SNCOs act as leaders of small units and as staff. Some SNCOs manage programs at headquarters level and a select few wield responsibility at the highest levels of the military structure. Most unit commanders have a SNCO as an enlisted advisor. All SNCOs are expected to mentor junior commissioned officers as well as the enlisted in their duty sections. Senior Enlisted Advisors[edit] Each of the five services employs a single Senior Enlisted Advisor at departmental level. This individual is the highest ranking enlisted member within that respective service and functions as the chief advisor to the service secretary, service chief and Congress on matters concerning the enlisted force. These individuals carry responsibilities and protocol requirements equivalent to three-star general or flag officers. They are as follows:

During the 1970s, the Department of Defense continued to scrutinize the reserve forces and to question the number of divisions and brigades as well as the redundancy of maintaining two reserve components, the Army National Guard and the Army Reserve. The loss of the divisions did not sit well with the states. Their objections included the inadequate maneuver element mix for those that remained and the end to the practice of rotating divisional commands among the states that supported them. Under the proposal, the remaining division commanders were to reside in the state of the division base. However, no reduction in total Army National Guard strength was to take place, which convinced the governors to accept the plan. The states reorganized their forces accordingly between 1 December and 1 May.
