Welcome to Oklahoma on Route 66. This is a small one. Sign south of Miami. Oklahoma Humor on 66. Still in use today. This section is still in pretty good shape. Coming into Afton on 66, Afton Station is on the left. This was my first time inside as it has always been closed when I came through. We had corresponded on the Yahoo eGroup anyone for a discussion about traffic circles? Interestingly, this was just the first of numerous run-ins on 66. Michelle is signing the guest book while proprietor Laurel Kane watches. Quite the collection of finely restored vehicles. It looks like any evidence of the wayside has been removed as I could no longer see the BBQ pits that were there back in the 60s. VR Panorama of an old old 66 bridge in Chelsea. It is still being used as a back way out of a trailer park newer 66 can be seen just beyond the bridge. If you can, I recommend it highly for a stay. He went through all the local 66 sights he told me about the bridge and had handouts for everything 66 between Afton and Tulsa. He even has a buffalo out back. While it is located a ways off of 66, it is an interesting stop. I had read about this park in the 66 literature but never made the trip here. It really needs to be seen to be believed. The grounds also have other artifacts that were collected. The park also has a picnic area in this shot I am standing on one of the tables and a hiking trail. This visit the sun was shining. Galloway was certainly a prolific artist. Claremore water tower on west side of 66. The building is a work of art all in itself. The area around the lake has been cleaned up. Maybe it will open soon. The Blue Whale is Open now. The table legs and stools are all in different shapes and animals. This one is a real fixer-upper. It looks like there is a sun-deck up on top. It appears to originally to have been a diving platform. The port-holes are in a second story reachable from an inside ladder. There was a corporate picnic going on. VR Panorama of the Blue Whale and the picnic area. If you look carefully, numerous fish can be seen schooling around the shallows beside it. The main body has a second floor with portholes. The tables and chairs are all original and made from cast concrete. It still has brick pavement. This piece of old old 66 is a nice drive as it continues through a forested area. Rock Cafe in Stroud. This part of OK abounds in bypassed alignments to explore. VR Panorama of downtown Depew. The town has been doing a lot to spiff up their mainstreet. City 66 meets up with thru 66 near an old gas station now a BBQ restaurant. When I went through it had been restored and used as an antique shop. I read recently that it had been sold and is going to be converted into a motorcycle museum and gift shop. Sign at the restored Round Barn in Arcadia. Open for tours and has a gift shop too. Looks like new shingles and a paint job. On the Lake Overholser Bridge. The new highway bridge is on the right. This shot is from the top of a low hill in direct line with the bridge. It looks like the area is big for bonfires, drinking, and dirt-biking. The bridge support towers are on the left side. This is a storm drain. It looks like it feeds into a holding tank. An old rest stop long 66. Not much activity, just one lone beer drinker. This wayside is still being maintained. Known as the Mother of the Mother Road in Oklahoma. Some antique gas pumps have been added. VR Panorama west of Weatherford. This hilltop is being used to set-up numerous windmills to generate power. Clinton Route 66 Banner. Would have been better if all the neon was working. A photo-op at the gift shop. Take the walking tour with tape narration through the exhibits. It has been replaced by a movie theater showing Route 66 videos. VR Panorama west of Clinton in the early morning. Not much to interrupt the terrain here. A shot of a real 66 road warrior. We were travelling 66 together for a while. They have assembled quite a complex. In this area, 66 is cut numerous times by the interstate so it necessitates flipping from one frontage road to the other to stay on mostly 66 pavement. Even though there is a lot of overgrowth, it is still drivable. Going under the trees up ahead were like driving through a tunnel. VR Panorama of closed westbound 4-lane 66. This part is wide open and easily drivable. There is easy access from the eastbound lanes that are still open. West of Erick on the way to Texola, 66 is a nice 4-lane drive through the countryside. I thought Texas did everything big???

When a new judge arrives, Pap gains custody of his son and moves to a cabin on the other side of the river. When they find a raft, they decide to go to a free state. After a storm, a house is floating down the river and they enter it and grab what they can. Huck returns to the island and together with Jim he flees downriver. After some time on the river, they are separated by a passing steaming boat and Huck meets the Grangerfords, a rich family. He befriends with Buck Grangerford who is about his age. The Grangerfords are in a year feud against the Shepherdsons, another rich family along the Mississippi. When a conflict breaks out, all Grangerford males are killed. Huck can escape and reunites with Jim. Together they float further downriver. Later, they rescue two con men who join the boys on their journey. They pull several scams along the river. Later, the elder one sells Jim. Huck finds out that Jim is now owned by the Phelps. When the real Tom arrives, he plays along. Jim is held in a shed and Tom has a risky escape plan. As they carry out their plan, Tom is shot in the leg. While Huck gets help, Jim remains with Tom. When they return to the farm, Jim is recaptured while Tom is unconscious. When Tom awakes, he reveals that Jim had been free for weeks after his owner died two months ago. He did not tell Huck because he wanted a risky plan to rescue Jim. Moreover, Jim tells that Pap was the dead man on the floating house. Finally, Huck decides to go West. Controversy[change change source] Adventures of Huckleberry Finn received often good reviews, but the novel was controversial from the beginning.

Hungry rafters chow down on a generous lunch spread prepared by the rafting guides. At one spot on the Chattooga, participants have the chance to jump across a water chute to explore an area of the river known to have small chunks of garnet. A quarter mile of forest up both banks of the waterway is protected from development. In some sections of the Chattooga, the river is so deep, rafters can jump off a rock face into the water. Of all the rivers in all the towns in all the land, few have the distinction of being designated a National Wild and Scenic River. These lower 31 miles of river are touted among the best whitewater anywhere. This seven-mile stretch of river begins with easy Class 2 rapids. Directed by an experienced guide, issuing orders from the rear of the boat, we traversed these fun whitewater ripples with hardly a worry. The torrent of water flowing from the left sends rafts up against the rock, resulting in the namesake boot to the backside of the boat. To add to the adventure, we spun our way through the fall. As the river gathered momentum, plunging over ledges, around boulders and through steep gorges, the ride turned from mild to wild. We all breathed a sigh of relief as we successfully navigated through the foot double drop without losing any of our five-man crew. Ready for a break, we beached the boat just above Surfing Rapid for a different kind of whitewater experience. With directions from one of the trip guides, we slid down a rock to be swept up by a gush of water into an eddy. Some of us enjoyed the dunking so much, we ran the chute twice. The next morning we hit the water early to take on Section IV. This white-knuckle ride is chocked full of class 4 and 5 rapids. Before each rapid we stopped for detailed instructions on how to best run the chutes to minimize our chances of dumping. As a safety precaution, guides stood watch below the falls ready to throw a rope should any of us find ourselves in the water. Fortunately, or maybe unfortunately, we made it through without mishap despite a wall of water crashing into our boat. I think some of our fellow rafters were relishing the thrill of the spill. It just added to the excitement of rafting this real life rollercoaster. Rafting the Chattooga River Wildwater Rafting offers several guided trips on the Chattooga, one of the few remaining free-flowing rivers in the Southeast. Safety equipment, including helmets, paddling jackets and personal flotation devices PFDs , are provided. No previous whitewater experience is needed. Minimum age is 8 years old. Section IV This trip covers the steepest section of river currently being run by commercial outfitters in the Southeast. It is suggested for those in good physical health with previous whitewater experience. Minimum age is 12 years old. For more information, visit www.

Both novels are set in the town of St. Petersburg, Missouri, which lies on the banks of the Mississippi River. As a result of his adventure, Huck gained quite a bit of money, which the bank held for him in trust. Huck was adopted by the Widow Douglas, a kind but stifling woman who lives with her sister, the self-righteous Miss Watson. As Huckleberry Finn opens, Huck is none too thrilled with his new life of cleanliness, manners, church, and school. This effort fails miserably, and Pap soon returns to his old ways. Finally, outraged when the Widow Douglas warns him to stay away from her house, Pap kidnaps Huck and holds him in a cabin across the river from St. Whenever Pap goes out, he locks Huck in the cabin, and when he returns home drunk, he beats the boy. Tired of his confinement and fearing the beatings will worsen, Huck escapes from Pap by faking his own death, killing a pig and spreading its blood all over the cabin. Jim has run away from Miss Watson after hearing her talk about selling him to a plantation down the river, where he would be treated horribly and separated from his wife and children. While they camp out on the island, a great storm causes the Mississippi to flood. Huck and Jim spy a log raft and a house floating past the island. They capture the raft and loot the house, finding in it the body of a man who has been shot. Although the island is blissful, Huck and Jim are forced to leave after Huck learns from a woman onshore that her husband has seen smoke coming from the island and believes that Jim is hiding out there. Huck and Jim start downriver on the raft, intending to leave it at the mouth of the Ohio River and proceed up that river by steamboat to the free states, where slavery is prohibited. Louis, and they have a close encounter with a gang of robbers on a wrecked steamboat. During a night of thick fog, Huck and Jim miss the mouth of the Ohio and encounter a group of men looking for escaped slaves. Terrified of the disease, the men give Huck money and hurry away. Unable to backtrack to the mouth of the Ohio, Huck and Jim continue downriver. The next night, a steamboat slams into their raft, and Huck and Jim are separated. Huck ends up in the home of the kindly Grangerfords, a family of Southern aristocrats locked in a bitter and silly feud with a neighboring clan, the Shepherdsons. The elopement of a Grangerford daughter with a Shepherdson son leads to a gun battle in which many in the families are killed. While Huck is caught up in the feud, Jim shows up with the repaired raft. A few days later, Huck and Jim rescue a pair of men who are being pursued by armed bandits. The men, clearly con artists, claim to be a displaced English duke the duke and the long-lost heir to the French throne the dauphin. Coming into one town, they hear the story of a man, Peter Wilks, who has recently died and left much of his inheritance to his two brothers, who should be arriving from England any day. A few townspeople become skeptical, and Huck, who grows to admire the Wilks sisters, decides to thwart the scam. Huck then reveals all to the eldest Wilks sister, Mary Jane. The angry townspeople hold both sets of Wilks claimants, and the duke and the dauphin just barely escape in the ensuing confusion. Fortunately for the sisters, the gold is found. Unfortunately for Huck and Jim, the duke and the dauphin make it back to the raft just as Huck and Jim are pushing off. After a few more small scams, the duke and dauphin commit their worst crime yet: Huck finds out where Jim is being held and resolves to free him. The Phelpses mistake Huck for Tom, who is due to arrive for a visit, and Huck goes along with their mistake. He intercepts Tom between the Phelps house and the steamboat dock, and Tom pretends to be his own younger brother, Sid. Tom hatches a wild plan to free Jim, adding all sorts of unnecessary obstacles even though Jim is only lightly secured. Jim is freed, but a pursuer shoots Tom in the leg. Huck is forced to get a doctor, and Jim sacrifices his freedom to nurse Tom. When Tom wakes the next morning, he reveals that Jim has actually been a free man all along, as Miss Watson, who made a provision in her will to free Jim, died two months earlier. Tom had planned the entire escape idea all as a game and had intended to pay Jim for his troubles.
