Copied and Edited by A. Quisenberry When the first census of the United State was taken, in , Kentucky was still a part of Virginia, and what is now Clark County was then embraced in Fayette County, The census of Kentucky was taken in , as a part of Virginia, but the returns of that census of Virginia are no longer in existence, having been lost from the records of the census office in Washington at some time in the past. The same is true of the returns of the census of , so far as the State of Kentucky is concerned. Therefore, the first census returns of any Kentucky county still preserved by the census office are those of the census of The following census of the population of Clark County, Kentucky, was copied by me from the original returns on the census office in May, , just years after the census was taken. It appears that the whole of Clark County was taken by one man, Daniel B. Price, who, unless he was under twenty-one years of age, was apparently not a citizen of the county, since his name does not appear in the enumeration. So far as the white people of the county are concerned, they were enumerated in four classes, according to their ages; under ten years; between ten and sixteen years; between sixteen and twenty-six years; between twenty-six and forty-five years; and forty-five years and over. In making a copy of the census returns for Clark County I did not follow these divisions, but simply gave the total number of white persons in each family. The slaves are not given in the returns in groups of ages, but simply in a lump sum, so many slaves owned by each head of a family that owned any at all. It is curious to note how comparatively few in number the slaves in Clark County were at that early date. The total population of the county was 11,, of whom 2, were slaves, and 23 were free persons of color. The total number of heads of families in the county, including the town of Winchester, was 1,, of whom 59 per cent owned no slaves at all; and of those who owned slaves a great majority had only one, or two, or three. In the town of Winchester: In the town of Winchester there were forty-eight heads of families, all but nine of whom owned slaves. His figures add up whites, colored, total It is interesting to note what a great number of families who were in the county in , more than a century ago, are still represented there. On the other hand, many names more or less numerously represented in the county in the census of have no representatives at all in the county now. The following are only a few of the names that have disappeared from the county during a century, to-wit: Noble, Orear, Petroe, Philbert, Pickett. John Baker, late of Winchester, Va. James Clark, enumerated in the town of Winchester, was Governor of Kentucky, , dying in office. He also served several terms in Congress. This house is still standing, and used to be known as "the Trowbridge place. Hanson, of the Confederate army, and of Colonel Charles S. Hanson, of the Union army, in the Civil War. Richard Hickman was Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky, , and was acting Governor of the State during the absence of Governor Isaac Shelby in command of Kentucky troops in the Thames campaign, in Lieutenant General John B. Hood, a distinguished Confederate General, was born in Clark County, and was the grandson of Lewis Hood, enumerated on this census roll. Daniel Orear, on this census roll, was the great-grandfather of Judge Edward C. He died in , and was buried in Clark County, near the Bourbon County line, in a family graveyard adjacent to the turnpike road leading from Winchester to Paris. In , by authority of an act of the legislature, his remains were disinterred and carried to Frankfort, where they were reinterred in the State cemetery with distinguished honors. William Vaughn Vaughan , enumerated in the town of Winchester, was a tailor there in In his autobiography he says that in August, just about the time this census was taken , he was converted from infidelity by a sermon he heard preached "at the old log Baptist meeting house called Rocky Spring, about three miles from Winchester. He adds that this sermon was preached by Rev. James Quisenberry great grandfather of this writer from the text: One of the great-granddaughters of Francis Rush, of this roll, married John H. It is a well known fact that about nine-tenths of the early settlers of Clark County were from Virginia. The State of Virginia has recently caused to be printed two volumes of names of Virginians who served in the Revolutionary War, as proven by records still in existence; and, with the exception of a few pensioners from other states, the names of every one of the heads of families in Clark County in marked with an asterisk in the following list, has been found by me in those two volumes of Virginia Revolutionary War soldiers. In the War of , which began two years after this census was taken, Clark County furnished more than nine hundred volunteers. The copy of the census list now follows:

Jack Lake Revare has recently completed a genealogical project on several surnames in his ancestry. It was published by Gateway. The book covers some surnames that have not been published before and will include some new and innovative research. The book has maps, graphics and pictures to enhance the presentation. It consists of eleven chapters covering the following surnames: Most of the material has never been published before. Information on these families has never been printed before. This chapter covers the descendants of Daniel Lake of Buncombe Co. This chapter consists of the first published work of the descendants of John Eales of Virginia. Eales and his brother did extensive domestic research on this family. If your Eales ancestor came to America before , chances are your line is in the book. Eales lines are traced to several states including Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri and Kansas. This chapter includes new research and theories from research done over the years by Dr. It traces the ancestors of Capt. Peter Watts, a veteran of the Revolutionary War and the War of Some of the states covered are Missouri and Kansas. Since the book was published, updated research links Daniel Farrell to ancestors in Maryland. It discusses the founding of Tiltonsville, Ohio. This chapter covers the Northcutt family from Virginia to Kentucky to Missouri and beyond. The chapter specializes in Missouri Northcutt descendants The book is approximately pages with an excellent name and place index. An insert is enclosed updating and correcting data. My one year review! The result has exceeded my expectations. My hair looks great. Very professional, the staff is great and everyone is very welcoming. Do not go anywhere else! Phenomenal experience, highly recommend! Oct 31, 2: I started loosing my hair about 5 years ago and I had to do something about it. FUE was the method that I thought would be the best so called scarless. To be fair the doctor I picked did as good job as FUE could offer but the method does not give you enough hair, one year later I have had another FUE procedure My discussion with Dr. Brett Bolton was both friendly and informative and through my research and experience believe him to be the best in his field. His staff was also very professional and friendly and I would highly recommend him to anyone considering a hair transplant! Apr 23, 6: Expectations were well communicated. Premeeting was truly consultative. All my questions were answered. From there they were a class act. I give them five stars. Apr 21, 1: Brett Bolton was awesome! It was such a difference, just wish I had gone to him the first time around. Brett Bolton is the Ross Hughes I visited dr. Bolton like many about my concerns about my thinning hair. I visited other hair restoration, but felt the most comfortable with Dr. Brett Bolton, Josh and his professional staff. I had surgery in August of Best decision I ever I had researched hair transplants for years, and even had consultations with local hair doctors in my area. The staff was very knowledgeable and Dr Bolton was extremely professional in his work. Mike the hair consultant was amazing and the results I have with my hair exceeded all my expectations You guys are champions!!!!!! Matthew G From the moment I walked into Dr. Meeting with Josh and Dr. Brett Bolton for the first time only reinforced this feeling. They both gave me their undivided attention and answered all my questions. I was at a low point in my life as far as self-confidence due to my hair loss which had seemingly sped up Hello all - I have never had any kind of elective surgery, I was excited and full of questions. Bolton answered all of my questions and concerns about the procedure. I feel confident that he is the best of the best! The only hair transplant I was referred in by a friend! We both had a terrible experience with another hair transplant doctor. My friend had the procedure with Dr. Bolton first and had amazing results! I followed after and had my consultation with Josh he explained hair loss, my expectations and what I could expect during and after my procedure. Brett Bolton was a great Brett Bolton Luis G. Its amazing how many years my hairline being corrected has taken off of my appearance. I had my first procedure with Dr. His passion for hair restoration is what distinguishes him exceptionally well from the others. He also delivers consistent work which is important. Besides the other fine qualities most importantly in my opinion Dr Brett Bolton overcame my birth defect and recession. It was a long process for me to fully decide on going forward with the procedure, I wanted to be sure I would be getting a natural result. I was proud to do the procedure and happy I went with Dr.
