In this post, I will share basic information about the plans, their cost, and recent updates that allow for much more flexibility. Keep in mind that the plans are certainly not for everyone on every trip, and while they seem complicated at first, are actually pretty easy to use once you get the hang of it! They can be purchased as part of a package that includes your room, park ticket, and dining, or included as part of a Free Dining Plan Package more on this later. The plan also must be purchased for every night of your stay and for everyone staying in your room. The credits shown are per night of your stay and each plan includes a Resort Refillable Mug. These credits are loaded on the Magic Bands read all about them here of everyone in your party. You can use the credits at any point during your stay, from the time you check-in until midnight on the day you check-out. The types of credits are: In years prior Quick service credits included a dessert. To make the plan more flexible, that dessert has been converted into a snack credit. This credit was made more flexible in by allowing guests to choose a salad or soup if available at the restaurant in place of a dessert. All Disney Dining Plan meals will include alcoholic drinks as well! With any quick service or table service meal, guests over 21 can select a single-serving mixed drink, wine, or beer as their beverage with the plan. You could choose a specialty drink such as a smoothie or milkshake as your beverage as well. You are of course always allowed to order anything else from the menu that is not included in the dining plan and pay for the items out-of-pocket. Resort Refillable Mug In addition to snack and meal credits, each dining plan includes a Resort Refillable Mug with unlimited free refills for the length of your stay. Dates for Free Dining are usually released in April for travel dates in the fall and winter. You can read everything you need to know about free dining in this post. If you are interested in booking a free dining package, I strongly suggest getting a quote from Destinations in Florida , my recommended Disney travel agency. Each year when the Dining Plan is released, restaurants are slowly added to the of those that accept the plan. Almost all dining establishments at Disney World now take the Dining Plan. French Bakery in Epcot If you are like most folks visiting Walt Disney World, you have a budget that you need to stick to for your vacation. Here is a comparison of what it would cost out-of-pocket vs.

4: Disney Dining Plan Everything You Need To Know - The Frugal South

Disney Dining Plans can be one of the most confusing parts about your Disney dining planning; hopefully this primer will help! Disney has set up dining plans for any budget and any dining taste. Plans are pre-purchased and added onto a Disney Vacation Package (i.e. you must be staying on a Vacation).

Grand Total for Breakfast: However, this approximation could rise or fall depending on four factors: Only you know your family. Book the room and tickets. You can add dining later. Why are these three lumped together? The Deluxe Disney Dining plan will include for each guest over the age of 2: This plan provides maximum flexibility in that respect. All of it will be covered by your dining plan. For all meals that require 2 table service entitlements on the regular Dining plan, you will need 2 meal entitlements on the Deluxe Dining Plan as well. Having said all that, this plan is almost never a good idea. Generally, I recommend it only to someone who falls into one of three particular groups: Prepayment of what can be some pretty pricey food at some establishments can be a very good thing here. It also allows you the freedom to order the most expensive thing on the menu, if you want it, and not have to worry about sticker shock when you get the bill. Die Hard, 3-meals-per-day guests: Guests planning on doing a lot of Table Service meals that are considered signature dining: This sort of goes hand-in-hand with the Foodies group. If you like to eat at the signature dining locations, this can be a really wonderful plan. You can plan on a sit down breakfast in the morning, a light lunch of something using a snack credit, and then a signature dinner. For anybody else, this plan is almost certain to be too much food, too much money, and require too much time. Get a no-obligation Disney Vacation Quote! A single serving alcoholic beverage includes items such as: Beer or Cider Wine or Sangria Mixed Drinks and Specialty Cocktails Most beer, wine, and mixed drink beverages are included, though some exceptions apply. Guests must be age 21 and over and present valid ID to be served their one 1 alcoholic beverage. Alcoholic beverages may only be redeemed with a quick-service or table-service meal entitlement. How much does it cost to upgrade to Disney Dining Plan? Depending on how you booked your package , you might be able to upgrade or downgrade your dining plan. As with any Disney planning, you should make any changes as soon as possible prior to your trip. Can you get the dining plan at the Swan and Dolphin Resort? The Swan and Dolphin Resort does not offer all the perks the official Disney resorts offer. Which resort rooms are excluded from FREE dining? Excludes the following room types and Disney Resort hotels: That way you can maximize your credits and learn how to use them in a way that best suits you your vacation. Book your dining reservations before arriving. Try to be more reasonable with the reservations you make. I say this because you will be at the park and things often change unexpectedly. You may end up not doing something on your agenda, and you will probably spend more time having counter and quick service rather than eating at an actual sit-down restaurant. Remember two table service credits may be used for one signature meal, dinner show, pizza delivery or room service meal at a Disney participating resort Combine credits. Great for special events. I say this because you can get a lot of the snacks without using as many credits. Work with an authorized Walt Disney World vacation planner. An official planner has the latest deals, tools, and resources directly from Disney. Do you love or hate the Disney Dining Plan? All of this information can be confusing and has caused great debates online questioning the need to purchase any one of the plans. There are people who love and who hate the Disney Dining Plan. Some believe the Disney Dining Plan requires you to eat an extreme amount of food. Others who have big appetites and who are big eaters love it and are able to fit all the meals into each vacation day. For the savings to work out, you really have to map out each meal and compare pricing. Another common reason guests might not like the dining plans is that they may leave more questions than answers. There is a dedicated website called the Disney Dining where they write multiple articles explaining this subject. The Disney Dining Plan is a pricey add-on to any solo theme park hopper or a family vacation. Things to Remember The dining plan is only available for guest staying at a Disney-owned and operated resort. Disney will not let you purchase one deluxe while the other guests in your party purchase a regular one. Everyone over the age of 9 must pay the adult rate regardless of how much they plan to eat. Guest on the Disney Dining Plan receive a number of credits based on how many nights they plan on staying. Your credits can be used through midnight on the day of check out. Simple snacks include pastries, ice cream bars, water bottles and soda. If you have a larger family coming, possibly buy groceries. This will allow you to have food in your room and with the option of doing one meal inside the parks. Check out the great articles below for more Disney Dining Tips!

Disney Dining Plan Details. Available only with vacation packages that include accommodations at a Disney-owned-and-operated hotel or with a Disney Vacation Club (DVC) reservation (including those booked using rented DVC points), the Disney Dining Plan is a convenient way to experience many of the unique Disney dining locations found across the Walt Disney World Resort.

I get asked that question all the time. Everyone wants to know the best way to pay for food at Walt Disney World. There are a lot of variables that go into choosing whether or not to have a dining plan, and which one to choose. Grab a bite on the go at The Lunching Pad in Tomorrowland. Photo by Laurie Sapp What is it? A few years ago, because of the popularity of all-inclusive resort vacations, Disney introduced the Disney Dining Plan. It was a way for guests to pre-pay for their meals at Disney World restaurants. A simple lunch at The Plaza Restaurant. It includes 2 Quick Service meal credits and 2 Snack credits per person per night of your stay plus a refillable mug for each guest. Quick Service restaurants are those restaurants where you order at a counter and serve yourself. The Quick Service Plan costs: Whatever you call it, here are the details. The Dining Plan includes 1 Table Service meal credit, 1 Quick Service meal credit, and 2 Snack credits per person per night of your stay. Also each guest gets a refillable mug. The Disney Dining Plan costs: Some table service restaurants require 2 credits see Signature dining below. It includes lots and lots of food. This one is pretty close to being all-inclusive. It includes 3 Table Service credits but you can use those at a Quick Service restaurant if you prefer and 2 snack credits per person per night plus the refillable mug. The Deluxe Dining Plan costs: How does the Deluxe Dining Plan work page Important things you need to know! See these links for the restaurants you can use Quick Service Credits at:

The Disney Food Blog Restaurant Search Tool lets you choose criteria from 18 different facets of Disney Dining, then recommends Disney World restaurants that will be perfect for your family! Disney World Restaurant Search Tool.

With that being said, we are inevitably bias towards a few of our favorites and truth be told we enjoy Disney buffets more than the average guest, but it tends to be what works for us. If you really think about it, most guests are buying the dining plan for one of two reasons of course there are a few exceptions: The first option is perhaps the most beneficial facet the Disney dining plan expertly brings to the table and quite possibly should be the selling point for of the plan altogether. I will say, more than anything else, the Disney Dining plan is outstandingly convenient. Disney sets up the payment for you and essentially you have a set number of what your vacation is going to cost before you ever leave home. Unless you plan on a focus of your vacation being dining, a vast majority of guests will not and likely can not physically eat and enjoy all that is provided on the regular dining plan. A shocking amount of guests have told me over the years that they thought the dining plan was going to save them money. If you really break it down and order all high priced menu items, use every single snack credit you are provided, and really go all out on the dining plan, the numbers typically come out to within a few pennies of what you would have spent out of pocket if bought the exact same thing.

Table Service Disney Dining Plan Offerings Table service is typically the place where you can really make the most of your dining plan offerings. For many, this is where the plan shines. While those are outstanding meals, the fact that the offerings essentially replace another table service meal has and always will be hard for me to rationalize. The Crystal Palace Crystal Palace is and likely always will be a top pick for my family. For us, it is the perfect array of options. If you schedule it late enough in the day, you might catch a few bites of the lunch buffet offerings, and if you schedule it at just the right time you can accomplish a ton of attractions from the time Magic Kingdom opens to the time you arrive at your meal just as the crowds start to build. If you wait just a touch later in the day, Crystal Palace offers a great buffet lunch that is great for families with kids. Just be aware, if you are paying out of pocket, dinner here is far more expensive than lunch and is a very comparable menu. The offering is fairly pricey out of pocket but on the dining plan you walk in and order whatever you want and it all in theory costs the same amount. A few words of warning on this one. If you are your kids do not like to be around strangers, this may not be your best option. Every once in a while groups will get paired with other families to fill the spots surrounding the hibachi grill. Additionally, if your kids are sacred of fire or do not like loud-ish noises, I cannot recommend this meal. Other than those two things, I highly recommend this offering. The food is excellent the display is entertaining and the cast is top notch as well.

Tusker House Tusker House makes my list for two main reasons. One, it is likely the ideal and perhaps only true family centered Disney branded offering in Animal Kingdom for table service. There are other meals in the park, but none that really offer the ideal situation for families that this restaurant provides. The character interaction is great, the food is a good variation of creative African inspired offerings and slightly more typical and recognizable buffet items than other options in the park. I always recommend heading to the resorts to new and returning guests. It sounds so incredibly strange in writing but head to a resort and spend a few hours exploring the grounds and you may be shocked at how much you enjoy just being there. Exploring resorts is one of the most relaxing elements of any Disney trip for me, and has a way of opening up your mind and allowing you to let the worries of the world fade away as your kids play on a playground, play ping pong by the pool, or even ride a boat over to a neighboring resort. The meal offerings are nachos, tacos, empanadas and other typical Mexican food, but everything is largely sharable and a great way to get a taste of the Mexico pavilion before continuing on your way around the showcase. 8: Walt Disney World Packages

In summary, the Disney Dining Plan is just one way to experience the amazing dining options at Walt Disney World. And if you're able to get it for free (read my post about the popular free dining offer), it is an especially inexpensive way to try out different restaurants.

Each time anyone uses a credit, their receipt will list the remaining credits for the entire group. Quick Service Dining Plan: The big exceptions are buffets and all-you-can-eat restaurants: You can use your meal credits whenever you want during your Disney World vacation. Not all locations have all of those options, and some might not have anything to substitute. You cannot, however, go the other way. Quick service credits are not worth anything at table service locations. No gratuities are necessary at Quick Service dining locations. The list of participating restaurants changes occasionally. Note that when packages are first put on sale for the following year, contracts may not be in place with all of the non-Disney-owned restaurants yet. Some special menus i. Any leftover snack or quick service meal credits can be used to pack a lunch for the trip home. Leftover snack credits can be exchanged for small packaged snacks at lots of locations, including quick service restaurants, candy shops, souvenir shops. If something looks like it could be a snack, ask if you can buy it with a snack credit. For example, Mickey-shaped rice krispy treats are often available at hotel souvenir shops. Dining plan credits can be used to pay for other people who are not on a dining plan. For example, if a friend visits you one night and you all go to dinner you can use one of your credits to pay for their dinner. If you really only want to use dining plan credits for one meal a day, this can be a good way of stretching the plan to cover more people. On our last day we used all of our remaining snacks at the candy store on Main St in the Magic Kingdom. After eating all we could, we brought pounds of homemade fudge, candy apples, truffles, etc. The big exception here is character breakfasts, which tend to be pricey. Using deluxe credits for quick-service meals is always a terrible deal. There is no way we know of to come out financially ahead on that. If you have even one quick-service meal each day, the savings pretty much disappear. Two things to keep in mind: Often this will be accommodated. Ask to see the chef if your child has an allergy or dietary issue i. Disney is very good about accommodating this sort of issue. Choose buffet locations, where the selection is broader and your child can pick what he or she likes. And if one adult goes up to the register and orders for the whole family, they have no way to know who is eating which entree. If you want a change from the typical burgers and chicken strips, consider these locations: The usual burgers, fries and Mickey waffles are also available. Everything Pop at Pop Century Resort has a great selection, including flatbreads pizzas , grill items, Italian and Asian options. Pepper Market at Coronado Springs Resort has many more selections than the average quick service location. From the various stations you can get Mexican food, steaks, ribs, Caesar salad with shrimp, pasta, pizza, rotisserie chicken and more. Note that this restaurant is not operated by Disney and may not appear on the list of allowed restaurants currently, but based on previous years, once a contract is signed, it will be added. The soups are the same African-inspired ones served at Boma, the buffet restaurant at the Lodge. Contempo Cafe at Contemporary Resort has some nice options such as a spicy mahi sandwich, marinated beef flatbread and chicken basil pasta. That means you can order any combo or entree on the menu with a child credit. You can buy your adult meals and kids meals at two different locations, if that works logistically. Send one adult to buy the adult food and one adult and the kids to buy the kids food, then meet back at whichever place has more seating. If you are on the regular Disney Dining Plan, you may want to consider sharing quick service meals. For instance, a family of four might try ordering two adult quick service meals and sharing the food, possibly supplementing the meal by paying out of pocket for a few a la carte items like extra side orders or drinks. If this works for you, you may be able to stretch your quick service meals to cover two meals a day. Some of the best locations for this strategy: In addition, many small prepackaged food items like small boxes of cookies, pretzels, etc. In some cases, optional add-ons like sauces, toppings or syrups are included, and in other cases not. Snacks can be redeemed at quick service, theme park shop, resort shop or snack cart locations. Among the items usually available with Disney Dining Plan snack credits:

Disney Dining Plan Sit down and relax at waiter service restaurants, buffets and character dining plus still have the flexibility to grab a quick meal on the go. Available at + locations.

Pulled Pork French Fries! And that means an extra credit to spend elsewhere! Be Our Guest Restaurant, Magic Kingdom This popular quick service spot is known at least as much for its atmosphere as it is for its French-inspired menu. Breakfast or lunch in the West Wing? Dinner, which has always been a one-credit table service meal, is transforming into a two-credit Signature Meal on July 27, With these, you can even turn a snack credit of Nachos into a great entree! But unfortunately, the other beverage options are pretty standard. You gotta have one! The entree bowls here come with a base think rice, beans, potato hash, etc. Combination Bowl These bowls are substantial “ and many diners will be able to share, thus using only one Quick Service DDP credit rather than two. The Combination Bowl really makes this even more doable! Pandoran Sunrise Sunshine Seasons, Epcot Sunshine Seasons has earned its reputation for fresh and interesting counter service dining options. The non-alcoholic specialty drink offerings are good here! We love the Southern Burger with its creamy pimento cheese and the El Diablo with its surprising for Disney! But note that D-Luxe has changed its dining plan credit set up and now offers ONLY the burger and a drink for your dining plan credit. Fries will be an extra snack credit. And the burgers truly are top-notch unlike the majority of quick-service burgers in Disney World. But the fries being an extra snack credit is frustrating many Disney guests; so keep that one in mind. Incidentally, the Shawarma and Lamb Platter also comes with veggie sides, making it versatile for sharing between diners of all types! How often do we say that about a food court? The food here is inspired by the bayou, with the Jambalaya being a particular favorite!
