*Doonesbury Deluxe: Selected Glances Askance [G. B. Trudeau] on www.enganchecubano.com *FREE* shipping on qualifying offers. Takes a close-up look at America in the s, from Star Wars and Iranscam to Rick and Joanie struggling with parenthood and Mike and J.J. pioneering in New York City.*

Still as a battered helmet for the next 4 years? The same things which battered the helmet still batter the helmet, figuratively of course. Anyone have any idea which appeared first? Who can forget Duke as Governor of American Samoa? As Ambassador to China? As a hostage in Iran? Or as a zombie? I will make the move. In the list of "Other characters, and their inspirations," Doc Edgerton is listed. Ford quote The Gerald Ford quote "There are only three major vehicles to keep us informed as to what is going on in Washington: Does anyone have an original source for this quote, or any variation of it? Oh, and it IS Windows only, sorry Also someone could mention the Duke figure published with the first editions of the Action Figure! When characters first appeared, had major events, and last appearances? Michael Doonesbury first appearance: Mark Slackmeyer first appearance: If anyone wants to contribute, please do. Perhaps we can work it into a subpage of the Doonesbury page later on. Have a look at User: In part because I think it was the first time a comic strip not a single "editorial cartoon" was making big, and explicit, political statements Pogo worked by analogy. As an example, I remember that the famous cartoon showing the white house being "bricked up" the bricks as if covering the panel itself , and I think also the reverse, the bricks being taken down, appeared in my high school history textbook. I would suggest that the guilty guilty guilty strip be used: IMO the "first" cartoon is not very interesting except to fans: You can just type in the correct format for any date. Amazing to see how far Doonesbury came in just three years -- from rather lame satire to some heavy stuff. An argument for including two strips, I think -- the first, and that. I would probably only restore "the first" for the style section, if you can also find a recent strip that features Mike and B. But she was a major character through most of the s, as a roommate to Joanie Caucus, when both attended law school in California. This sentence starts out the criticism section, followed by an unsupported claim about blasphemy without any time-related context, followed by two events which have occurred less than three years ago. This hardly constitutes, to me, a life-long attempt to censor Doonesbury. And the criticism has followed Doonesbury nearly non-stop over its thirty-five year history. The results of the poll are not recorded. The Adirondack Daily Enterprise delayed printing of three Doonesbury Strips in July where the fictional Congressman Ventura took a lady applying for a staff position out to a motel and The Billings Gazette, Billings, MT, also had a reader poll at the end of , with a decision announced in The Minneapolis Star had African-American men picketing their offices in December after the "60s revival party" strip. The campaign related to a scandal in the House involving members taking expensive gifts from a Korean businessman. The Deseret News in Utah ran one anti-Reagan sequence all at once because they felt it was too personal of an attack. The subject of Polish jokes caused the strip to be pulled in Milwaukee in July Of all your examples above, I do not see a single one which would qualify as real "censorship", let alone a campaign by conservatives to have the strip censored. For the rest of the wording of that sentence, feel free to modify it. IIRC, This is one of the reasons the main reason? Does anybody have anything on this? Is it worth mentioning in this article? Have you looked on Doonesbury. Can we provide any citations for this? Blair, Walter, and Hamlin Hill. From Poor Richard to Doonesbury. From Poor Richard to Doonesbury -- it seems more likely that the author is characterising the history and scope of American humorists en masse as constituting the Great American Novel. And you can quote me. I wanted to see what the book contained, which is why I asked if anyone knew if a copy could be had. The "Great American Novel" section is indeed exclusively about the book by Roth. However, I was able to get some material regarding Doonesbury in , including the original source for the Gerald Ford quote. I thought it was Roland Burton Hedley, Jr. I suppose, if worded correctly, it could be actually worked into the article. However, the "III" appears on the official Doonesbury website. In April Doonesbury re-visited the circumstances where B. While I think it may be notable, I think we should wait until the plot cycle is further along to summarize it. Today, we have revealed for us the fact that B. This will turn out to be the pivotal moment of B. Why not wait a month or so? Next week it could all be a Bobby-Ewing-style dream. An APC Something else? My vote is a Humvee , based on the gun turret in the April 25th comic. I suggest that the section on the musical be moved to a new article. The description is incomplete anyway - the action of Act II is still missing from the article, save for the finale. Some of the material on that page is repetitive with this one, but I suppose that could be cleared up if necessary. Clinton as a floating waffle, Buchanan as a bomb, etc, etc. I know there were more -- anyone want to fill out that list? The amount of space devoted to it almost makes it seem like the only "characteristic style" Trudeau has is replacing politicians with symbols. Anyway the list that I can think of is 1. Bush, Point of light; 2. David Duke, Swastika; 3. Bill Clinton, levitating waffle; 4. Newt Gingrich, bomb; 5. Bush, originally a point of light like his dad, then a point of light with a cowboy hat, then an asterisk with a cowboy hat, then an asterisk with a roman helmet; 6. As a basic principle, you should avoid list-making in entries. Wikipedia is not a list repository. Lists of links, if warranted, should have their own entry: Lists stand-alone lists for detail. Instead of giving a list of items, the significant items should be mentioned naturally within the text. Which actually should also mean that the lists of primary and secondary characters should get forked off, eventually, into, say List of primary and secondary characters in Doonesbury. Listcraft which is just an essay, and has no real official standing. I like the separate, titled paragraph for the political icons. Just thought it was worth a mention. Washington Post Magazine article. The strip started in and Mike was in the workforce during the Reagan years. The strip underwent a significant change after Trudeau returned to it from a 22 month hiatus from January to October , during which he helped create a Doonesbury Broadway production. Copy and pasted from the Wikipedia article. Character section I decided that although it is good for the character list to have its own page, the Characters section in this article should at least say who the main characters are. Bush or any of his subordinates said anything about it? Bush is known for not giving his critics much ammunition, by not responding to them unlike his father--check out the back cover of, I think, "Read my Lips, Make my Day, Eat Quiche and Die! Thompson was quoted on one, and an Alabama newspaper on another. Every cartoon has its critics. I seem remember a few articles in different newspapers criticising it only for not being funny. Universal Press Syndicate template While I appreciate user Iguana nirvana14 making the Universal Press Syndicate template, I am not sure it is necessary -- none of these strips have much in common, nominally, other than the fact that the money for them comes from the same source. This is kind of like putting recording artists from the same record label on a template together -- ok, they have the same distributor, but what is unifying about the content? There is considerable printed material available on the strip -- not the least of which is the introductions to the collections -- and the website is the kind that I would expect to source even some of its own claims.

2: Doonesbury Deluxe: Selected Glances Askance: G. B. Trudeau: www.enganchecubano.com: Books

Doonesbury Deluxe has ratings and 5 reviews. In his fifth major Doonesbury anthology, Garry Trudeau gives us America in the '80s, from Star Wars and.

He seems to have jumped the plot forward during the break eg Mike and JJ got married however it may be that my books are misleading me. Any new information would be invaluable. Some of the original characters are based on real people at Yale of that era. Jim Andrews, of the Universal Press Syndicate, spotted the strip and syndicated it commercially in around In its early years Doonesbury was set almost entirely at the University never named at the time, but based on Yale and later referred to as Walden and at Walden commune, where many of the characters lived. Over twenty five years on Trudeau is still managing to produce strips which reflect how America is today, make strong points, and yet are still funny. Long may he continue! Originally from Tulsa, Oklahoma. Educated at the University, where the core of the Doonesbury cast met and lived at Walden Commune. Married JJ see below. Carried on living in the Commune after university but moved to New York after getting a job in an ad agency there where his first campaign was promoting Reagan to black voters! Also worked on the campaign to re-elect Lacey Davenport, to promote smoking to young "entry level" smokers, and for "Safe Whoopie" in the first pass by Trudeau on the AIDS message. He and JJ split up for a while when she changed his haircut the last straw but they got it back to together again. Later drifted apart again over Nichole, separated, and got make together when JJ had their child live on cable! He and JJ split again, for what looks like the last time, when she ran off with Zeke. Mike got custody of Alex. He has just started a relationship with Kim. Always pictured wearing a helmet be it football, army or LAPD. The token right winger in the early strips. Volunteered to go to Vietnam to avoid his term paper where he met Phred. Long time boyfriend of Boopsie. After University moved to L. Then joined the LAPD. After Trudeau killed off his only gay character Andy Lippincote Trudeau arranged for Mark to discover, after being visited in a dream by Andy, that he too was gay. Zonker Harris - the hippy His only real enthusiasms at University were drugs, tanning and talking to his houseplants who spoke back. With what was left bought a title, Viscount St. Joan Joanie Caucus - lawyer Picked up by Mike and Mark on their motorcycle combination when she was running away from her husband. Joined the commune and found herself. Was encouraged to go to law school. While at law school acted as campaign manager for her room mate Virginia who was standing for congress as a term project! Through this she met Rick Redfern, who was a reporter on the campaign, and who she later married and Lacey Davenport, who was the winning candidate. Her opening line was "Whee! Appeared nude in Playboy while at University. Went out to California as a starlet and has never quite made it. Mainly worked in teenflicks with typical casting being "third topless girl in shower". Caught the new age bug early so that Trudeau could have a dig at Shirley MacLaine. Channeller for a 21, year old warrior named Hunk Ra. Finally married DB the second time around BD did a runner the first time. Appeared a lot in the Walden days but not seen much since. Last major appearance was as the potential "other woman" for Mike at a Walden re-union, although Trudeau, in a fit of absent mindedness renamed her Nicole. JJ promptly announced she was pregnant. Bernie - the mad scientist Not seen for many years now but in the early years always good for a single strip or a short run where he would blow himself up, turn himself into a werewolf or go back in time. Recently he reappeared as the owner of a major league software house whose products rival Netscape. Like Thompson a drug user with style. She and Duke were actually married for a few weeks, when she went to Beijing at the time of the democracy protest, had to seek asylum at the US embassy, and could only be got out by marrying Duke. Moved with him to NY to work as a performance artist. Extremely bizarre stuff it was too. When Mike was unemployed she worked as a taxi driver to bring some money. In a moment of madness left Mike for Zeke. In the days when Mike had a job she was looked after by Zonker. Married her and worked for some months for "People" magazine before moving back to Washington Post when Joanie started working for Lacey. Tries very hard to be a modern father, and succeeds occasionally. Adopted by the Rosenthals. Her first words were "Big Mac". This series of strips was unusually as there was no connection between the Rosenthals and any other Doonesbury character. Kim cropped up again many years later during the debate about children of Asian being higher achievers and then disappeared again. Recently he and JJ met again and she ran off with him. Lacey Davenport - congresswoman Based on Millicent Fenwick, the former Republican congresswoman who died in Lacey is a perfect lady but tough as anything. Married to Dick, an ornithologist, after living in sin with him for 35 years. Lacey has sat on various committees over the years, giving Trudeau the perfect vehicle for discussing or highlighting issues which interest him. Re-elected on a write in vote. Ran for Congress against Lacey as her seminar project with Joanie as her campaign manager and Zonker as her media person. Re-appeared later and stood against Lacey on a drug free ticket. Scott Sloan - radical priest A character from the University years. Set up a coffeehouse for students and introduced himself as "the fighting young priest who can talk to the young". Dated Joanie for a while. Took over Walden as a refugee centre when Mike and JJ left. More recently founded his own church based at Walden. He has since cropped up as a TV reporter in many plot lines, often asking questions of real politicians. Usually seen sporting interesting headware. Has two phones and a fax in his car. Does group therapy by mobile phone. Comrade Phred - terrorist Met BD in Vietnam where they became firm friends, although being on opposite sides. Was involved in some good storylines about Cambodian refugees and then came to America as Vietnamese Ambassador to the UN. Sadly not seen for a long time now. He also claimed to have single handedly caused the recession through simple carelessness: Later worked in Wall Street, was convicted of fraud, was pardoned by Reagan and released. Unfortunately for her he was gay. Alice and Elmont - Washington homeless Alice first appeared as a character in a Duke storyline where she sold Duke the idea of doing a film of the life of John DeLorean. Re-appeared when Rick did a feature on the homeless in Washington. While she is very smart and streetwise Elmont is decidedly unhinged, although he does come out with some very funny lines. Alice and Elmont later got married in a bus station with Scott Sloan as priest in an attempt to force the government to house them. First appeared as the only rebel student in a morass of "pre-med flammers", his philosophy being "we were put here to party". Injured, but recovered and then spent some time working in a refugee camp. Originally invented by Mike when he was doing an ad campaign for a cigarette company aimed at recruiting young smokers, Mr Butts followed him around while he agonised about whether or not he should be doing that sort of work. Trudeau also used Mr Butts and Mr Jay a joint and the divine Miss N a packet of nicoteen chewing gum to make some points about the difference in treatment between cannabis and tobacco. Mr Butts then went to the Gulf so that Trudeau could have a dig at US cigarette companies who were distributing free smokes to the troops. Last seen distributing dope cookies to AIDS sufferers. Attacked by Trudeau for his mob connections. He was portrayed as weak, indecisive and bereft of his own ideas. Trudeau came up with a new way of drawing a real person: Bush was simply a disembodied voice. J Danforth "Danny" Quayle Inspired by his portrayal of Bush as a disembodied voice Trudeau made Quayle also be a disembodied voice, but with a feather attached. Donald Trump Unusually Trump was actually seen in Doonesbury strips, although initially only from the back. Trudeau followed him from his glory days to his fall, and involved him with several other Doonesbury characters including Duke and Honey, who worked on the "Trump Princess" and JJ, who painted murals on the ceilings of his bathrooms. Elvis Turned up on the "Trump Princess" he really had been captured by aliens. Now overweight and balding. The only problem turned out to be that Elvis now only sang John Denver material now.
