One Year Anniversary Give-away!! Written by Aunt Ruthie on October 28th, What a wonderful year it has been! My sister Sherry from Prairie Home got me started and boy am I glad she did! I feel like I know so many of you, and yet we have never met in person! And some of you I have met!.. As a homemaker of 30 years a wife and a mama of four two boys, two girls , I know the joys and the frustrations, the ups and downs of life, the bad hair days and worse! I feel like we are all on this ever important, adventurous, keeper-of-the-home journey, together. Recently, I just happened to stumble upon some comments about me on a chat-forum, it was surreal!like overhearing people talk about you! I was like, hey! What in the world? Okay, can I set the record straight !I am just a regular mom!.. I have to fight clutter, clean out closets, figure out what I want to make for dinner, empty the trash! I have bad hair days and struggle with PMS ! I want my home to be the happiest place on earth for my family!.. Feelings of love, a sense of belonging, comfort and joy! Oh, I had a few flops! It is such a scrumptious feeling of true womanhood to pull a bubbling, golden-crustied pie, hot from the oven, and set it on my counter to cool! One gal said that I talked too much about God. Jesus is my life, without Him, I am nothing. Jesus is everything wonderful. He is the reason joy-bells ring in my home. He gives me strength!courage! comfort! hope and a future! He lights my path. He is the lover of my soul! my hero! my rescuer! my healer. He is the best of what there is in life. And why on earth would I not share this great and spectacular news with all of you dear sweet girls in blogland? My goal is to share with you whatever I have learned and am still learning as a woman, a wife, a mother, a homemaker, and a friend, and to give you a glimpse inside my home and life through my blog, in hopes that you would find encouragement, and motivation to turn your heart toward home. So here is the good news! One of you gals is going to win my One Year Anniversary give-away! Here is what the package includes! A fabulous candle from the ever wonderful Warm Glow Candle Company! I picked this up in Indiana on my trip. The fragrance is Evening Mocha and is delicious! A string of Pearls, so you too can feel June Cleaver-ish, and to remind you how precious and beautiful you are! This next set of three books are ones that I co-authored with my sister-in-law Linda. Unfortunately, that was several years ago and are no longer in print. You can however, go on Amazon and find them very inexpensively. Please welcome her to blogland and tell her I sent you! Giving Love A Memory Take a peek inside these books!.. And last but not least! An adorable apron from Heavenly Hostess! A cute apron and a string of pearls, is just what a gal needs to perk up her day! I may share some of these ideas in a future post, so if you leave a comment, I will regard it as your permission to use it. November 8th will be the last day to enter this give-away. I will then put all of your names in my favorite mixing bowl and draw one name at random. The winner will be announced on my next post. Regarding the Snickerdoodle Recipe, or any cookie recipe do not melt the butter! It will make the cookies spread out thin and flat. I chop the butter into large chunks and cream it with the sugar in my Kitchen Aid mixer. Also make sure you chill the dough 20 minutes in freezer, or else the dough will be too sticky to handle. My story of moving to the Ozarks is in an earlier post!in the search engine at the top of my blog, type in Branson Missouri and scroll down toward the bottom to find out how we moved from California to Southern Missouri! My camera is a Sony, Cyber Shot 12x zoom, Model no. As long as pumpkins are not bruised, they should last the whole autumn season. Yes, please do add a link from your blog to mine!! I encourage you to add Warm Pie, Happy Home to your list of blog-reads. God Bless all of you Cutie-Pies!
