Army Emergency Relief, or AER, is a nonprofit organization aimed at providing emergency financial assistance to active and retired Soldiers and eligible family members. The theme for the AER annual campaign is "There for Those Who Serve," said Mary Cron, financial readiness manager at USAG Bavaria's Army Community Service.

This assessment will allow CARE to begin immediately assisting those affected by the disaster in the most effective way possible and follows the declaration of a state of national emergency by the Government of Indonesia and formal request for assistance. The key needs of the people in and around Palu city are clean water, shelter and proper sanitation. Electricity is still out and access to those affected has been extremely difficult due to landslides and flooding in the area. In a natural disaster of this scale, even finding clean water to drink can be a real challenge. The organization is preparing to respond by providing drinking water, emergency hygiene kits with buckets to collect water, soap, and sanitary napkins for women. Emergency family shelter kits including items such as tarpaulins, sleeping mats, blankets and solar light, will be provided to those who have lost their homes to allow them to survive while the long process of rebuilding begins. The government of Indonesia has estimated that some 65,000 homes have been damaged by the earthquake and tsunami in and around the populous city of Palu and Donggala District, with roads and sewage systems damaged and water supplies affected. Some boats were washed away quite far from the shore, and some hotels by the beach are severely damaged. As part of the assessment, CARE will focus on the specific impacts on women and girls who are often disproportionately affected in natural disasters of this type and are at increased risk of many types of sexual and gender-based violence. Their voices are often also the least heard when it comes to emergency needs and a say in the time of support they require. CARE has offices in the south of Sulawesi island in Makassar, where it has been operating for nearly 30 years. CARE has worked in Indonesia since 1980, initially focused on food distribution, small infrastructure projects, health, the environment, and water and sanitation. Its other core activities all focus on women and youth and include: Integrated Risk Management comprising resilience, food security and climate change; Economic Empowerment and leadership; and Water, Sanitation, and Hygiene. Founded in 1950, CARE is a leading humanitarian organization fighting global poverty. CARE has more than seven decades of experience helping people prepare for disasters, providing lifesaving assistance when a crisis hits, and helping communities recover after the emergency has passed. CARE places special focus on women and children who are often disproportionately affected by disasters. Last year, CARE worked in 94 countries to reach 80 million people, including more than 11 million through emergency response and humanitarian aid. CARE has been providing aid in Syria since 2011, and has reached more than 3 million people to date. Our work is focused on food security, livelihoods, shelter, water and sanitation, and psychosocial support for people in crisis. To learn more, visit www.care.org.

They have since had little news from their contacts, or of the fate of the hundreds of artists and artisans based in Port-au-Prince. The Meades were immediately joined in their plans for aid by several student members of the Vassar Haiti Project who are currently on campus during Winter Break. These will include monetary donations as well as material goods. Any monetary donations that are received by VHP will go directly to the artists and gallery owners, the extended Vassar Haiti Project family, in and around Port-au-Prince. In addition, Lila Meade suggested that people might also consider donations to three organizations: Partners in Health [http: The Vassar students, led by senior Anh Ngo, will be setting up boxes in dorms and buildings throughout the campus, for people to place emergency relief supplies in, that will then be shipped to the capital city for distribution from one of the galleries directly to the needy. Clothing is also needed in addition to the medical supplies, flashlights and batteries, dry food, and hygiene items. A full list of desired items is below. In addition, dry food, particularly powdered milk would be helpful. VHP would like to begin as soon as possible sending the supplies to Haiti. The public is welcome to drop off donations to the boxes in the Campus Center and Main Building, among other campus locations, but arrangements can also be made for pick-ups within the community, by emailing \[haitiproject@vassar.edu\]\(mailto:haitiproject@vassar.edu\). Here the community will be able to purchase a Haitian handcraft, which in turn supports the Vassar Haiti Project relief initiative, or could also donate funds towards the relief effort. Lila Meade said that there has been an amazing response by a Vassar alumna who had previously supported the Vassar Haiti Project.
