60 Methought I was enamored of an ass. TITANIA (waking up) Oberon, I've had such a strange dream! I dreamed I was in love with an ass.

How came these things to pass? O, how mine eyes do loathe his visage now! How did all this happen? Robin, take off this head. Titania, call for music, and strike the senses of all these five so that they seem more dead than sleeping. Music, ho, music, such as charmeth sleep! Music, such as charms sleep. Come, my Queen, take hands with me, 85 And rock the ground whereon these sleepers be. Come, my queen, hold hands with me, And rock the ground where these sleepers are. There the pairs of faithful lovers shall be Married, with Theseus, all in jollity. Fairy king, attend and mark; I do hear the morning lark. Fairy king, see and listen; I do hear the morning lark. We the globe can compass soon, Swifter than the wandering moon. We go around the globe, Swifter than the wandering moon. Come, my lord; and in our flight, Tell me how it came this night That I sleeping here was found With these mortals on the ground. Come, my lord; and, as we fly, Tell me how it happened this night That I was found here sleeping On the ground with these mortals. Uncouple in the western valley; let them go. Dispatch, I say, and find the forester. I never heard So musical a discord, such sweet thunder. I never heard Such gallant scolding; because, besides the groves, The skies, the fountains, every region near Seemed to have one mutual cry. I never heard So musical a noise, such sweet thunder. Judge when you hear. But, soft, what nymphs are these? My hounds are bred out of the Spartan kind, So jawed, so sandy-colored, and their heads are hung With ears that sweep along the ground; Crook-kneed and dew-covered like Thessaly bulls; Slow in pursuit, but matched in their barks like bells, Each one under the other. A cry more tuneable Was never called to, or cheered with a horn, In Crete, in Sparta, or in Thessaly. Judge it when you hear them. I wonder why they are here together. No doubt they rose up early to observe The rite of May; and, hearing our intent, Came here in grace of our solemnity. But speak, Egeus; is not this the day That Hermia should give answer of her choice? No doubt they got up early to observe The rites of May, and, hearing that we were too, Came here out of respect for our solemnity.

Donkey was one of many familiar British appellations for the animal, first recorded in the s, a diminutive of dun, a mealy coloured pony or donkey with dark legs, mane and cross on its withers. Everyone agrees, though on the amazing burdens, hours and patience of these working beasts. The donkey is shown as surviving on a browse of thistles, climbing nimbly and enduring a beating. Photos include donkeys at the beach, treading a water wheel, pulling a trap or carrying a lady side saddle. The Duchess of Cleveland. Not alone in the mountains of Spain or the seaweedy Aran islands were donkeys needed. Skipped lightly over is the fact that the Napoleonic Wars meant the British Isles saw compulsory mass purchase of horses and oats, and donkeys had to be imported from Spain to compensate the farmers, certainly in Ireland. This north London suburb provided donkeys by the thousands for costermongers, milk men and more, coming from Ireland and Wales mostly. They were kindly treated by a family, for they were the means of gaining livelihood. But dealers were only out for a profit on any animal. The accounts are detailed and date to s s. But in Spain and Belgium the good-sized jacks were needed to produce big strong mules so donkey breeding was very important. Mules were known to be occasionally fertile, females more so. There are four sizes of donkeys recognised. Colours include some not seen in horses, such as apricot on top and pale tummy. It was worshipped as being sacred to the great god Set, Lord of the Universe, the original head of the Egyptian pantheon, whose home was the South. His distinguishing mark was, unsurprisingly, long and pointed ears. Representations of these ears became the prototypes of divine and royal power, i. They form the power glyph: In that period the divinities worshipped were frequently symbolized by animals. Thus the Gnostic Demiurge engendered seven animal-headed angels to assist in governing the world -- the second with the head of an ass. Eliphaz Levi studied it very deeply because of its connection with ceremonial magic, his favorite subject; and he re-drew it, identifying it with Baphomet, the ass-headed idol of the Knights of the Temple. See Browning, The Ring and the Book. See the Alexamenos graffito in Rome, although the crucifixion was not depicted in Christian art until the sixth century, the graffito was scratched on plaster c. Significantly, the worship of the ass flourished at the same period as that of another domesticated animal the ox, or bull. There has been considerable related commentary on worship of the Golden Calf amongst the early Israelites following a practice they borrowed from the Egyptians Exodus, 32 What I cannot fathom is the association with Jesus, why would our attention be drawn to an ass? The ass was specifically associated with the story of Mary and her Child. Two asses are mentioned symbolically in the Gospel story, one coming from the north and bearing Mary to Bethlehem, and the other taking her down into Egypt. It was forbidden to yoke together an ass and an ox in the plough Deut. And yet they are together in the Nativity scene The ass is an unclean animal, because it does not chew the cud. Also, Jesus, who walks everywhere, rides one entering Jerusalem. Can anyone throw any light on this?
