Enduring Traditions Putting Treasured Words Into Meaningful Action The university's motto, "A measure of a Life is its Service," has been a part of SHSU's culture and tradition since President Harry Estill authorized its inscription on an Old Main chapel window a century ago.

The words, now engraved in stone, continue to inspire the campus community from Bearkat Plaza, where students often have their photographs taken to mark major milestones in their academic journey. The sentiment of these very words echoed throughout southeast Texas in August, when Hurricane Harvey slammed into the Texas coast, and members of the SHSU family from students to alumni came together and exemplified the motto in ways that are too numerous to count. When classes were cancelled due to the hurricane, the Bearkat community immediately sought out opportunities to help those who needed rescuing and were displaced by the flooding from the storm. I loaded my vehicle with as many boxes of shirts that it would hold and took them to the distribution center. It made me feel a little better knowing that I could do something from Huntsville that might benefit those affected in Houston. They collected water, canned goods, trash bags, blankets, towels, clothes, pet food, diapers, baby formula and bottles at Gibbs Ranch and utilized social media to provide an option for those who could not drop off items to electronically send in financial contributions. The two chapters then met in LaGrange, which was deeply affected by flooding from the Colorado River, to deliver the collected supplies and provide desperately-needed manpower. While they were there, they assisted flood victims by emptying storage units, cutting out drywall, and removing damaged insulation, flooring, baseboards, and ruined appliances. Luke Missionary Baptist Church to assist individuals with finding the items they needed. Teams were divided among five different sites where they cleaned out houses. Do you think anyone might be willing to help out? As they were completing work on her house, several players moved to other houses in the neighborhood to help those families. We were complete strangers when we arrived, but by the time we left, they were hugging us and telling us how much we meant to them. In addition, during down time and to help with morale, the responders were able to have a friendly game of volleyball in the coliseum, with members of the SHSU volleyball team furnishing homemade cookies and refreshments. Our guests were very appreciative of how they were treated while on campus, and they expressed their gratitude over and over. Although the homes in this area had initially survived Harvey, they flooded when the reservoirs had to be opened. Most of the homes damaged had six feet of water for several days before the waters receded and families were allowed to return to gut their homes and salvage whatever they could. Let this video be a reminder that you can use whatever gifts and resources, big or small, to bless someone else!

To be invited into the organization, students must first be admitted into the teacher education program and state that their desire is to continue in education. The students also pay a visit to the classroom to conduct a fun reading and art activity with the second graders, helping to promote a love for literacy. The one we do is based on a certain book, and one of the members dresses up as a character in the book and acts it out as the other member reads it aloud. Through this service project, more than 2, books have been given to children in the Huntsville area over the past nine years. Through this project, approximately 80 coats have been donated. The project has made such an impact that other chapters throughout the nation have now included the project as one of their service activities, partnering with other Head Start programs. Teaching Bearkats the power of helping others not only enhances the learning experience for students but can be transformative in improving quality of life for others beyond campus. For undocumented reasons, it was saved both times and still stands today in the Evans Complex garden, between the two buildings that make up the complex. In , university officials decided that the Evans Complex cedar tree was no longer visible enough, and the ceremony was moved to a large cedar in front of Old Main, where it was held for the next 14 years. This tree was a casualty to the fire that destroyed Old Main on Feb. In , real trees were replaced with an artificial tree in an act of preservation, which itself began to grow by adding a new base ring annually. Student organizations are also invited to decorate the tree with an ornament. Hot chocolate and cookies are always served. Tripod crossed the street and became a fixture of the campus. Here, he dominated the canine life of the campus for fourteen years. More than one campus Romeo has been stymied on the hill at night when Tripod came wandering onto the scene seeking affection from the girl friend. He could easily pick up a morsel or two from any of the cafeterias and more times than not, he became a welcomed guest. He could be seen just about anywhere on campus. He went to any special event and the football games. And if he got in the way, it was all right. One instance is famous at a football game. Tripod wandered too far onto Prichett Field during the game. The referee attempted to get him to return to the sidelines, which went unheeded by Tripod. Since Tripod had done this at other times, the football fans just laughed and waited for him to decide to return. No other dog stayed long on campus with Tripod around. He challenged vagabond mongrels, sometimes to his injury. But he was always looked after by his loyal fans which also included the faculty and the townspeople. Dan Rather ended his editorial by saying:

Editor, News from Hope College It started in a different era. Closer to home, the founding of Hope College in was still a living memory as, for that matter, was the founding of Holland. And, grueling though the experience is indeed, in part because it is grueling many participants compliment it as a highlight of their time at Hope. In fact, references to the Pull are absent entirely for the next several years. The waters are even muddied a bit by notes from two alumni who were students in and wrote years later to explain that the event originated then. Back in , Hope operated a high school. Actually, the high school predated the college itself Hope became a way for the local high school graduates to attend college close to home imagine traveling all the way to Rutgers in New Jersey, which at the time had ties to the Reformed Church, and was one likely alternative, in the s In the fall of , the sophomore class consisted of 27 men, while the freshman class had only 16 men and two women. When the signal was given the Freshmen gave a united pull, but their experienced opponents had established themselves so firmly that one of the knots in the rope gave way. When the rope had again been tied the tug was renewed. Neither side would yield. Each man had fortified himself to the utmost, only to find his strength equally matched. Finally, after a long and continued pull, the Freshmen through united heavings brought the Sophs foot by foot. In verse on the reverse it predicted: A shot rang out, the pull was on, It was sad as sad could be. The poetry reflected a generally good-natured hazing of freshmen, particularly by sophomores, that was common on college campuses in the United States at the time and for many decades afterward. The Pull was pay-back time. There was also a more tangible reward. The Pull that year ended in a draw after one hour and 45 minutes when two physicians present said that the strain was endangering the participants. The draw was the first of four in Pull history. The others were in although the sophomores won a tie-breaking basketball game , and The Pull was an extreme test of endurance. After three hours and 51 minutes, with the light failing and the health of the participants as in a concern, the event was called a tie. To help avoid such problems in the future, new rules were created for allowing the judges to declare a winner by measurement if neither side has claimed the rope after three hours. There are four cancellations on record: The Pull has experienced a variety of changes through the years. The current method of pulling lying along the rope for the duration is a style of recent decades. For example, the late Dr. Time less than five minutes. The win-loss record favors the sophomores and even-years. Neither, though, is winning the only thing. The only way to do it is to go beyond what you ever think you can do. Tradition without heart is only habit. It is a ceremony that has lost touch with its meaning. The Pull is one tradition that remains fresh. It finds its heart each year in the dedicated individuals who commit themselves to working together to do the impossible.

Kristine: Enduring Traditions is the ninth book in the Hidden Springs series and, up until a few months ago, was completely unplanned. But that's the way it works sometimes.

Besides becoming a global hub of outsourcing, Indian firms are spreading their wings globally through mergers and acquisitions. During the first four months of , Indian companies have bought 34 foreign companies for about U. This impressive development has been due to a growth in inputs capital and labour as well as factor productivity. By the year , India is expected to add about million to its labour pool at the rate of about 18 million a year, which is more than the entire labour force of Germany. This paper traces notable evidence of economic organisations and managerial ideas from ancient Indian sources with enduring traditions and considers them in the context of contemporary challenges. Early records of trade, from B. This treatise presented notions of the financial administration of the state, guiding principles for trade and commerce, as well as the management of people. These ideas were to be embedded in organisational thinking for centuries Rangarajan , Sihag Increasing trade, that included engagement with the Romans, led to widespread and systematic governance methods by A. During the next years, the first Indian empire, the Gupta Dynasty, encouraged the establishment of rules and regulations for managerial systems, and later from about A. Islam influenced many areas of trade and commerce. A further powerful effect on the managerial history of India was to be provided by the British system of corporate organisation for years. Clearly, the socio cultural roots of Indian heritage are diverse and have been drawn from multiple sources including ideas brought from other parts of the old world. Interestingly, these ideas were essentially secular even when they originated from religious bases. In the contemporary context, the Indian management mindscape continues to be influenced by the residual traces of ancient wisdom as it faces the complexities of global realities. One stream of holistic wisdom, identified as the Vedantic philosophy, pervades managerial behaviour at all levels of work organisations. This philosophical tradition has its roots in sacred texts from B. Such cultural based tradition and heritage can have a substantial impact on current managerial mindsets in terms of family bonding and mutuality of obligations. The caste system, which was recorded in the writings of the Greek Ambassador Megasthenes in the third century B. As the industry gets more organised, new players, emerging sectors and multinationals are dropping anchor, and a changing mindset in traditional companies makes space for HR firms rather than referrals for hiring, it adds. The industry has players that are segregated into recruitment , temporary staffing and executive search. While the permanent recruitment in India is estimated at Rs 3, crore, the search industry is pegged to have a market size of Rs crore to Rs crore. The search sector gets its boost from foreign players entering Indian markets and expanding into different geographies and industries. Companies that deal with the automobile, luxury , agricultural and food business that have entered India in the past few years have used search firms to expand further. The Economic Times, News Paper, 24 Jan, , One of the most significant areas of values and cultural practices has been the caste system. Traditionally, the caste system maintained social or organisational balance. Brahmins priests and teachers were at the apex, Kshatriya rulers and warriors , Vaishya merchants and managers and Shwdra artisans and workers occupied the lower levels. Even decades ago, a typical public enterprise department could be dominated by people belonging to a particular caste. The central government has decreed 15 per cent of recruitment is to be reserved for scheduled castes, and a further seven and half per cent for scheduled tribes. In addition, a further 27 per cent has been decreed for other backward castes. Faced with the challenge of responding to the rationale of Western ideas of organisation in the changing social and economic scenario of Indian organisation, practitioners are increasingly taking a broader and reflective perspective of human resource management HRM in India. This manuscript has three main parts. In the first part is provided an overview of important historical events and activity that has influenced contemporary managerial tenets, the second part of the manuscript describes the emerging contemporary Indian HRM practices and indicates some interesting challenges. Much of the second part is also summarised on four informative Figures. The concluding section, the third part of the manuscript, succinctly integrates the two preceding parts. The managerial ideologies in Indian dates back at least four centuries. Arthashastra written by the celebrated Indian scholar-practitioner Chanakya had three key areas of exploration, 1 public policy, 2 administration and utilisation of people, and 3 taxation and accounting principles Chatterjee Parallel to such pragmatic formulations, a deep rooted value system, drawn from the early Aryan thinking, called vedanta, deeply influenced the societal and institutional values in India. Overall, Indian collective culture had an interesting individualistic core while the civilisational values of duty to family, group and society was always very important while vedantic ideas nurtured an inner private sphere of individualism. Women breaking the glass ceiling in financial services, FMCG fast moving consumer goods and media sectors are a common sight today. But the picture is fast evolving in traditionally male-dominated industries too. The Indian alcohol industry is for the first time seeing women manage the show in some companies, an unthinkable idea five or 10 years ago. Twelve of the top 30 managers are women. The Economic Times, News Paper. The number of foreign immigrants living in India is steadily declining, but India continues to be among the 10 countries with the highest in-migration in the world. At the same time, India sends the fourth largest number of emigrants to other countries. In , there were 5. These numbers make India home to the ninth largest number of foreign-born people in the world. But this number has been in decline since post-Partition migration and an influx of refugees from Bangladesh following the war. By , this number was down to 6. It is estimated that both China and India will have a population of 1. Indeed, it is likely India will have million people of working age in , which well probably be about million more than in And by , it is expected India will have million more workers than China and about million more than the United States of America U. As has been pointed out by Meredith If it cannot better educate its children and create jobs for then once they reach working age, India faces a population time bomb: The nation will grow poorer and not richer, with hundred of millions of people stuck in poverty. With the retirement age being 55 to 58 years of age in most public sector organisations, Indian workplaces are dominated by youth. Increasing the retirement age in critical areas like universities, schools, hospitals, research institutions and public service is a topic of considerable current debate and agenda of political parties. The divergent view, that each society has an unique set of national nuances, which guide particular managerial beliefs and actions, is being challenged in Indian society. An emerging dominant perspective is the influence of globalisation on technological advancements, business management, education and communication infrastructures is leading to a converging effect on managerial mindsets and business behaviours. And when India embraced liberalisation and economic reform in the early s, dramatic changes were set in motion in terms of corporate mindsets and HRM practices as a result of global imperatives and accompanying changes in societal priorities. Indeed, the onset of a burgeoning competitive service sector compelled a demographic shift in worker educational status and heightened the demand for job relevant skills as well as regional diversity. Expectedly, there has been a marked shift towards valuing human resources HR in Indian organisations as they become increasingly strategy driven as opposed to the culture of the status quo. Accordingly, competitive advantage in industries like software services, pharmaceuticals, and biotechnology where India is seeking to assert global dominance , the significance of HRs is being emphasised. First, is the absence of the provision to recognise a union as a representative or agent for collective bargaining. Second, is the total dominance of government in regulating the industrial relations IR domain. Though it is relatively easy for members of a work organisation to be registered as a union under the law, it does not lead to the legal recognition by the employer in dispute resolution or bargaining process. This contention was made by Kuruvilla over a decade ago. Indian industrial relations have evolved from political roots and labour market demands. An unique feature of Indian IR has been the dominance of political parties sponsoring unions. Union membership has been the most popular breeding ground for politicians, and political leaders have enjoyed the use of union platforms. Such politicisation has generated conflicts and rivalry creating mayhem and the hurting of labour interest. Nevertheless, in spite of wage determination by central government boards, and ad hoc industrial awards, enterprise level bargaining has yielded positive outcomes. Interestingly, during the s in a period of the highest number of strikes, the registered number of unions grew fivefold. But a decade later profound economic and political reform movement saw a new direction in the trade union movement. A section of scholarly trade union leaders began to incorporate new global thinking in the union outlook. Since the s, the Indian industrial relations culture has been considerably impacted by the intensification of globalised markets. During this time and beyond, there has been a clear departure from traditional personnel management. The shift has not only been in the general tone, but in the substantive visions. Adjustment to the global imperatives of an emerging service sector, sunrise industries, and demographic shifts in competencies has given rise to new thinking. In spite of most of the Indian labour laws being entrenched in a world view that is very different to the current realities, and the obvious urgency for them to be updated to incorporate more flexible, competitive work systems, the built in rigidities are still proving a formidable obstacle. The most alarming issue in the HR and IR context is the lack of job opportunities outside urban areas where more than 70 per cent of the population lives. Aon Hewitt Employees in India seem to have a reason to cheer despite the prevailing economic uncertainties, as they could get pay hikes of as much as 20 per cent this year, as per two different salary surveys released today. As per the annual India Salary Increase Survey by global HR consultancy major Aon Hewitt, the employees at companies in India this year would get an average pay hike of . Another survey by job portal Naukri. Technical Services Recruitment and Retention There has been a dramatic shift in the expectations of employees in the organised and globally linked sectors of the economy. An unprecedented rise in the disposable income coupled with a declining dependency ratio, has led to young professionals becoming extremely mobile. The problem is critically evident in the off shoring industry where the average retention period of an employee is considered to be around six to eight months. And the retention of senior level executives is an additional challenge. Coming fiscal job offers in Indian software industry already top , The Indian software industry continues to add jobs at a fast clip despite the threat of a slowdown. The industry is estimated to close fiscal with an addition of around , jobs. For the coming fiscal, the industry has already made about , jobs offers on campus, Nasscom chairman Rajendra Pawar said. But revenues are growing faster than people added, indicating that the shift towards non-linearity in revenues is beginning to happen. Over the last many years, the Indian software companies have also added over 25, jobs in the US for local citizens. Chandrasekaran said the right way to look at these figures would be absolute numbers and not percentages because Indian talent was being hired by all companies, and even by industries outside of technology. One of the most concerning issues for HR managers in India is the high staff turnover. In industries like call centres, staff attrition is the single biggest issue. The industry has grown from zero employment to an employer of quarter of a million young English speaking, well educated and ambitious people. The point is well made by Slater , who wrote.

When Don Leonard attends a Mud Hens baseball game, he brings along his scorebook. And that can lead to a problem: What if, during the game, he needs to go to the concession stands to buy popcorn.

Crowned by a dome forty-two feet in diameter, the hotel featured panoramic views of the Ohio River and the Kentucky hills. Large, ornate, and expensive, the Burnet House catered to a well-to-do clientele, as shown by two menus, one reflecting a passing social custom, the other reminiscent of a historic event for which the hotel would be long remembered. It was about the same size as New Orleans, ranked fifth according to the census, followed in ascending order by Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and New York. Cincinnati, Ohio In its heyday, the Burnet House hosted many famous guests, including president-elect Abraham Lincoln who stayed there in on his way to Washington for the inauguration. In March , Generals Ulysses S. Grant and William T. He was to go for Lee and I was to go for Joe Johnston. That was his plan. It was the beginning of the end as Grant and I foresaw right here. Hayes After the war, the famous parlor became something of a shrine for Union veterans who gathered at the hotel for their reunions. One such banquet on February 6, was held by the Ohio chapter of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, a patriotic association that traced its beginnings back to the day that Lincoln died in , when three Union officers met to discuss forming an organization to help thwart future threats to the national government. The order eventually grew to over 8, members, a roster that included notable generals and flag officers, and five presidentsâ€”Grant, Hayes, Arthur, Harrison, and McKinley. In fact, one of the speakers at this banquet was former President Rutherford B. Hayes who was the City Solicitor in Cincinnati when the war broke out. Wounded several times, he earned a reputation for bravery in combat, rising to the rank of major general. By the time of this banquet, Hayes thought of the Legion as a social club, preserving the comradeship forged during war. Created by a local stationer named Peter G. Thomson, the bill of fare was placed in a miniature backpack of the type used by Union soldiers. This charming memento has a toy-like quality, perhaps causing many of them to have been surrendered to grandchildren, making their survival as historical artifacts all the more improbable. The banquet includes green turtle soup, sweetbread croquettes, and Canvasback duck, all served with fine wines and champagne. Cigars always appeared at the end of such dinners in the late-nineteenth century, causing clouds of smoke to be unleashed, its distinctive smell infusing even the best banquet rooms in the country with a lingering odor. The Burnet House was beginning to decline by the time of this banquet in , when its magnificent architecture was a remnant of a bygone era. Anthony stayed there in Still, some of the rooms were left unchanged, particularly the one where Lincoln slept, and the parlor where Grant and Sherman planned their campaigns, thereby ensuring that the hotel would remain a pilgrimage site. The old soldiers continued to meet at the Burnet, as did their male descendants after the organization was transformed into hereditary association, until the hotel was demolished in The population of Philadelphia adjusted to include the adjacent Spring Garden neighborhood, now officially part of the city.
