In other words, the regime wants to create A. Gramsci's 'new man'. The new man This new man should be a cool, cold, efficient goal-getter (literally and figuratively): 'The new man is schooling himself to scorn the old feelings glorified by the poets, by the muse of history herself.

Irshya In Buddhism, the term irshya is commonly translated as either envy or jealousy. Irshya is defined as a state of mind in which one is highly agitated to obtain wealth and honor for oneself, but unable to bear the excellence of others. The term mudita sympathetic joy is defined as taking joy in the good fortune of others. This virtue is considered the antidote to envy and the opposite of schadenfreude. In Christianity[ edit ] This subsection relies largely or entirely on a single source. Relevant discussion may be found on the talk page. Please help improve this article by introducing citations to additional sources. The snake and the dog are both symbols for envy. Envy is one of the Seven deadly sins in Roman Catholicism. Envy was regarded by Paul of Tarsus to be a sin of the flesh. Envy is, therefore, a sin deeply ingrained in human nature. In Hinduism , envy is considered a disastrous emotion. Hinduism maintains that anything which causes the mind to lose balance with itself leads to misery. This concept is put forth in the epic Mahabharata , wherein Duryodhana launches the Kurukshetra war out of envy of the perceived prosperity of his cousins. He is known to have remarked: The prosperity of the Pandavas cousins is burning me deeply! I cannot eat, sleep or live in the knowledge that they are better off than me! A Muslim should not allow his envy to inflict harm upon the envied person. It is not permissible for a Muslim to disassociate from his brother for more than three days such that they meet and one ignores the other, and the best of them is the one who initiates the salaam. This is permissible and is not called hasad. Rather, it is called ghibtah. YeHoVaH is jealous for His own. We are jealous when we want to keep for ourselves what belongs exclusively to us. Therefore we see the frightening permission God gave husbands who became jealous of their wives, to make them take a curse upon themselves, in case they had slept with another man while they belonged to their husband. Therefore He withdrew Himself from them, to their detriment: I shall set My jealousy against you and they will deal furiously with you. He told Moses to make a breastplate for Aaron the priest, to wear when he goes into the Most Holy Place. Somewhere else He says, I have your name engraved in the palm of My hand. For I will be to her a wall of fire all around; and the glory in her midst. Shakespeare mentions it also in The Merchant of Venice when Portia states: In the parable "Garden of Statues", [60] a character goes mad with envy because of all the attention his sculptor neighbor is getting.
