A follow-up to Barbara Smith's immensely popular earlier books about Alberta's ghosts, this volume features more tantalizing tales of paranormal events, from splashing specters at a city swimming pool to haunted homesteads in central Alberta. Over 80 spooky stories of haunted homes, theaters.

They are not scary but they are weird. They are not connected except that I was there at the time for both of them. It is a largish three story building of s vintage or so. The school board closed the school due to declining enrollment, and sold the property to the City of London, last summer. It now languishes in limbo until a final deci Traumatic Out Of Body Experience by jasmine08 This is a story of mine about an out of body experience that my grandfather had while I was sleeping over. It was a hot night in a small rural town outside of Montreal Qc, and I was walking home from hanging out with some friends who lived across town from me. One day we got chatting about ghosts and the paranormal and she said she had an awful experience once, it was about a man i The second I saw the house I fell in love; it had so much character, with its high ceilings and dark solid wood doors and paneling throughout. From the moment we moved in, I would get th Both homes that I spent the majority of my life in had a good amount of activity. However, it was the house my cousin grew up in in Hamilton, Ontario that had the most consistent and ongoing activity. To begin with, my aunt and I want to share my story regarding my childhood house. I suppose first I must explain that I grew up in a house built by my grandparents and father beside a mountain in The factory was built in around , I believe. There were strange swirling globes of light, odd sounds, smells of cooking, and even an ethereal figure of a woman, from the waist up only, that faded away after turning and looking at Ghost In My Bed by colettetenhouse This has happened two nights now. The first night I awoke to the feeling of something holding down my arms and legs, not being able to move. It finally let go. I felt like there was something still there. I then started to feel the hands walk slowly up my legs and hold them down aga It was beautifully hot, and humid. You can jog around the It was about or when the event happened. It was located in a neighbourhood that was built in and has been known to be the first project in North America. Anyway we lived on the 13th floor yes there was a 13th floor and everything In this story I will combine all the things that happened until we The funny thing is I now live in this building again with my fiance and my mom lives a couple floors down as well. My great-grandma lived two buildings ov I fell in love with the house at first sight; it felt like it was meant to be ours. But something really surprising happened here about a week ago. Some might consider the following as merely a coincidence but I find the odds of that being so, astonishingly small. While not strictly "ghostly" I believe that it was orchestrated by those not in the physical realm. This happened a couple years ago not exactly sure but it was the middle of the night, when everyone in the house was asleep just to Homemade Ouija Board by brooke So on August 18, , me and my friends were texting back and forth about random things, like we always did everyday. Then somehow in our conversation the topic of ghosts and demons came up. One thing in particular regarding ghosts and demons So we started joking around and sharing The place was new. Since I moved in with my 2 kids, I never had any problems. Until one day I decided to buy a Ouija board. I tried several times to use it but it never worked. So I decided to keep it in the closet. Backseat Driver by TwitchyMind Hey guys! This is my first entry. I have so many stories to share and they collect more and more every day. Indonesian Black Magic by 1emotecinebu I was reading another story here about black magic, which reminds me of an incident occurred almost 20 years ago. My family immigrated to Canada when I was 9. Years later, I was living with my mom, brother, grandma, and I. Come Here, Ruby 2 by GSDLady This story is a continuation of my submission entitled "Come Here, Ruby" regarding my experience hearing a disembodied female voice in the upstairs hallway calling my dog, Ruby, in the middle of the night. Ruby heard it too and reacted by quickly raising her head and wagging her tail after being rough I guess it all started at the age of 5ish with me chasing an invisible entity out of my house. In a moment, I jumped out of bed and took off toward the sounds I heard. I saw the front door open by itself and slam. One particularly unnerving experience that stands out from among the rest involves myself as a latch-key kid. Moments after arriving home from grade school each afternoon I would make a wild dash to the upstairs. It is simply a hand-me-down kind of horror experience of many others that I got to experience at one point of I grew up in that house since I was 9 years old and while it is not the main story, I did have one odd, repeated occurrence, that happened to me. First off let me say - supernatural experiences are not by any means uncommon in my family. Some of us welcome it, some of us ignore it, some of us think such sensitivity little more than a curse. My childhood story so closely resembles a recent posting, called "The Tree" that some may doubt that mine is an original story. I assure you that it is. Others may not think of it is as so here it is. My previous stories have been personal accounts; this tale however, consists of two events recounted by family members. Fort George was built So while I was laying there I could feel a big weight on my chest I lived in a semi-detached house with my father, mother, little sister and baby brother. We moved to that house 17 years ago, and everything was going great. I was as happy as I could have been, finally in a house with a backyard to play in, grass. Her clothes seemed a little dated, but not. It was all quite confusing and caught me totally off guard. She appeared to me to be around years old, maybe a little more. In , my wife and I were at the now discontinued One Minute Film Festival in Toronto, Ontario, where we had a couple of video entries up for public. I was 11 or 12 at the time. I remember being very happy and excited because it was our annual year end girl guide camp. The year end camp is when all the girl guide units in the city come together for a big weekend camp. At night we sleep with our unit but during the day with This submission is not the same level of encounter by far and some may even discount it completely. I will let you decide on that. This took place in Lo I wrote this shortly after it occurred so that I would not forget details of it later. I added the last paragraph today to complete Our daughter turned 2 at start of the year. This story takes place last summer when my family and I were vacationing at a beach house in Manitoba, about an hour away from where we live. Grandma rented this beach house for us and, truly, we had a great I was working nights with my mom.

2: Even More Ghost Stories of Alberta by Barbara Smith

This definitely wasn't as good as more ghost stories of Alberta, but it was definitely good with a lot of interesting ghost stories. I really like how they continued writing about the Firkins House in this book.

And I mean nobody! Now, my pal Albert was the agent in charge of selling that haunted house and he tried everything in his power to close a deal. But folks were too plumb scared to make an offer, even at rock-bottom prices. Finally, Albert lit on the notion of selling the house sight unseen to a rich city slicker from the States. Worked like a charm, too, until the day the city slicker decided he wanted to visit the property after all. It was a dark and rainy night, but early enough in the evening that the ghost might still be resting. At least, Albert hoped this was the case. Albert unlocked the front door, and it opened with an ominous creak. Albert swallowed nervously, but the city slicker just chuckled and said something about atmosphere. The two men entered a tall foyer absolutely festooned with dusty cobwebs. Immediately, the whole house rang with a sinister, unearthly chuckle. He backed up until he hit the front door and stood there with his hand on the knob. A bright light exploded into being at the top of the steps and quickly resolved into a sinister green head with flaming eyes, writhing hair, and fangs instead of teeth. The head opened its mouth and screamed; a terrible, high-pitched sound that scraped across the nerves. The city slicker was running along beside him. Albert and the city slicker looked over and saw the green head with flaming red eyes keeping pace with them as they raced down the street. The city slicker gave a screech that would have shamed a banshee and disappeared into the distance so fast there was no keeping up with him. The real estate agent shrieked even louder than the city slicker and ran away so fast that his shoes made sparks against the pavement. The next day, Albert quit his job and moved to Vancouver, where he spent the rest of his life working on a fishing boat. And the haunted house fell into ruin and was eventually torn down. The mountains evoke a similar feeling In fact, people around the world make the trek to Alberta to do a bit of ghost-hunting themselves. The Banff Springs Hotel, about an hour-and-a-half outside Calgary, is linked to thousands of apparent ghost sightings and strange happenings. Text of slideshow continues after the gallery

Haunted Alberta: Riley lost her baby, and died herself while giving birth. The old maternity ward is now a health resource centre, and surgery patients at the facility still claim to see Riley appear in different rooms and hallways holding her baby. When the investigation was over the room was redone and visitors to the hotel continued to use the room. Guests would wake up to hollow screams, flickering lights and bloody handprints on the mirrors. The doorway to the room was eventually sealed over and to this day staff at the hotel will not talk about the room with guests. Objects move around mysteriously and lights often turn on and off on their own. She was beaten as punishment. There are rumours of several unusual deaths taking place at the residence, including a young woman jumping to her death from the second storey and a man being gunned down on the porch. The first version is of a bride tripping on her wedding gown and falling head-first down a flight of stairs. The second version is of a bride whose dress caught fire on some nearby candles, causing her to fall to her death. To this day, people report seeing a woman in a wedding dress walking down the stairs of the hotel and also seeing a woman wearing a wedding dress that is on fire. In both sightings, the woman often vanishes into thin air.

Taber Hospital - Taber Paranormal activity at the Taber hospital became noticeable once the facility closed down. People began to call the suspected ghost "Maynard" and many believe Maynard made the move when they opened the new Taber hospital , and now haunts a different building.

Frank Slide - Crowsnest Pass In the spring of the face of Turtle Mountain came loose, causing a massive landslide and covering the town of Frank below. Seventy-six people were reported dead, some bodies never recovered from the rubble. People often report seeing mist and eerie apparitions when looking at the wreckage from the slide. Many think ghosts frequent the area because not all of the bodies were recovered and they are still looking for their loved ones.

Stirling Haunted Mansion - Stirling After moving into the Stirling House in , a family was so creeped out by the strange occurrences they decided not to fight the spirits, but instead join them and turned the historic home into a haunted house. According to the family, there are at least three ghosts living in the house - an older lady and gentleman as well as a mischievous teenage girl. Suggest a correction The Huffington Post Alberta.

Legislative Assembly of Alberta There must be more to ghosts than this Fifteen years ago, I wrote my first ever article about the paranormal. At the time, I was a journalism student in Edmonton and was freelancing for the now-defunct arts and entertainment magazine the Edmonton Bullet. I ended up interviewing Ron Hlady, a preservation technician at the historic and haunted downtown McKay Avenue School. The school is now a museum and archives run by the Edmonton Public School Board. After that, the young provincial government moved its sessions to cheaper digs until the current domed Legislature was built for it in At its peak, McKay Avenue School had students in , but that number declined steadily over time, leading to its closure in with only 53 students enrolled. Hlady told me about how objects mysteriously moved around and strange noises were heard at the school. In the late s, Hlady and a co-worker were setting up chairs on the top floor of the building. They both left the room for a few minutes and returned to find the chairs scattered about, although no one else was in the building at the time. Hlady also recalled how lights had been turned on and off mysteriously, water taps have been found running when they should have been turned off, and the alarms in the building have been triggered without reasonable explanation. I recollect Hlady pulling a ouija board off a shelf in his office, and telling me that he had been experimenting with it, and communicating with a spirit who claimed to be a worker who had accidentally fallen off the roof of the building during its construction or a renovation. Maybe it was just a figment of my imagination? Barbara Smith, author of Ghost Stories of Alberta, counted over a dozen spirits that are reputed to haunt the building. To this day, the McKay Avenue School is a prime destination for a local ghost walk. Edmonton Public Schools Archives and Museum One of the buildings I looked into never made it into my published article. Oh how the times have changed. Trendy downtown condos now stand in its place. The employees had been reporting strange things. One day a fry cook was almost injured when the open lid of the fryer he was using slammed down. On several occasions, the combination safe in the office was found to have opened with no plausible explanation as to why. Everyone was talking about a ghost. They were a bit freaked out by this, but also fascinated. After my first foray into allegedly haunted buildings, I remember feeling rather disappointed. By that time, I had read several books on ghosts and marvelled at the famous photographs of the Brown Lady or Tulip Staircase monks, was astonished by the spontaneous appearances of the faces of Belmez, the Enfield poltergeist, and the many adventures had by professional ghost hunter Peter Underwood in his books. I guess I had expected to hear reports of half-body apparitions floating through the halls and disappearing through closed doors, of eerie messages being scratched into walls, or at least get to hear some ghostly footsteps. Someone had told me around that time that ghosts preferred wet and damp environments, which seemed to explain to me why rainy England was so haunted and arid Alberta was not. Edmonton, I concluded at the time, barely had any ghosts, and the ghosts it did seem to have - well, I very much questioned whether they were ghosts at all. The maintenance man falling from the roof and then haunting the building sounded too fanciful to me, like an urban legend. And I thought there were just too many possible natural explanations for why these reported things happened. In hindsight after reading a great deal about ghostly phenomenon, my view has shifted. Now, when people tell me about a haunted school or institution, I think of its spacious rooms and tall windows that seem perfect for ghosts. With further investigation, no doubt natural causes could resolve some the mysteries that have been experienced in these haunted buildings I visited. But reading updated remarks of those of have since visited McKay Avenue School, I can definitely respect that there is something odd there - a sense of something unseen yet present. The fast food restaurant may no longer stand my Dad suggested perhaps the new condos are haunted in its absence , but McKay Avenue School sits waiting at the corner of 99th Avenue and th Street, waiting for open yet sceptical minds to explore its space. They are available from Lone Pine Publishing.

In "Campfire Stories of Western Canada," Barbara Smith, the author of twenty books of true ghost stories from across Canada, presents a creepy collection of tales tailor-made for your family's next foray into the British Columbia or Alberta wilderness.

Edmonton is a relatively young city in a young province. But we were wrong. From jilted ghost brides to materializing ventriloquist dolls, Edmonton has it all. In , the Paranormal Explorers group visited the building and said they witnessed powerless elevators moving on their own, heard footsteps on abandoned floors above and strange noises through their walkie talkies. Objects are said to move around mysteriously and lights often turn on and off on their own. Employee Ron Hlady claims to have used his Ouija board to communicate with a spirit who claims to be a worker who fell of the roof during construction and died Edmonton General Hospital shutterstock Despite being closed and unused for years, legend has it that the old B-wing of the hospital still smells like sick people. As well, the cries of children can be heard coming from the old pediatrics floor. A construction worker was killed while working in the basement of the hospital and is often reportedly seen in the spot where he died. To add to the list of paranormal sightings, a mother crying for her dead child wanders the halls of the hospital, but disappears when approached. To this day, employees and guests report flickering lights, sheets being tugged off beds in the middle of the night, and the sound of a body being dragged down the stairway. The Fairmont Hotel Macdonald George Rose via Getty Images Guests staying on the eight floor of this century-old hotel sometimes report the sound of galloping hooves in the hallways. The sound is believed to be the ghost of a horse that dropped dead during the foundation pour for the hotel. Guests have also reported visions of a man sitting in a wingback chair smoking a pipe. Night managers at the hotel have also reportedly taken calls from a sixth floor room, only to find it empty when they go to find out who made the call. The Firkins House - Fort Edmonton Park Fort Edmonton Park Although legends of hauntings at Firkins House have been largely debunked or refuted by staff and historians, there have been plenty of reports of a ventriloquist doll suddenly materializing in cupboards. On top of that, the ghost of a small boy wandering around has also been sighted, and heavy items falling off shelves for no reason. There have been reports of everything from phantom horse smells , to flickering lights and strange sounds. A ghost by the name of "Walt" has been spotted roaming around, moving props, creating cool breezes, and helping people up the stairs. Starr Hanson told the Edmonton Journal a guard and a prisoner warden roam the halls of this former RCMP detachment, moving artifacts and turning electronics on during the night. Wafts of pipe tobacco and licorice sometimes have also reported to come out of nowhere. More creepy stories for you to explore:

Banff Springs Hotel Ghost Stories! Please Email your stories or comments to mike taximike. Whatever they may think, these ghosts are alive and well, on this web page! I receive a lot of pictures that are clearly just dust on the lens. Some are even posted below. Please use your discretion when sending me photos. Guests and employees alike have an abundance of spooky stories to tell. Does the ghost of a former bellman still haunt the halls of the Banff Springs Hotel? Does a bride who died on her wedding day dance from beyond the grave? Two Northwest ghost hunters revealed mysterious photographs captured during their investigation. Many believe the hotel is haunted. Over the years, employees and guests have reported strange occurrences " from tables moving on their own to sightings of Sam McAuley, a bellman who died in . Sam loved the hotel so much, fellow bellman David Moberg remembers Sam retiring several times, but always returning to work at the hotel. Before his death in , he promised to haunt the hotel from beyond. Another possible visitor from the afterworld is the dancing bride. In , on her wedding day, a bride reportedly died when she fell down a staircase. A year later in the middle of the night, workers reported heard mysterious music and saw the eerie image in the Rob Roy dining room of a bride dancing alone. Recently, two Northwest paranormal investigators decided to find out if the hotel is indeed haunted. Authors of "The Haunted Reality" and other books " Dave Oester and Sharon Gill " have captured on film what they believe to be ghostly entities. Using special detection devices, they look for sudden changes in temperatures or electromagnetic fields that Dave says can indicate the presence of ghostly entities. A strange ray of light showed up on two pictures. Dave and Sharon believe it may be the face of Sam McAuley. They believe their photographs may be proof the Banff Springs is home to a bride from beyond and to a bellman who remains there in his afterlife. Note from Taxi Mike Mike, I worked 2 summers at the hotel in . A veteran housekeeper told me she had seen a wandering bride go in and out of vacant rooms on many occasions. A waiter told me he had seen chairs moving in the dining room by themselves. I recall one night walking through an employee tunnel and hearing steps behind me but no one was there. Sent from my BlackBerry. I stayed at the hotel for a few days at the end of February, . We were in a room on the 3rd floor. One night I woke up to someone playing with my feet. My vision is not the greatest without my contact lessons, so I did not see anyone. It sort of creeped me out. The next day someone in the group told us about the bride that died at the hotel and I relayed my story. Has anyone reported a ghost playing with their feet? No reports of foot fetish ghosts to my knowledge Hi Mike, Found your website while trying to find some information on the history surrounding the weird little wing we stayed in the last two nights at Banff Springs Hotel. You get off the regular elevator on the 9th floor and then have to go down a hall and nestled up against an outside wall is this older, small little elevator which you have to use to get to the 10th, 11th and 12th floors. I tell you this so you know it is most unlikely that anybody was walking past the room and trying the door repeatedly all night. Which is what happened, both of the nights we stayed on the 14th and 15th, all night long every few minutes there was the distinct sound of someone trying the door and finding it locked. My husband was already asleep before the noise started the first night. The noise did not happen at all during daylight hours and I forgot all about it until last night and it was actually my husband who noticed it first around midnight, the same time it started the night before. He commented on it and then started looking for something to put up against the door to stop it, assuming like me that it was a draft. This was different, this was distinctly the sound of someone trying the handle of the door and finding it locked. Take care, happy hunting! Second, as I continued reading this other story was posted about orbs on the 9th floor and they included pictures. The furniture is completely different I think they stayed there in so it was probably changed around at some point but it is definitely the same room as the picture on the wall is still the same and so is the carpet. Perhaps you can contact whoever sent you that story and ask them if they noticed the door being tried all night during their stay as well! Another interesting snippet from your website, these pictures with the orbs and the kids. They are taken on the 2nd level of Stephen Hall and that painting is actually quite unique. I agree with you given they are in exactly the same spot in both pictures it is highly likely something on the lens, however, who knows maybe it is Mr Van Horne continuing his cheeky streak from the after life lol. Amanda mike taximike. Hi Mike, I found your website when trying to research if anyone else has had an encounter like mine. I stayed at the Fairmont Banff last week for a work conference and did not do any research on the resort before my arrival. I had no idea that it is supposed to be haunted. I stayed in room and in the middle of my first night while in bed I became paralyzed by something taking over me. I was physically unable to move in my bed and was shown an image of a female in a white dress with candles on the ground around her standing in front of a mirror that she was touching. The mirror is what stood out the most to me because even though she was standing in front of it I could not see her face and it was disturbing. I finally felt a release and was able to move again and the vision was gone. Now having done some research I am unsure if it was the bride that passed or someone in room but my experience will stay with me. In fact, one of my first memories of the hotel was us being passed by a bellman in haste. The bellman I had seen was wearing a green jacket with gold embellishments. He was holding brown luggage when he literally raced right past us. When the concierge got back on the line she relayed his response to me. I would love to know if anyone had any old pictures of him in his work attire, that way I could find out if I really did see Sam! I went to Banff Springs this year, in June, with my mom, dad and my younger brother. I was there for three nights and the first night I feel asleep right away no problems. In the middle of the night I woke up and saw a man in all white, with white hair assumably the bellman Sam standing by my bed staring at me. I thought I was seeing something so I rubbed my eyes and looked up again. He was still looking at me but as soon as we made eye contact he sprinted out of the room. But out of the room towards the side with the window, instead of going through the door. I thought nothing of it because I thought I was just seeing things so I tried to fall back asleep with little luck. In the morning, at breakfast, I told my mom about what I had seen and she laughed and told me that the hotel is known for being haunted and that I should look it up. But I refused to look it up until I was home, I saw no other signs of the ghost for the rest of my trip. I just thought I would share my story and get your thoughts. Maddi mike taximike. Hi, I just stumbled upon your site and wanted to share something that happened to me. After the official tour from their coordinator we decided to loop back and explore a little on our own. Sure that I was going to fall I went to grab onto the closest thing to me and yelped but before I had a chance to make contact with anything I felt a pair of arms behind me grab my waist and pull me back onto balance. I definitely was pitched too far forward by that point to correct myself, and the force seemed to just set me back up straight without any over correction. HI Mike, Found your website. Especially interested in the ghost section, as you can tell I am a big ghost fan. I think I really enjoy the spookiness. You know what I mean. Anyways, I thought I would share with you my ghost story from the Banff Centre where I was attending a learning session to increase the level of my education and technical capabilities. We were working diligently in the main building on the third floor and there was an odd fog rolling in over the mountains. It looked similar to a cloud but more foggy, I immediately wondered what it smelt like. Not sure if you have ever been to the Banff Center but the view is phenomenal, I would highly recommend it to people who enjoy great views. Suddenly without warning, the door swung open and there was a chill that filled the air. I also rarely leave Canada so I am well acclimatized. This was easily one the more peculiar moments in my life, as I was interested and called out to the ghost but others were frightened. We had a few Asians in the room with us, I am not sure if you have ever met one before but they are easily startled. Anyways, not sure if this will be the scariest of ghost stories for your site but I am one thousand percent sure we had an experience with an entity. It would be fitting because that is a Mexican restaurant and my story involves Mexico, however I am not Mexican. I have attached a picture of the door, its glass so you can see the view I referred to earlier. Let me know if you would like a picture of me standing next to the door, I could send it to you. Jamal mike taximike. They just connected it to room
