Music Publishers Association of the United States Education and Advocacy Copying Under Copyright A Practical Guide to Making Copies under Copyright This outline is intended to be a guide to the major requirements of the Copyright Law as they apply to users of printed music, to inform them so that they may maintain proper standards of ethics, and help protect themselves, their schools, colleges and organizations from incurring liability or subjecting themselves to the possibility of being sued. It does NOT attempt to deal with all the issues covered by the legislation, nor does it provide answers to many of the legal questions. The purpose of this outline is to inform all users of printed music of the relevant basic provisions of the statute. Copyright Law, copyright owners have the exclusive right to print, publish, copy, and sell their protected works. The copyright owners of the books and music you purchase usually are indicated on those publications. The printed music you use reaches you as a result of the collaboration of a number of people: It is essential to the future of printed music that the Copyright Law be upheld by all. Composers, arrangers, publishers and dealers are losing a significant percentage of their income because of illegal photocopying. This loss of revenue ultimately means that less and less printed music is available on sale, short print runs mean higher prices for what is available, and dealers are no longer able to afford to carry large stocks of sheet music. Copyright owners have every right to prosecute offenders under the U. To date, there have been a notable number of court decisions against individuals, churches, colleges, and other institutions for violations of the Copyright Law—some involving substantial fines. The following are expressly prohibited: Copying to avoid purchase Copying music for any kind of performance note emergency exception below Copying without including copyright notice Copying to create anthologies or compilations Reproducing material designed to be consumable such as workbooks, standardized tests and answer sheets Charging students beyond the actual cost involved in making copies as permitted WHAT YOU CAN DO! What you can do without having secured prior permission: Emergency copying to replace purchased copies which for any reason are not available for an imminent performance provided purchased replacement copies shall be substituted in due course. The number of copies shall not exceed one copy per pupil. Printed copies which have been purchased may be edited OR simplified provided that the fundamental character of the work is not distorted or the lyrics, if any, altered or lyrics added if none exist. A single copy of recordings of performance by students may be made for evaluation or rehearsal purposes and may be retained by the educational institution or individual teacher. A single copy of a sound recording such as a tape, disc or cassette of copyrighted music may be made from sound recordings owned by an educational institution or an individual teacher for the purpose of constructing aural exercises or examinations and may be retained by the educational institution or individual teacher. This pertains only to the copyright of the music itself and not to any copyright which may exist in the sound recording. If you are in doubt and it is vital that you obtain the music, write directly to the publisher. Only the publisher or copyright owner has the right to confirm that a title is out-of-print. If a title is out of print, many publishers will make arrangements for you to obtain a copy. If you want to include copyrighted lyrics in a song sheet—arrange a copyrighted song for four baritone and kazoo—or make any special use of copyrighted music which the publisher cannot supply in regular published form, the magic word is—ASK. That makes no difference. Destroy any unauthorized photocopies immediately. Replace them with legal editions. Permission must be secured prior to any duplication. You must have the permission of the copyright owner. Once you have this information, write to the copyright owner. Permission for duplication, for any purpose whatsoever, must be secured from the copyright owner. Most publishers are agreeable, under special circumstances, to allow reproducing out-of-print items, but again, permission must be secured from the copyright owner prior to any duplication. The making of a transparency is a duplication, and permission must be secured from the copyright owner. Two permissions are necessary here. Making any arrangement is a duplication, and permission must be obtained from the copyright owner. They force the price of legal editions higher. They enrich the manufacturers of copying machines at the expense of composers, authors, publishers and music retailers. They risk embarrassment from professional colleagues who understand the law; and they risk fines and jail sentences if taken to court. Frankly, we cannot imagine what kind of school, church or professional musician would derive satisfaction from being a thief.
